Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—I object to the reading of any memorial at this time.

Mr. Howes requested the President to return to him the communication, which was done.

Mr. Howes—At the last meeting of the Council I felt it my duty to move that the nomination of Mr. Damrell be laid upon the table. I have yet to find out that Mr. Damrell can hold the office legally; and it has not yet been proved, and it has yet to be shown by any gentleman here, provided he can hold office legally, that he can do so to the satisfaction of the citizens of Boston. I intended to present to the Council a remonstrance against Mr. Damrell's confirmation, signed by some twenty-five or thirty leading architects and builders of the city, headed by Nathaniel Adams. They are men who know what the practical duties of the office are and who come in connection with it. They state emphatically that Mr. Damrell is not qualified for that place, and they are men upon whose judgment I can place the utmost reliance, and in whose judgment it would be well for the Council to place confidence. According to their statements Mr. Damrell's qualifications are not such, as a mechanic or builder, to fit him for the place in any sense of the word. He is only a carpenter in a small way, and, therefore, is not competent to oversee the erection of buildings from the street to the finish. That is not the kind of man to put in a place of that kind. Those are the sentiments of Mr. Damrell in his business capacity. It has been my misfortune to know Mr. Damrell in other capacities, and I should dislike to see him come back into City Hall. I think his entrance into City Hall would tend to demoralize one of the most useful departments. Mr. Damrell has been known to be one of the most active of politicians. As I stated a year ago, on the confirmation of another professional politician, I do not like to see professional politicians put into offices that require disinterestedness in the discharge of their duties. For that reason I hope the appointment will not be approved; because there are a hundred men in this city who could be induced to take this office and discharge the duty better than Mr. Damrell. However this motion may go, I shall present this memorial handed to me by those builders and architects. It is a usual course for the gentlemen known to be friendly to this nomination to attempt to choke off this information, and the Council should judge whether it is advisable to have the information or not. Generally it is considered advisable to have all the information possible.

Mr. Pratt of Ward 21—I move a suspension of the rule in order that the document presented by the gentleman from Ward 18 may be received at this time. It seems from the gentleman's statement that it contains information which we may well have before us in considering this question.

Mr. O'Donnell of Ward 7—The gentleman from Ward 18 doubts the legality of his Honor the Mayor's action in making this nomination, and last Thursday night he made the same remark. In view of that statement, his Honor sent to the City Solicitor for his opinion as to the legality of his action in making that appointment. I have that opinion here, and I wish to present it to the Council.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—I should like to ask which rule makes a suspension necessary in order that a paper preliminary to a subject under discussion in the Council should not be read. The only rule I see here bearing upon the point is Rule 41. [Mr. Thompson read the rule.] Now, I ask where the rule is that prevents that paper from being read?

Mr. Pratt—I believe if the gentleman will look—
Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—I hope the Chair will answer the gentleman's question before any further debate is allowed to go on.

Mr. Pratt—I claim the right to explain—
Mr. Flynn—I object to the gentleman's making any explanation.

The President—The gentleman from Ward 21 has the floor.

Mr. Pratt—The rule which prescribes the order of business is the one which the gentleman from Ward 9 has overlooked.

The President—The Chair thinks the document presented by the gentleman from Ward 18 could not be read without the consent of the Council.

The rule was declared suspended. Mr. Flynn of Ward 13 doubted the vote, and on his motion the yeas and nays were ordered on solving the doubt.

Mr. Flynn—If the gentleman will agree that the document which the gentleman from Ward 7 intended to present to the Council may be presented, and which was objected to by the gentleman from Ward 10, I will withdraw my objection.

Mr. Pratt—I raise the point that the gentleman is not talking to the question.

Mr. Flynn—I meant to withdraw my objection to the suspension of the rule.

Mr. Mowry of Ward 11 called for the special assignment, which the President ruled out of order, the yeas and nays having been ordered.

The rule was suspended—yeas 52, nays 16.

Yeas—Messrs. Barnard, Beeching, Blanchard, Blodgett, Brintnall, Brown, Burke, Cannon, Clarke, Coe, Crocker, Cross, Danforth, Day, Dee, Doherty, Duggan, Felt, Ham, Hibbard, Howes, Kelley (Ward 3), Morrill, Mowry, O'Conor, O'Donnell, Pearl, Perham, J. H. Pierce, O. H. Pierce, Pope, Pratt, Reed, J. B. Richardson, M. W. Richardson, Roach, Roberts, Ruffin, Sampson, Shepard, Smardon, Souther, Stone, Thompson, Thordike, Upham, Vose, Warren, E. R. Webster, G. B. Webster, Wilbur, Wolcott—52.

Nays—Messrs. Barry, Cox, Fagan, Fernald, D. A. Flynn, J. J. Flynn, Fraser, Jackson, Kelley (Ward 6), Kidney, Loughlin, McClusky, McDonald, McGaragle, Mullane, Nugent—16.

Absent or not voting—Messrs. Sibley, Spenceley—2.

Mr. Howes presented the following:

To the City Council of Boston—The undersigned, citizens, builders and taxpayers, interested in the building operations of the city, believing the inspection of buildings demands thorough mechanical skill and sound practical judgment, as well as mature experience; and believing the present nominee does not, in our opinion, possess those qualifications, respectfully petition your honorable body not to confirm said nomination: Nathaniel Adams, B. D. Whitcomb, William M. Rumery, Nathaniel Cummings, Ivory Bean, B. F. Prescott, J. J. McNutt, A. H. Caton, W. J. Wheeler, Creesy & Noyes, G. W. Pope, Benjamin H. Flanders, John S. Blair, George F. Fuller, George M. Harding, Hartwell & Tilden, George D. Rand, George B. Thayer, H. M. Stevenson, W. Whitney's Sons, Horace F. Burr, George F. Meacham, Morris Dorr, F. W. Kirby, Charles Whittier, George R. Clarke, Cummings & Sears, Ware & Van Brunt, W. T. Winslow.

On motion of Mr. Sampson of Ward 17, the rule was suspended, and Mr. O'Donnell presented the following:

On motion of Mr. Sampson, the rules were suspended, that the opinion of the City Solicitor offered by Mr. O'Donnell be read, and the same was read and is as follows:

CITY SOLICITOR'S OFFICE,
2 PEMBERTON SQUARE,
BOSTON, Nov. 8, 1877.

Dear Sir—In reply to your inquiry, I have to say that, in my opinion, the office of Inspector of Buildings in the city of Boston is made a permanent office by the statute which created it, namely, acts of 1871, chap. 280, and that successive appointments to that office may be made, in the manner provided by section 4 of that statute, at any and all times, when the office is vacant, either by the expiration of the term for which the Inspector was appointed or by other cause.

Yours truly,

J. P. HEALY.

Hon. F. O. PRINCE, Mayor, etc., etc., etc.

COMMERCIAL STREET.

Mr. Mowry of Ward 11 called up the special assignment for 8½ o'clock P. M. viz., the order for a loan of $1,000,000 to widen Commercial street.

On motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 13, the subject was further assigned to 8½ P. M. next Thursday.

INSPECTOR OF BUILDINGS—resumed.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—On the confirmation of John S. Damrell, I move the previous question.

Mr. Pratt—I raise the point of order that the intervening of the special order had the effect of laying the pending subject upon the table, and therefore the motion of the gentleman from Ward 13 is not in order.

The President—The Chair is of opinion that upon the conclusion of the special assignment the main question is resumed.

Mr. Burke—if the gentleman has no objection, I don't want to say anything why the previous question should not be put, but I should like to say a few words upon this question.

Mr. Flynn—Talk to the previous question.

Mr. Burke—Last Thursday evening I was one of the members who asked that this might be laid over for one week to give time to look into it properly. I do not rise to say anything against the gentleman who has been appointed. So far as I know he is qualified for the position. But there are other matters connected with this question which makes me take a different view of it from what, perhaps, most members of the Council do. From the circumstances which occurred at Blackstone square, and also at Mr. Cheney's theatre, I think I am justified in believing there is a great deal of enmity against Mr. Shaw, the present incumbent of the office, and I therefore believe that the change is being made for cause. I certainly look upon this as if Mr. Shaw is not about to be displaced either for incompetence or neglect, and in justice to myself and him I cannot support this nomination.

Mr. Crocker of Ward 9—I hope the previous question will not be ordered. This is a matter upon which we need all the information we can get. There is a good deal of dispute on the part of various persons as to the qualifications of Mr. Damrell, and now is the proper place to hear all that can be said for or against him for the place. In the first place it was not proper to endeavor to prevent us from hearing what the builders and architects say against his qualifications and the attempt of his friends to shut off all discussions as to his qualifications. It makes me think the gentlemen urging his appointment are afraid to have his qualifications discussed, and that he will suffer from a full investigation. It seems to be an unbecoming matter to attempt to hurry this thing through. So far as I know, there has been no obstruction or attempt to cause unnecessary delay. The gentlemen who oppose Mr. Damrell have merely desired to state the reasons why they think he is not qualified for the place. After considerable difficulty they have shown what certain builders and architects in the city think of his qualifications. I know not what other gentlemen may think, but it seems to me that this trying to carry the previous question does not show any conscious strength in their cause.

Mr. Thompson—I came here tonight without having my mind made up in regard to the nomination of Mr. Damrell; but the attempt to shut off discussion of the qualifications of an officer who is to hold a very important position for a long period of time seems to be almost unpardonable. We are here to look out for the interest of the city, and not for the interest of any man. We are bound to examine carefully every qualification of the man. It is not to be passed upon hurriedly, and I am anxious to hear the freest expression of opinion. I am frank to say I know very little about his qualifications. I had no connection with the City Hall when he was here, and never came in contact with him.

Mr. Wilbur of Ward 20—I hope the previous question will not be ordered. I believe it will be doing a great injustice to Mr. Damrell, and also to the petitioners, for I believe Mr. Damrell can stand the test of one or two weeks' investigation, and will gain more friends than he would to undertake to force this thing through. I came here with the expectation of voting for Mr. Damrell, but if I am to be forced to act against this petition I shall vote against confirmation.

Mr. Webster of Ward 3—I move to lay the matter on the table. I can only say that one week ago when I came here I thought I should vote for the confirmation. From my little knowledge of the gentleman it was my impression that it was a very good nomination. I was requested by a good many who objected to the nomination to allow it to lie upon the table for one week to allow a full and fair investigation on both sides. Under those circumstances I voted to lay it over. No fair man could object to that. I also voted to take it from the table tonight in order to have a complete investigation; but as I find the object not to be complete investigation, but to carry it through under gag law, and give no time for discussion, I hope we shall rescind our action and lay it upon the table. When the friends of Mr. Damrell stand up here, man fashion, and show that he is a practical mechanic and has had practical experience as a builder, then we can act intelligently. We have already heard from competent builders and architects that he is not a proper man for the place, and we have not heard one word as to his capacity as a builder or mechanic. I contend that the attempt to force this nomination through under such circumstances is a complete outrage. Although I voted to take it from the table, I hope it will be put back again and lie there till doomsday, unless the friends of Mr. Damrell show that he is competent for the place.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—This is only a part of the tactics of the opponents of Mr. Damrell to stave this nomination off.

Mr. Webster of Ward 3—Mr. President—

Mr. Flynn—I am addressing the Chair. The gentleman says the friends of Mr. Damrell have not explained his qualifications. I would say that by my motion we are debarred from saying anything as to his qualifications, from the fact that I moved the previous question. The only question that can be discussed now is whether the main question shall be ordered or not. Therefore, we have not had an opportunity to discuss the merits of Mr. Damrell, but only to discuss whether the question shall be put. As I said before, it is only a part of the tactics of the opponents of this appointment to stave it off for some time.

Mr. Howes of Ward 18—I trust the motion to lay on the table will prevail, after the exceedingly lucid statement by the gentleman from Ward 13 as to his reasons for not stating Mr. Damrell's qualifications, and that it will remain there until he or some one else can give us more information. The tactics that have not succeeded in South Boston should not succeed here, as to the methods of putting parties into power.

Mr. Pratt—I agree fully with what has been said by the gentlemen from Wards 20 and 3; where reasonable doubts exist, or where so short a time has been given to ascertain proper information in regard to this matter, we do not ask anything unfair or unheard-of when we ask for a week's delay before being required to vote upon this question. I shall certainly be very reluctant to vote against the confirmation of Mr. Damrell tonight, but I feel, under the circumstances, that I cannot vote in his favor. I have been approached, as I suppose many have here, by gentlemen on both sides of the question; some urging that he is a fit man for the place; others that he is not a proper man for the position; reliable gentlemen have stated that he is not a builder; others have urged that he is under censure by an investigating committee of the City Government, the same as Mr. Shaw is; and there are other reasons urged against his confirmation which I should like to investigate before voting. If forced to vote tonight I shall very reluctantly vote against it. As the gentlemen from Wards 3 and 18 have said, it is nothing but justice and fairness to allow it to lie upon the table till another night.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—The gentleman from Ward 13 is of so positive a character that—

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—I raise the point of order that the time for debate has expired.

The President—The time allowed for debate on the motion to lay on the table has not expired.

Mr. Flynn—The time for debate on the previous question.

Mr. Thompson—I am happy to say that—

Mr. Flynn—I raise the point of order that the time for debate has expired.

The President—The Chair rules that the time has not expired.

Mr. Thompson—The gentleman from Ward 13 is of so positive a character that he cannot conceive of a member not having made up his mind, and it would seem that he thinks the motive for so doing is dictated by some wrong mode of action.

Mr. Flynn—I would advise the gentleman not to say so.

Mr. Thompson—I did not say so. I would say to him, for one, that he must not judge other people by himself; that we are trying honestly and fairly to make up our minds, and are anxious to have information about this matter. It appears that two or three gentlemen came here with their minds made up, and were prepared to vote one way or the other on the evidence. I think that if Mr. Damrell is defeated it will be owing to the action of the gentleman from Ward 13. I think the gentleman should be careful not to have it happen. I don't want to see the nomination rejected unless there is good cause for doing so.

Mr. Crocker of Ward 9—I only wish to state my view of the delicious coolness of the gentleman from Ward 13 in getting up here and saying that he had not been able to extol the merits of Mr. Damrell by the moving of the previous question. If I am not mistaken he moved it himself, and it is cool in him to get up here and say that if it were not for the previous question he should be happy to give us all the information upon that subject. It is rather a cool proceeding.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—I only wish to inform the gentleman, who has been in the Council a number of years, that when the previous question is moved the merits of the main question cannot be debated by the person moving the previous question, and that I cannot get up here and give reasons for the confirmation because I moved the previous question. The other side of the house has the right to do it.

Mr. Mowry of Ward 11—I would ask if the gentleman could not withdraw the motion?

Mr. Flynn—Not at this time very well.

Mr. Ruffin of Ward 9—I think the motion for the previous question was unfortunately made, at a time when no discussion had been had here upon the main question. It had been partially opened by the presentation of a petition by the gentleman from Ward 18, which let in a flood of light upon one side of the question; but I believe no arguments have been made upon the other side. In making the motion for the previous question, it had the appearance of cutting off debate and preventing an expression of opinion. When I came into this chamber, my intention, from what I knew of Captain Damrell, was to support him. I don't know that I would change my opinion; but at this stage I could not vote for any motion that does not look for a complete and full investigation. If gentlemen of character and standing in the community have made serious accusations against him, I think it is a matter for serious reflection, and it is the duty of some one on the other side to make a counter explanation. If we go to the issue as it now stands, I think he will lose; and therefore I think the motion an unfortunate one, and if pressed will lose the vote for Captain Damrell. It certainly will lay the friends of Captain Damrell to the criticism that they are trying to push this thing through without any discussion or information. Therefore I think we had better let gentlemen free their minds and have a full discussion on one side or the other, and then we can vote intelligently.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—After the speech of my friend from Ward 9, I withdraw my motion for the previous question.

Mr. Howes—I object.

The President—The question is upon laying the subject on the table.

Mr. Flynn—I hope it will not be laid upon the table; and if it is not, I will withdraw the motion for the previous question and allow the freest discussion.

The motion to table was lost by a division—28 for, 33 against.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—I withdraw the motion for the previous question, in order that the gentlemen opposed to Mr. Damrell may have a chance to discuss the matter.

The question then came on confirmation.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—I don't see how we are going to try the question of Mr. Damrell's character very well. We have had presented a petition to which are affixed the names of men for whom I have very great respect, and I think the easiest way to come at this would be to have it referred to a special committee of five of the Common Council, with instructions to give a public hearing to those opposed and those in favor, and I make that motion.

Mr. McGaragle—I ask what we have to do with it. This man is appointed by the Mayor.

Mr. Kelley of Ward 3—I think it would be well to refer the whole business of the city to a special committee.

The motion for a special committee was lost.

Mr. Pratt moved to refer it to the Committee on Public Buildings on the part of the Common Council.

Mr. Wilbur—It don't seem to me that that is the proper committee to investigate the qualifications of the Inspector of Buildings. Therefore I move it be referred to the Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings.

Mr. Kelley of Ward 3—It seems to me that that is not a proper committee, being composed of mechanics. I move it be referred to the Finance Committee.

Mr. Clarke of Ward 22—It seems to me, sir, this ought to go to the Committee on Sewers.

Mr. Wilbur—It seems to me that the Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings is the very committee that it should be referred to. There are mechanics on it, and they are peculiarly qualified to know whether this man is competent for the position.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—It is very evident from the dilatory motions made by the opponents of Mr. Damrell that they intend to stave this matter off. I now move the previous question.

Mr. Webster of Ward 3—I still wish to renew my point in regard to the responsibility resting upon those who know Mr. Damrell to be a proper person to fill the bill. We have had very substantial reasons given by some twenty of the leading architects of Boston that they consider him unfit to fill the office. Now, unless there is some person in this Common Council willing to stand up and affirm that he knows him to be fit for it, by his record and ability, we should not take action. We have not yet had one person stand up and affirm that he knew he had the necessary experience and qualifications; and I say when no one present is willing to be responsible for his fitness, I repeat that it is an outrage to attempt to force it through.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—I only want to say that Mr. Damrell is so well known in Boston that any indorsement by his friends would be superfluous to what his ability is as a mechanic. So far as lawyers, hatters and dealers in boots and shoes are concerned, they may not be familiar with him; but the mechanics of Boston know him to be a practical and thorough mechanic.

Mr. Crocker—I am rather surprised at the readiness with which the gentleman turns around and calls for the previous question again, and the reason he gives for it. It turns out that two motions were made by two gentlemen, apparently opposed to Mr. Damrell, to have it referred to committees for investigation. It seems to me that is perfectly fair. An examination can be made better by a committee than by this Council. A gentleman proposed to refer it to a special committee, and that was voted down; and then a gentleman proposed to refer it to one of our regular committees; and then a gentleman who is in favor of Mr. Damrell proposed to send it to another committee, and then two other gentlemen, favoring Mr. Damrell, propose sending it to other committees, and the last two motions are dilatory. Then the gentleman from Ward 13 jumps up and says that because of this delay, which comes from his own side of the house, and which his friends have gotten up here, therefore we must have the previous question and no more investigation. It seems to me that the gentlemen favoring Mr. Damrell are ready to catch at straws to choke off all investigation in regard to Mr. Damrell's qualifications. I have been looking for the rule which prevents the gentleman from making an explanation.

Mr. Flynn—You ought to know; you are on the Committee on Rules and Orders.

The President—The gentleman from Ward 13 will address the Chair.

Mr. Crocker—I don't know any rules that are not here.

SALARIES FOR MEMBERS OF CITY GOVERNMENT.

On motion of Mr. Pratt of Ward 21 the special assignment for nine o'clock, viz., orders for petitions for act to allow members of the City Council salaries came up.

On motion of Mr. Thompson of Ward 9 the subject was specially assigned to 8½ P. M., two weeks from tonight.

Mr. Pratt explained that when he called for the special assignment he had not observed that the mover of the orders [Mr. Spenceley of Ward 19] was absent from the Council.

INSPECTOR OF BUILDINGS—resumed.

The discussion on the Inspector of Buildings was re-umed, the question being on ordering the main question.

Mr. Webster of Ward 3 moved to lay the whole matter on the table. The question was put; the President was in doubt, and on motion of Mr. Webster the yeas and nays were ordered, and the roll was called.

When the name of Mr. Fernald was called, he answered yes; Mr. Flynn of Ward 13 said no, and Mr. Fernald said no.

Mr. Howes of Ward 18—I raise the point of order that the gentleman from Ward 13 is voting for other people.

Mr. Flynn—I don't desire to insult the gentleman personally; but he is telling an untruth; it is false.

The President rapped to order, and the roll-call proceeded.

The motion to table was lost—yeas 27, nays 39:

Yeas—Messrs. Barnard, Beeching, Blodgett, Brown, Burke, Crocker, Danforth, Day, Doherty, Felt, Hibbard, Howes, Mowry, Pearl, Perham, J. H. Pierce, O. H. Pierce, Pope, Pratt, J. B. Richardson, Roberts, Shepard, Stone, Thorndike, Warren, E. R. Webster, G. B. Webster—27.

Nays—Messrs. Barry, Blanchard, Brintnall, Cannon, Clarke, Coe, Cox, Cross, Dee, Duggan, Fagan, Fernald, D. A. Flynn, J. J. Flynn, Fraser, Ham, Jackson, Kelley (Ward 3), Kelley (Ward 6), Kidney, Loughlin, McClusky, McDonald, McGarage, Mullane, Nugent, O'Connor, O'Donnell, Reed, M. W. Richardson, Roach, Ruffin, Sampson, Smardon, Souther, Thompson, Upham, Vose, Wilbur, Wolcott—40.

Absent or not voting—Messrs. Hiscock, Morrill, Sibley, Spenceley—4.

The question recurred on ordering the main question.

Mr. Thompson—It has been assumed by the gentleman from Ward 13, and my colleague from Ward 9, that in my motion to refer the subject to a special committee, I was actuated by my intention to oppose Mr. Damrell. I wish to state that I was not, but I was anxious to make up my mind as to the qualifications of the man. I will say now that my mind is made up and I shall vote against him any way. I hope the previous question will be ordered and that we shall come to a vote.

Mr. Crocker—I think the gentleman misunderstood me. I did not say that he made it in opposition to Mr. Damrell; but he had expressed some opposition to Mr. Damrell, and that motion might be charged to the opponents of Mr. Damrell, or to those somewhat inclined to oppose him. I think it a fair motion to refer it to a committee to inquire and report. I do not desire to make any dilatory motions; but if the matter had been discussed I should like to have asked some questions of the friends of Mr. Damrell. I should like to get answers to such questions, whether he ever built any buildings in his life, and what the nature of his business has been. Apparently we cannot get any information upon those points. I am not very particular, because it is as well to meet the matter now. It is fully as likely to be rejected now as under other circumstances.

Mr. Fagan of Ward 19—I can give the gentleman a little information. I know two large buildings he has put up; one on Blossom street and the large addition to the medical college at the South End. I am not acquainted with the gentleman personally, but I think in justice to him I should say that much. I think other gentlemen here know that he has put up buildings.

Mr. Pratt—I presume from the temper of the gentleman's friends, that the main question will be ordered and we shall be forced to vote. I have asked in all fairness for more time to consider this question before voting upon it, and I have been refused. In common with others I feel that upon such a question as this, where there is nothing suffering for the disposal of the question before us, we ask nothing unreasonable. I came here in no spirit of hostility to the nominee, and I don't propose to exhibit any such spirit. But if this question is forced upon us under the previous question, after these efforts to obtain more time, I shall certainly vote against confirmation.

Mr. Barnard of Ward 21—Several members seem to wish to have a little more time to investigate, and there seems to be a general disposition to lay it upon the table. In order to give the friends of Mr. Damrell time to come forward and bring some evidence as to his fitness, as they profess to believe they can, I move that the subject be specially assigned to next Thursday at 9 P. M. That will give friends and opponents of Mr. Damrell a week's time to examine and make themselves a little more familiar with the subject.

The Chair ruled the motion out of order, the time for discussing the previous question having expired.

The main question was ordered.

Mr. McDonald called for the yeas and nays.

Mr. Pratt moved that the question be taken by ballot, and the Chair ruled that the motion for the yeas and nays took precedence.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The nomination was confirmed—yeas 35, nays 31:

Yeas—Messrs. Barry, Blanchard, Brintnall, Cannon, Clarke, Cox, Cross, Dee, Doherty, Duggan, Fagan, Fernald, D. A. Flynn, J. J. Flynn, Fraser, Ham, Jackson, Kelley (Ward 3), Kelley (Ward 6), Kidney, Loughlin, McClusky, McDonald, McGarage, Mullane, Nugent, O'Connor, O'Donnell, Reed, Roach, Ruffin, Souther, Upham, Vose, Wilbur 35.

Nays—Messrs. Barnard, Beeching, Blodgett, Brown, Burke, Coe, Crocker, Danforth, Day, Felt, Hibbard, Howes, Mowry, Pearl, J. H. Pierce, O. H. Pierce, Pope, Pratt, J. B. Richardson, M. W. Richardson, Roberts, Sampson, Shepard, Smardon, Stone, Thompson, Thorndike, Warren, E. R. Webster, G. B. Webster, Wolcott—31.

Absent or not voting—Messrs. Hiscock, Morrill, Perham, Sibley, Spenceley—5.

STONY BROOK IMPROVEMENT.

A motion to reconsider the vote of reference ou order for Stony Brook improvement, by Mr. Coe, hoping it would not prevail, was lost.

INSPECTOR OF BUILDINGS AGAIN.

Mr. Howes moved to adjourn.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—I ask the gentleman to give way. I want to make a very important motion.

The motion to adjourn was lost by a division—24 for, 34 against.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—I move to reconsider the vote whereby the nomination of John S. Damrell was confirmed, hoping it will not prevail.

Mr. Pratt moved to lay on the table. Declared lost, and doubted by several members.

Mr. Pratt called for the yeas and nays, which were not ordered.

The resolution to table was lost—27 for, 33 against.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 16 moved the previous question.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—I hope that motion will not prevail. If the gentleman whose nomination has been confirmed is desirous of entering upon his office under these circumstances, then I pity him. Any man who has any self-respect, or any feeling of pride, which I hope he has, and who aspires to an office of this kind, will not desire to take an office under this city while not daring to have his character go before the people for one week in order to examine whether he is a fit man for the place. Gentlemen have come here tonight, and by a bare majority of three have forced this man upon the city for three years. For the gentleman's own sake I hope there will be found some few of those men here who voted for confirmation who would be willing to trust their candidate's character to the test of a week's investigation. There must be some friends of his here who cannot feel that such a bargain and sale is upon them to push it through, and I believe they will give the citizens of Boston a week to investigate the character of this man. I said truly that I came here this evening without any particular prepossessions against him. But I say now, that, from the action of his friends tonight, I don't believe he can be worthy of the place.

Mr. Pratt asked for, and the President ruled on the question whether the motion for the previous question was in order. He ruled that it was.

Mr. Coe—I hope this will lie over one week. I came here intending to vote for Mr. Damrell, and voted to take it from the table for that purpose; but I am not prepared to vote for him in the face and eyes of such a paper as has been presented here this evening. If it lies over a week, his friends will have an opportunity to present a paper which may have as much weight as the other. I move the Council now adjourn.

The motion to adjourn was declared carried. Mr. Flynn of Ward 13 doubted the vote; the Council divided—35 for, 31 against—and the President declared the Council adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Board of Aldermen

NOVEMBER 12, 1877.

SMALLPOX HOSPITAL.

The following was received from the Board of Health:

The undersigned respectfully represent that under the authority conferred by an order of the City Council approved Nov. 24, 1875, appropriating \$25,000 for the purpose of purchasing a suitable site and erecting a hospital for the treatment of contagious and infectious diseases, the Board of Health, after many fruitless efforts to obtain a lot of land both suitable and unobjectionable, succeeded in purchasing such a lot, containing about  $4\frac{1}{4}$  acres, situated on the southeasterly side of Canterbury street, for which the city paid the sum of \$9000, and assumed the taxes of the current year, amounting to \$34.06, making the total cost of the lot \$9034.06, and leaving of the sum appropriated for the erection of such a hospital the sum of \$15,965.94. That the City Architect having prepared plans for said hospital, which in his judgment could be erected for said last-named sum, and said plans having been approved, said Board of Health has proceeded to prepare the foundation and erect said hospital in conformity thereto. That an additional appropriation of about \$6500 will be required to fence said lot, to pay the Water Board for extending the water pipes to supply said hospital, to pay for heating the same and grading about it, and for the erection of a stable to be used in connection therewith. That there is an unexpended balance in the general appropriation for the Board of Health from which a transfer can be made for that purpose. Wherefore the undersigned respectfully pray that such transfer may be made.

For the Board of Health,

S. H. DURGIN,

Chairman.

Referred to Finance Committee. Sent down.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Alderman Burnham submitted the following:

The Joint Standing Committee on Fire Department, who were directed to ascertain and report the number of meetings held by the Board of Fire Commissioners during the past twelve months, the names of the absentees, if any, at such meetings, and the causes of their absences, would respectfully report as follows: The number of meetings held by the Board of Fire Commissioners during the twelve months ending Oct. 29, 1877, is 302. Commissioner Chamberlin was absent from thirteen meetings; five of these absences occurred during his summer vacation, and the other four were caused by his visiting New York on official business, for the purpose of making some examinations in the New York Fire Department. Commissioner Curtis was absent from fifty-six meetings, the causes of absence being as follows: In February and March Commissioner Curtis was confined to his bed at home by sickness, compelling his absence at eight meetings; he was also prevented from attending the meetings of Nov. 25, 1876, and Aug. 2, 1877, by sickness; his vacation covered by arrangement one day in each week from July 11 to Oct. 10, 1877, causing his absence at thirteen meetings; his absence from twenty-five meetings was unavoidable, on account of his attending to official business authorized and directed by the board; official examination of the fire-alarm telegraph work in Brighton required some of these absences, but nearly all of them were caused while he was testing the department hose at the fire boat, circumstances requiring these tests to be made at the usual hour of meeting of the commissioners. He was at the department office on all the days on which these twenty-five meetings took place, although not being able to be present at the meetings, as stated, and he was familiar with all business transacted by the board. The remaining eight absences of Commissioner Curtis are not specially accounted for in the records of the board. Commissioner Allen, whose term expired May 1, 1877, was absent at six meetings, the absence not being specially accounted for in the records. Commissioner Longley, who was appointed May 26, 1877, has been absent once on official business, and three times which are not specially accounted for in the records. The absences not specially accounted for in the records are not believed by the committee to signify inattention to official business. Accepted. Sent down.

STABLES.

Alderman Viles submitted reports from the Committee on Health on the part of the Board, recommending the granting of permits to erect and occupy stables by M. Lefstrom, 201 Centre street; Alden Bartlett, Green street, Ward 23; estate of James B. Dow, East Chester park; Michael H. Leonard, 301 Bennington street. Severally accepted.

THE ELECTION RETURNS.

Alderman Viles submitted the following:

The committee appointed to examine the returns of votes cast in the several wards of this city on the 6th instant for State and county officers and on the constitutional proposition, have attended to their duty, and report that the returns from the several wards are properly made and signed and the results of the election are correctly recorded in the book kept for that purpose. The committee report that within the time and in the manner provided by law they received requests for the reexaminations of the ballots cast for Senators in Wards 16, 13, 14, and 15. They accordingly recounted said ballots, and the results of their count are entered in the record aforesaid. The committee recommend that the usual certificates be signed and transmitted to the Secretary of the Commonwealth. The committee also report that they have received within the time and in the manner provided by law requests for the recount of the original ballots cast for Representatives to the General Court in Wards 8, 12, 15, 16, 17, 20 and 22; they therefore ask for further time in which to report the names of the Representatives chosen in this city.

ROXBURY CANAL.

Alderman Viles submitted the following (City Doc. 92):

The Joint Standing Committee on Health, to whom was referred the petition of J. H. Chadwick and others, that the nuisance in and about Roxbury Canal be abated, having considered the subject and given a hearing to the petitioners, beg leave to submit the following report:

In the year 1796 John Lowell, Increase Sumner, Thomas Williams, and others were incorporated as "the proprietors of Roxbury Canal," for the purpose of opening a communication by water upon the easterly side of the town of Roxbury to extend into Roxbury, and under their charter straightened and excavated a creek which ran through Lamb's Dam Farm and the marsh adjoining, and constructed what is known as Roxbury Canal.

The canal is bordered by wharves, occupied by dealers in coal and wood, lumber, and building materials. These wharves are accessible to vessels only at high water. At low water portions of the bottom of the canal are bare, and there is no current except such as is produced by the ebb and flow of the tide.

The canal receives the contents of three sewers, viz., the Albany-street sewer, which drains 213 acres and 1377 houses; the Chester-park sewer, which drains 58 acres and 835 houses; and the Concord-street sewer, which drains 55 acres and 543 houses; making a total of 326 acres and 2755 houses, the drainage of which is emptied into the canal. As a natural consequence, the accumulation of filth has produced a nuisance which is a source of great discomfort and annoyance not only to persons living in the immediate vicinity, but also to others who reside at a considerable distance from the canal.

At the hearing given by the committee, residents of houses situated on Washington and Newton streets complained that they were frequently compelled to close their windows on account of the effluvia arising from the canal. Physicians connected with both the City Hospital and the Homœopathic Hospital testified to the annoyance which is experienced at those institutions from the nauseous odors, and expressed the opinion that the recovery of patients was in some cases retarded thereby. It was also in evidence that the value of real estate in the vicinity of the canal is diminished by the nuisance. Property owners and residents in that section of the city are anxious to have the nuisance abated, while the only opposition comes from the occupants of wharves situated on the canal, who object to having their business injured.

The only complete remedy for the evil is to intercept the sewers which now empty into the canal, and carry the sewage to a new outlet in deep water, and to fill the canal with clean gravel. To divert the drainage alone will not be an effectual remedy, as the bed and surroundings of the canal are so completely saturated with filth that a long period would elapse before they would be purified by natural methods. Besides, as long as the canal remains open, it will continue to be a convenient receptacle for garbage and debris more or less offensive in character, and increasing in quantity with the growth of the neighborhood.

The necessary authority for abating the nuisance was granted by chapter 217 of the acts of 1877. By this act the city is authorized to purchase, or otherwise take, the lands and easements, with the buildings and other fixtures thereon, situated within the district bounded by Harrison avenue, the line of East Chester park extended to Swett street, Swett street and Northampton street. Within sixty days from the time it shall take the lands, the city is required to file in the office of the Registry of Deeds a description of the lands so taken; and the title of the lands and easements so taken shall then vest in the city of Boston. The city shall then forthwith raise the grade of the territory by filling up the same, including that portion of Roxbury Canal lying within the district, with good clean earth or gravel, and with reference to the complete drainage thereof. All lands and easements taken otherwise than by purchase must be taken within two years, and all grading and filling done within three years from the passage of the act. On and after the completion of the work the sewers and drains now discharging into Roxbury Canal must be discharged elsewhere, and cannot be discharged into any part of the canal. The city is authorized to lay and maintain railway tracks for the purpose of transporting earth and other material required to fill up the district.

The act further provides for the settlement of all claims on account of taking the lands, first by the appointment by the Supreme Court of three commissioners, who shall award and assess the value of the land at the time of taking, and the amount of damage, if any; and, secondly, by an appeal from the decision of the commissioners to a trial by jury at the bar of the Supreme Court.

The territory to be improved contains 329,466 square feet of land, including those portions of East Chester park and Albany street which are within its boundaries. The buildings upon it are all of wood, and consist mostly of coal and lumber sheds, stables and offices. It will not be necessary to raise the grade of the district. About 1000 feet in length of the canal will be filled up, and a sea wall built across the canal, on the line of East Chester park extended.

If the canal is filled up the city will be relieved of the cost of maintaining Albany-street Bridge. This bridge was constructed some twelve years since, and for temporary purposes. The bulkheads are of wood, and constant repairs are required. Its original cost was probably $10,000. A new structure will be required within three years, the cost of which would, with stone abutments and modern construction of bridge, be about $50,000.

The Superintendent of Sewers informs the committee that the cost of intercepting the sewers now discharging into the canal, and carrying them beyond the limits of the canal, as prescribed by the act, going over the Concord-street sewer, and discharging opposite Brookline street, through the yard of the Paving Department (not including the cost of any land or damages for going through the territory of the Paving Department), will be $50,000.

The total cost of the improvement is estimated as follows:

Value of estates to be taken.....	$305,900.00
Cost of filling canal.....	26,400.00
Cost of sea wall.....	9,000.00
Cost of intercepting sewer to outlet opposite Brookline street.....	50,000.00
Total.....	$391,300.00

The value of the fee in the dock (if any there be) is not included in the above estimate. The value of the estates is taken from the Assessors' valuation of 1877.

The committee are of the opinion that the existence of what is nothing more or less than an open sewer within the limits of the city, and immediately adjoining a thickly populated district, is a nuisance which should be abated, and they believe that its continuance cannot fail to be prejudicial to the health of the community.

They would, therefore, respectfully recommend the passage of the following order of taking.

CLINTON VILES.
CHOATE BURNHAM.
EDWIN SIBLEY.
JAMES J. FLYNN.
ROBERT COX.

Whereas, By an act of the Legislature of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, passed the eleventh day of May, A. D. 1877, entitled "An act to enable the city of Boston to abate a nuisance existing therein, and for the preservation of the public health of said city, and for other purposes," it is provided, among other things, as follows, viz.:

Section 1. The city of Boston may purchase or otherwise take for the purpose of abating the nuisance now existing in and about the Roxbury Canal, so called, the lands and easements with the buildings and other fixtures thereon situate and lying within the district hereinafter bounded and described, to wit, commencing at the junction of Harrison avenue and the northerly line of East Chester park, and thence running by said northerly line of East Chester park, produced in an easterly direction, across the said Roxbury Canal to Swett street; thence by the northerly line of Swett street to Northampton street; thence by the northerly line of Northampton street to Harrison avenue; and thence by the easterly line of Harrison avenue to the point of beginning.

Said city shall, within sixty days from the time it shall take said lands or easements, file in the office of the Registry of Deeds for the county of Suffolk a description of the lands or easements so taken as certain as is required in a common conveyance of land, and a statement that the same are taken pursuant to the provisions of this act; which said description and statement shall be signed by the Mayor of said city, and the title to all lands and easements so taken shall vest in the city of Boston; and, if any party whose land or easement is taken shall agree with the said city upon the damage done to him by the said taking, the same shall be paid to him by the said city forthwith. And it shall be the duty of the city of Boston forthwith to raise the grade of the territory so purchased or taken by filling up the same, including that portion of the Roxbury Canal lying within the described district, with good, clean earth or gravel, and with reference to a complete drainage thereof, so as to abate the present nuisance and to preserve the health of the city.

Now, therefore, know all men by these presents, That the said city of Boston, by virtue of the power and authority in said act given, and pursuant to the provisions thereof, has taken, and by these presents does take, the following-described parcel of land, situated within the limits described in said act, bounded and described as follows, viz.: Commencing at the junction of Harrison avenue and the northerly line of East Chester park; and thence running by said northerly line of East Chester park, produced in an easterly direction across the said Roxbury Canal to Swett street; thence by the northerly line of Swett street to Northampton street, thence by the northerly line of Northampton street to Harrison avenue; and thence by the easterly line of Harrison avenue to the point of beginning.

The said parcel of land is shown on a plan made by Thomas W. Davis, City Surveyor, bearing the date July 24, 1877, and deposited in the office of the said City Surveyor.

To have and to hold the same to the said city of Boston, its successors and assigns, to its and their sole use and behoof forever, agreeably to the provisions of the said act.

I, Frederick O. Prince, Mayor of the city of Boston, do hereby approve of the foregoing instruments, and of the action of the City Council in the premises; and in accordance with the provisions of the act referred to in said instrument, I hereby certify that the lands described in said instrument were, and are, taken pursuant to the provisions of the said act.

In witness whereof I have caused the common seal of the City of Boston to be hereto affixed, and have hereto set my hand as Mayor, as aforesaid, this _____ day of _____, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-

Alderman Viles—It is well known that a petition came in in the earlier part of the season in relation to abating the nuisance made by the Roxbury Canal. The Joint Committee on Health gave one public hearing, which was largely attended by many of the best citizens of the South End. They certainly made out a case that the canal was an unmitigated nuisance. The committee have visited the location, and have gone into the price of land and filling and all the details. The expense will be about $400,000, but as it is in the heart of the city, in the midst of a dense population, in the best section of the city, the committee recommend that the improvement be made. By the act, the city takes the land, and after the work is done we don't think it will prove a great expense to the city. I move that the report be referred to the Committee on Finance.

Referred to the Committee on Finance. Sent down.

HORSE RAILROAD LOCATIONS.

Middlesex Railroad. Among the reports and orders from the Committee on Paving, submitted by Alderman Robinson, was the following:

The Committee on Paving, to whom was recommended the petition of the Middlesex Railroad Company for leave to construct a turnout track on South street at the Old Colony Railroad depot, respectfully recommend the passage of the accompanying order.

For the committee.

R. W. ROBINSON, Chairman.

Ordered, That in addition to the rights heretofore granted to the Middlesex Railroad Company to lay down tracks in several of the streets of the city of Boston, said company shall have the right to reconstruct a turnout track on South street, near the northwesterly corner of the Old Colony Railroad station, and to connect the same by curved tracks with the tracks of the South Boston Railroad Company on Kneeland street.

The tracks located by this order being shown on a plan drawn by Messrs. Barbour & Hodges, civil engineers, dated June 1, A. D. 1877, and deposited in the office of the Superintendent of Streets.

The right to lay down the tracks located by this order is upon the condition that the whole work of laying down said track, the form of rail to be used, and the kind and quality of material used in paving said track, shall be under the direction and to the satisfaction of the Committee on Paving and the Superintendent of Streets, and shall be approved by them. Also upon condition that the said Middlesex Railroad Company shall accept this order of location and shall agree in writing to comply with the conditions therein contained, and shall file said acceptance and agreement with the City Clerk within thirty days of the date of its passage, otherwise it shall be null and void.

Order read twice and passed.

Metropolitan Railroad. On motion of Alderman Robinson, the Board took from the table the majority and minority reports of Committee on Paving on petition of Metropolitan Railroad Company for additional locations in Washington, Milk and other streets.

Alderman Robinson—As the Board of Aldermen are aware, the Metropolitan Railroad Company petitioned for a double track from Dover street to Summer, and the committee, after full investigation, reported an order allowing them to lay down a track from Temple place to Summer street. The other turnouts and connections are incidental to the laying down of that piece of track. There is a majority and a minority report. All the difference between them is simply that the majority report allows them to go through Devonshire street direct to New Washington street and Haymarket square.

The Mayor interrupted Alderman Robinson, and read a communication from the president of the Metropolitan Railroad stating that they had concluded that the location proposed to be granted in Congress street was less objectionable to the abutters and better on the whole for the uses of the company.

Alderman Robinson—The reason I reported an order for a location in Congress street—and the Metropolitan Railroad have seen fit to take the same view since I reported the order—is that business is done in these dull times very much by express wagons which go direct from Summer street through Devonshire street to New Washington street and the northern depots; and from the northern depots to the southern depots in the same way. I thought it looked less objectionable to go through Congress street, landing passengers at the Post Office door precisely the same as if they went down on the other side; and if Exchange street is widened it will be almost a straight line through from Congress street to New Washington street. Those are some of the reasons which made me differ from my associates on the committee; and as the petition was for either location, either can be granted. Each member of the Board of Aldermen understands this matter, and knows the location just as well as the other members of the Paving Committee and myself.

Alderman Clark—I believe this is a pretty important subject for this present Board of Aldermen to determine. The Committee on Paving are not unanimous in regard to this subject. Majority and minority reports come in, one authorizing the Metropolitan Railroad to run its cars down Washington and Milk streets to Devonshire street, and through Devonshire street, across State street, to connect with the tracks already laid in New Washington street. The minority report recommends that, instead of that, they be allowed to go through Post Office square and Congress street, up State street and out Devonshire street to New Washington street. Since the last meeting the Metropolitan Railroad have come to the conclusion that they are undetermined which route is best for them, and come in with a communication saying they have decided that they were mistaken in what they asked for on the previous petition, and now, on the whole, they think it better to go through Congress street and up State street, in accordance with the views of the minority of the committee. That is precisely as it stands today. By this route they expect to relieve the present blockade on Tremont street; but it seems to me it is an attempt to do so by blocking up Washington street. It is nothing more or less; and you cannot get the remedy in the proposition made by the Committee on Paving and the request of the Metropolitan Railroad. If you take a certain number of cars off Tremont street and put them on the already crowded Washington street, you create a blockade on Washington street, which would be infinitely worse than a blockade on Tremont street. There are other ways of relieving this blockade on Tremont street. There is no question about it. The horse railroad presidents understand it, and can produce a programme that will remedy this blockade, by consultation with the Board of Aldermen or the Committee on Paving; and that is by continuing the double track on Tremont street to Scollay square, where no one doing business will complain of it; and then let all the cars that come up to Temple place make the circle at the square, and it will relieve the crossing of tracks at Temple place. It is a very simple thing; instead of making Tremont street a stable for the shifting of horses, they can make the circle by going to Scollay square, where they will interfere with no one. That is one way to relieve it to a great extent. Another is to take off a portion of the cars that now come down Columbus avenue, averaging five to eight passengers apiece; take off a sufficient number from both the Metropolitan and Highland roads and leave on sufficient to accommodate the people, and thereby you relieve the blockade on Tremont street. I believe that it is a subject of too much importance for this Board of Aldermen to decide upon in any hasty manner. If we are going to allow the Metropolitan Railroad to run its cars in the business part of the city and through streets that we laid out at a cost of a million dollars, I think the subject should receive more attention than we have had, or will have, time to give it. There has a petition come here to have the tracks already laid in Washington street taken up, and on that there is to be a public hearing. I understand that the law is that if tracks have been laid a year, and parties petition to have them taken up, they have to be heard just the same as a railroad company petitioning for a location. The Metropolitan Railroad Company have changed their mind, and instead of going through Devonshire street they want to go out through Congress street. The Committee on Paving are not unanimous. I believe it is of too much importance for us to act upon so hastily, and I move that the whole subject be referred to the next City Government.

Alderman Slade—In the early part of the season an order was passed for the Committee on Paving to see if something could be done to relieve Tremont street. They have had that matter under consideration all summer and given a good deal of careful attention and thought to it. We have, I think, been pretty faithful in trying to solve the difficulty, so that the riding public, the owners of stores and the railroad companies would all be satisfied. But that is an impossibility. This is not altogether a request of the Metropolitan Railroad. The Paving Committee requested the presidents of all the railroads to meet us in consultation and see if we could not devise some plan by which this whole difficulty might be got over. The difference between the majority and minority reports does not amount to a great deal; still, the majority believe that it is the best for the road, if the track is laid at all, to go through Devonshire street, because it can go very close to the sidewalk in front of the post office; and on Devonshire street there are no stores scarcely, the buildings being principally occupied for offices, and the cars will go across State street very close to the Old State House, making a route which seemed to the majority of the committee as the most feasible. The Congress-street route carries the cars farther down, and when they get into State street it seemed to us that it made a pretty bad route, and would be an annoyance in State street; whereas, if they went through Devonshire street, it would be very little. The majority of the committee believe that the Devonshire-street route is the one to take. I, for one, believe that it is the route to take if either is given, particularly on account of the trouble it would make in State street, and the pretty short turn the cars would have to make coming out of Congress street to get into Devonshire street. The President of the Metropolitan Railroad agreed that Devonshire street was the better route, but since then I have understood he has expressed himself otherwise, he very likely having an eye to business by extending his road farther down into the city. Now, so far as this blockade on Washington street is concerned, it is simply this: All the cars that now come down Washington street go up to Temple place; and by laying a double track from Summer street you will take from Tremont street those that go to East Boston and a very large proportion of the depot cars. I think the presidents of the roads calculated it would take somewhere between two and three hundred trips off Tremont street. I don't think there will be any blockade on Washington street with the cars going straight along, as there is in Tremont street. The committee have looked at every route proposed, and tried to get another thoroughfare through the city where everybody wants to go. I don't believe there is any other way that will be as satisfactory as this, and that any one can suggest anything that will answer the public wishes like this. I am very sorry the committee were called upon to make any report at all. I am sorry that Tremont street is so blockaded as it is. Almost every day you see in the papers something about the block on Tremont street, and that something must be done to get the cars off there. I don't know what the South Boston cars want to go on Tremont street for, except those that go to the depots, for nine out of ten people they bring get out to go down to Washington street, except perhaps in the evening, when they may go around. I suppose they are waiting for the Board of Aldermen to pass some such order as that. What we want is something that will relieve Tremont street, and it seems to me this will do it. I don't know why they need be so scared about the blockade on Washington street. At the same time I am not particular about it, and if the public are satisfied I am; and if this Board will do anything to satisfy the public I shall be glad to add my voice to it. I know that a large firm on Washington street is very much hindered; but whether that should stand in the way I don't know. The question is whether this report of the majority of the committee will be satisfactory to the public generally.

Alderman Robinson—As the Alderman has just said, the Paving Committee have been exercised almost all through this season relative to this blockade on Tremont street. Your Honor and the Board will recall that some two months ago I made some remarks here that would seem to do away with the necessity of laying down tracks on Washington street, and which did not seem to meet the approbation of the Board, and have quietly lain among the archives of the Board. They were to the effect that the Middlesex and South Boston roads should come up Washington street and go down Milk street and turn into Hawley street, which would land their passengers in the centre of the retail trade, and then they should go through Summer and Chauncy or some other street to the depots. Then the Metropolitan and Highland cars shall continue on Washington street until they get to Summer street, and go down Summer street to Chauncy street and Harrison avenue or some other street beyond. This would obviate the necessity, as it seemed to me at that time, for laying down any more tracks on Washington street. But, as I say, that has been placed away among the waifs that have passed along, and no action has been taken upon it. Taking it for granted that that was not satisfactory, what is the next best thing? The application was made for a track from Dover street to Summer street, but all that has been granted is the little piece of track between Summer street and Milk street. I asked several gentlemen doing business on Washington street, and they in a manner assented to it. It was not the wish of the committee to establish a double track on that street if they could see any other way to get out of this block on Tremont street, which they had been recommended by this Board of Aldermen to devise some means of relieving. The Committee on Paving have agreed upon a plan; and the only difference between the majority and the minority was simply this, and I appeal to each and every member of the Board to stand in Milk street, at the post office, and look through Devonshire street and see the Old State House projecting almost across the street, and see the necessity of making two turns; and whether that turn would n't be just as bad and a great deal worse than to continue them down Milk street, by the post-office door, into Post Office square, and make a turn into Congress street, and thence up State street into New Devonshire street. That is all the difference between the orders. As I said, each and every member of the Board knows that location and has looked at it and is just as conversant with it as I or my associates upon the committee are. As the petition was for either Devonshire or Congress street, it don't seem to me that there is any other way than for the Board of Aldermen to make their choice in the matter.

Alderman Gibson—As the Alderman on my right says, it seems to me this is a very important matter. No two men agree upon it. The outsiders have not agreed, and two of the committee have agreed upon a certain route and another takes the other route. Now, after considering it five months, if the people, the Paving Committee and the horse-railroad companies come in here so scattered, it seems to me it ought to be looked over with more care. We have one or two thoroughfares seemingly required by the public, and everybody wants to go through those thoroughfares. Take New York, for instance; they run cars on the side streets; and so in Philadelphia. They don't allow cars to run up and down Broadway, though they cross it sometimes. We should do the same in regard to Washington street. It is the grand promenade of New England. Thirty-three per cent. of the passengers coming from South Boston and the Highlands want to go on Washington street, and those coming from the North End want to get there, too. We all know it is the grand promenade, and I think every horse-car track ought to be taken out of it, and the cars go in a circuit right around it, down Tremont street or through Devonshire street, which brings everybody within one block of where they want to go. If some plan of that kind can be sought for, and if the Board of Aldermen could take a ride around this territory, I think they could settle it. If the Metropolitan road would take off their cars from Tremont street, as I suggest, and let them go up one street and down another, they would form a complete circle around this section that everybody wants to get to. I don't know the best way to go, but there is a way where they can go across the street, and up and down, and form a circuit right around here, and no one would have to walk more than one block. It is n't expected that the Board of Aldermen can agree if the committee cannot, after working a whole season upon it. I should hope that the Alderman's motion to refer to the next City Government would prevail. If we could go around the route I think I could select one which would satisfy the public and let Washington street remain as a great thoroughfare for a promenade for the public.

Alderman O'Brien—If this order is pressed tonight I shall vote for the minority report, as it is the most sensible one that we can adopt. If any gentleman takes a glance at Devonshire street he must know that it is more crowded by common carriers than any other street in the city of Boston today, and a horse railroad in that street would be a great obstruction to the common carriers. But I believe with the Alderman opposite that this question is too important a one for us to decide tonight. It ought to be referred to the next City Government, who ought to appoint a special committee to give their whole time and attention to horse-railroad locations. I have no doubt every member of this Board will bear me out in saying that a special committee ought to take charge of this whole matter and give their whole time to it, because it has occupied nearly one-half the time of the Board of Aldermen this year. Early in the year the Highland Railroad came before us and told us that some 60,000 inhabitants of Roxbury were pressing to come in through Columbus avenue; that they wanted to go to the art museum and churches on the Back Bay. Now, does any member of the Board of Aldermen believe one word of it? What they wanted was to strike at the short travel of the Metropolitan Railroad on Tremont and Washington streets on the circuit. I don't believe that half a dozen citizens of the Highlands wanted a location there for the Highland road in order to go to the churches and art museums on the Back Bay. What they wanted was to make money by striking at the most profitable custom of the Metropolitan Railroad on Tremont street and around the circuit. That is all they wanted, and I think you might as well speak the truth. Again, the Middlesex road came before this Board and told us that 36,000 citizens of Charlestown want to go to the retail stores on Washington street, and to the southern depots. There is n't scarcely a word of truth in it. What they want is to strike around the circuit and get just as much of this short travel as they possibly can. They don't care what road they get it out of; they want a share of that short travel, and it is not to accommodate the people of Charlestown. The very retail stores whose patronage they say they promote come here and object to any new locations on Washington street. They don't want the custom from the Highlands or Charlestown if the street in front of their stores is to be blocked. Now, you grant the petition originally asked for—a track from Dover street to Summer street—and you would block Washington street more than any other street in Boston is blocked today, even Tremont street. Even this 200 feet of track in Washington street is objectionable. If it is necessary to relieve Tremont street I should be willing to vote for it; but, as I said, I think the best disposition to be made of this business is to refer the whole matter to the next City Government. When the Columbus-avenue track was asked for, I told the Board of Aldermen at that time that no more cars should be permitted on Tremont street. That was the keynote of this whole business, and the fact that the Board of Aldermen, early in the year, granted the location—and made a mistake in doing so—on Columbus avenue, has forced this question upon us. It forced so many more cars into Tremont street that now you have got to take them up and block up Washington street to cover the mistake made early in the year, I don't believe that twenty-four cars an hour ought ever to have been laid on Columbus avenue, and I believe that both the Highland and Metropolitan railroads feel that it was a mistake to place so many cars there, for they are running them without any benefit to themselves, and certainly without any benefit to the public. When I look over this question I cannot help thinking what a vast amount of material is wasted in horse railroads. Here are five horse railroads—the Metropolitan, Middlesex, Highland, South Boston and Union—all competing with each other, and trying to take each other's business away. If they were all under one management, you would have no blocks and the public would be far better accommodated than they are today. I understand that we are to have a petition from the Chelsea and Lynn horse railroads. They say they have some 50,000 or 60,000 inhabitants who want to come here and patronize our retail stores and reach the South End depots; but all they want to do is precisely what the Highland and Middlesex are trying to do, and precisely what the Union is trying to do in coming up Washington street and turning down Milk street—taking the business from some other road. That is precisely the whole of it. The accommodation of the people is the last consideration, and it is merely to make money that these roads are pressing these locations upon us; and I don't believe in it. I think that a committee of this Board ought to give their whole time to straightening out this matter, and I hope it will be passed over to the next City Government.

Alderman Thompson—I cannot agree with the gentlemen who advocate a reference of this question to the next City Government. It is paying a very poor compliment to the Committee on Paving, who have considered this matter with so much care during a large portion of the year since this block commenced on Tremont street. It is rather late for members of this Board to question its ability to wrestle with a subject of this kind, when the laying out of parks, freeing the ferries and purchasing Mercantile wharf can come up and pass right through without much opposition. Now at this late day, when an extension of the Metropolitan Railroad, a corporation owned in this city, comes up, why should it be such a tremendous question for this Board of Aldermen to wrestle with? That is not the objection, because there have been two reports on the subject, and the question is only in regard to the best route to take. I have been informed—and I have no reason to question the authority—that the absent member [Alderman Fitzgerald] of the Paving Committee is now of the opinion that it is the wisest course for the railroad to take through Congress street, and his attention was called to this matter by one of the largest real-estate owners in this city on Devonshire and Congress streets, and who desires it to go down around Congress street, as he thought it would be an advantage to all the property in that section of the city. I know that there may be a little block in consequence of passing through Washington street; but I know it would be a great convenience to very many people who do business in the section of the city below Post Office square to be able to go there and take the cars to go from one section of the city to the other. For my part I am very glad to see these different petitions come in from these corporations; they show there is some life in the horse railroads if there is n't in steam roads. There is n't a manager of a horse-railroad corporation running out of the city but will tell you they have carried a larger number of passengers the past year than ever before. Why is that? Because the accommodations are greater. Is n't it for the advantage of the city of Boston and for those stores to have people come in from neighboring towns and cities? And is n't it for the advantage of our merchants to have them come? I propose to give them all the facilities that they want. The Alderman who has just taken his seat spoke of the Middlesex railroad, that they make an excuse that the people wanted to visit the retail stores on Washington street. He is mistaken when he says that is not the case. From my own personal knowledge I know that the cars passing through City square for Scollay square will go empty, when the cars bound for Washington street and the depots will go crowded and overflowing. And why is it? Because people want to go in that direction, and the reason why we have these different horse railroads in the different streets is because the people have asked for them; and if they accommodate the people why should n't they have them. The question was suggested at one of our meetings whether the great public should be inconvenienced to accommodate a small number of real-estate holders. That is a question for us to consider. I believe that travel on horse railroads will increase; that a year hence it will be larger than it has been the past year; and I believe that our successors—I presume that none of us expect to be here, under the present peculiar circumstances, and I suppose that is the reason the Alderman wishes to refer it to the next City Government—will have horse-railroad matters to consider as well as we have; and I believe that with the experience we have had this year we are abundantly competent to settle this question. I hope the minority report will be adopted; and I am sure that the absent member of the Paving Committee favors it. I hope we shall meet this question because we have had other very responsible matters to act upon.

Alderman Viles—We have had a good deal of horse-railroad matters the past year, and I was in hopes we should clean our docket of one or two of them. The committee have had the relief of Tremont street under consideration a long time, and both the majority and minority reports recommend this location in Washington street, and one going through by way of Congress and another by way of Devonshire street, and the company has asked for another route. I hope we shall not send it over to the next Government. I hope we shall act upon it today unless some member asks a week's time to look into it.

Alderman Slade—When the Committee on Paving were at work upon this matter I went one day with the Superintendent of Streets and we looked the ground over as carefully as we could without consulting any railroad president or anybody else. We felt satisfied that Devonshire street was the route to take, more particularly where it crosses State street. If they go through Congress street, when they get into State street they have a pretty crooked place to get around. If the railroad folks think they can do that, I don't object to it, and it don't make any odds to me. If you can make anybody happy I am ready to do almost anything in regard to horse railroads. As the Alderman says, if the other member of the Paving Committee has changed his mind, I shall not stand out about Devonshire street; only I wish to get something that is satisfactory.

Alderman O'Brien—With all due respect for the Committee on Paving—and I am sure I have a great respect for all three of the Aldermen on that committee—I would say this: that the Committee on Paving blocked up Tremont street early in the year by giving a location on Columbus avenue and sending twenty four cars an hour on Tremont street and around the circle; and now the same committee come to this Board and say they want to relieve the block that they made on Tremont street early in the year by blocking up a portion of Washington street. That is the long and short of it; and the Alderman from Charlestown comes here and says that the Committee on Paving have given such great attention to this subject that he bows down to their opinion and is willing to vote for the order they presented. I would state that the facts in the case are precisely as I have said—that this Board of Aldermen, in giving the location on Columbus avenue early in the year, have blockaded Tremont street; and now they intend to block up a portion of Washington street in order to undo what they have done on Tremont street. It is very pleasant to hear the Alderman from Charlestown talk about an increase of business, when it was only at the last meeting of this Board that he was the most despondent man I ever saw, for he said that business was more depressed than during the past two or three years; and now he says that horse-car travel has increased, and business must be increasing, and really contradicts himself. I believe he really tells the truth tonight, and that business is gradually increasing and that we are growing out of the depression that has prevailed for some two or three years. Again, I repeat that the best disposition to be made of this matter will be to refer it to the next City Government; and I hope that City Government—and they will, if they know anything about the tax on their time and patience that this matter will cause—will refer this whole matter to a special committee to adjust. As I said, I believe that four or five railroads are pressing for the profitable travel in the city. They don't care about any location unless they get one on Washington street. It was a very dangerous thing for the president of the Metropolitan Railroad to rise here and state that he had carried thirty millions of passengers the past year. I can imagine the presidents of the Middlesex, Highland and Union figuring in their counting rooms how many of those millions they can take away from the Metropolitan by driving over their tracks. That is precisely what all this pressure for locations means. It means nothing else, and I believe the Board of Aldermen ought to put a stop to it.

Alderman Clark—My reason for asking for delay is simply that I don't believe this Board are prepared to, or can adjust this matter satisfactorily to the people or the horse railroads themselves. The Alderman from Charlestown says we have passed very important measures—much more important than this—during the present year, and having taken that responsibility, he wants us to take this. He must remember that the matter of parks was not only before this Government, but before three previous governments, having been introduced in 1874, and this Government simply carried out a portion of what was recommended three years ago, and we had considered it a very long time. So also in regard to sewerage; and free ferries have been before the City Government in one form or other since 1871. It was not a hurried matter by any means. Now, how can we vote consistently upon this subject when the very committee to whom this matter was referred, and who have been considering it for the past six months, only arrived at a conclusion within the past few days, and that simply in consultation with the presidents of the different horse railroads? They brought them together and got their views, and in some sort of way patched up a route that would be satisfactory to the horse railroads, notwithstanding it might be a great detriment to public travel; and they bring in majority and minority reports, one of the Aldermen being in favor of Congress street and the other two in favor of Devonshire street. The railroad has changed its mind during the past week and is now willing to take Congress street, probably on account of the great opposition of real-estate owners to the cars passing through Devonshire street. One of the Aldermen offers very good reasons, from his standpoint, as an advocate of the Congress-street route, why the cars should not go through Devonshire street. Then there is this petition of the Union Railroad, who give good reasons why they should go up Washington street; and today the Lynn Horse Railroad has asked for leave to run cars up Washington street. This subject is too important to decide tonight, and the best disposition to make of it is to refer it to the next City Government, and the Board of Aldermen of next year can take it into consideration and devise some plan satisfactory to all the corporations in and out of town. In my opinion there should be a horse-railroad commission established to take this whole subject into consideration—an independent commission whose salaries shall be paid by the horse railroads themselves. Now, in regard to this enormous desire of the people to come from Charlestown to the business part of the city, you will find that they don't average half a dozen people to a car after nine o'clock in the morning until three in the afternoon, and most of the travel the Middlesex get they pick up from the Metropolitan and some other road. They pick up a great deal on the circuit. And it is so with the Union. I think they give a good argument why they should be allowed to come into the heart of the city. I think they can make a good argument why they should be allowed to pick up travel usually carried by the Metropolitan and other lines. This action proposed tonight is simply giving a new location to the Metropolitan road. It is n't to relieve the blockade. It is n't giving the Metropolitan what they ask for, or what the people and the Committee on Paving desire themselves, because a part of them recommend one thing, and a part recommend another, and the whole thing looks to me to be in a perfect muddle. I don't believe we can settle this thing satisfactorily without further time to consider it, and I believe it can be more satisfactorily settled three months hence than at present; therefore I hope it will be referred to the next City Government, and I call for the yeas and nays.

Alderman Robinson—I am exceedingly happy to find that my impression was correct, and that the Alderman from Ward 21 and myself perfectly agree in regard to the blockade on Tremont street in consequence of allowing those Columbus-avenue tracks to be laid; for such was my impression. But I cannot find how the cars got out of Columbus avenue. [The Alderman read from Alderman O'Brien's remarks at a meeting last spring to show that the allowing of Columbus-avenue cars on Tremont street would cause a blockade.] What I wanted to ask here tonight was how the cars got on Columbus avenue. Where is the permission of the Aldermen? I have no recollection of anything of the kind. How did they get there? and where is the vote giving permission to the horse cars to run on Columbus avenue?

Alderman Wilder—The president of the Metropolitan Railroad desires me to state that he has heard of no opposition, either at the hearing or at any other time, to the occupation of Congress street, and they prefer it on account of its width, and its being much more easy to keep clear of teams. In their first petition they expressed a preference for neither. I hope this Board thinks itself competent to deal with this question. It has occupied the attention of the Paving Committee, as well as every member of the Board. For the last ten days I have walked down from Temple place and made it my special business to talk with a few gentlemen doing business on that short piece of Washington street. It is true the principal business people fear it will work them an injury, but I don't think they are very decided in their opinions. I had a conversation with Messrs. Shreve, Crump & Low this morning; they are afraid it will block up Washington street, but still they thought as their patrons could stop their carriages in Summer street, it would n't injure them very much. I had a conversation with Mr. Ditson on the same subject; his opposition is not very strong, for there is very grave doubt whether or not it is going to be an injury to him or his business. In discussing this question, gentlemen seem to take it as a foregone conclusion that this location is going to hlock up Washington street. I don't come to any such conclusion. I don't believe the inconvenience to business is going to be increased to any perceptible degree. I occupy a store on the square below, and am confident it will be a great convenience to many people doing business there. This is one of the matters we have considered up to a point where we can come to a conclusion; not because I desire to favor the Metropolitan, but because I wish such action as will relieve the difficulty which has been so annoying to the public, and because the Paving Committee and those who have studied the question more carefully than I have, have come to the conclusion that this will entirely mitigate and relieve the difficulty. I hope we shall adopt the minority report, and I believe we will have done our best duty in the premises from the light in which we view it.

Alderman Clark—The city has a little interest in this matter. There are something like $50,000 of uncollected betterments on Congress and Devonshire streets, and if the city is to allow horse-railroad tracks put in that street, the abutters will have just cause of complaining that the streets were widened for the benefit of the railroads and not for the benefit of the public.

Alderman Wilder restated the information in regard to no opposition to the route.

Alderman Clark—Do I understand there is none on Devonshire street?

Alderman Wilder—There has been none on Devonshire street.

Alderman Clark—I call on the Alderman who made the statement to explain it.

Alderman Thompson—The agent of the Simmons estate, Mr. White, made objection to Devonshire street because he considers it too narrow, and as he controls property on Congress street, he objected to it on that street. I am very sorry to hear my associate on the Street Committee, who has labored so hard in the city interest, to my personal knowledge, in his endeavors to settle the betterment cases, present reasons to parties to hold back and not settle. But there are other sections where betterments have not been settled. On New Washington street there is quite a number not settled, and the occupants would rather have the railroads running through there than have the street in the condition Union street is. And so it will be in Washington street. The people will have customers coming from all directions. An Alderman stated that the storekeepers did not want customers to come from the suburban districts. He may be correct, but if he could see one-tenth of the circulars sent by them to the district where I reside—because people there have the reputation of being good pay—he would change his mind. It is nonsense to have this matter put off to the next Government simply because we have two reports. Every member is familiar with the subject. I think it will be a benefit to the property in this vicinity.

Alderman Robinson—I wish to apologize for the question I asked. I find that on May 23 I introduced an order. I don't know whether I was present at the meeting; but I find I introduced the order.

Alderman Gibson—I have no objection to going through Congress street, but it seems to me they will hlockade Washington street. It seems to me they ought to strike farther off towards the Albany depot instead of coming into the heart of the city. I should prefer to see all the tracks taken out of Washington street on the circuit.

The motion to refer to the next City Government was lost—yeas 5, nays 6.

Yeas—Aldermen Breck, Clark, Dunbar, Gibson, O'Brien—5.

Nays—Aldermen Burnham, Robinson, Slade, Thompson, Viles, Wilder—6.

Absent—Alderman Fitzgerald.

Alderman Thompson moved that the minority report be substituted for the majority.

Alderman Slade asked Alderman Thompson if he was sure Alderman Fitzgerald favored Congress street, and Alderman Thompson replied that he had a conversation with Mr. White, agent of the Simmons estate, who said he called Alderman Fitzgerald's attention to the feasibility of Congress street, and that Alderman Fitzgerald said, on second thought, he agreed with him, and thought it would be better to let it go around Congress street.

Alderman O'Brien—One important reason why the minority report should be adopted is that Devonshire street is crowded and narrow, and Congress street is wide, and it will be no impediment to travel to have the cars there.

The minority report was substituted for that of the majority, and the order reported by the minority (with the Congress-street location) was passed—yeas 8, nays 3.

Yeas—Aldermen Breck, Burnham, O'Brien, Robinson, Slade, Thompson, Viles, Wilder—8.

Nays—Aldermen Clark, Dunbar, Gibson—3.

Alderman Clark in the chair.

Highland Street Railway. On motion of Alderman Wilder, the order for a double track location for the Highland road on Eliot street (City Doc. 90) was taken from the table.

The chairman read a remonstrance from Moses Williams and others against the double track.

Alderman O'Brien asked for the necessity for a double track, and Alderman Robinson said he understood the vote to be for a single track.

Alderman O'Brien called attention to the fact that Eliot street was widened a few years ago to accommodate the traffic between the depots; and now the abutters, having paid betterments, object to a double track. He would favor a double track.

The matter was recommitted to the Committee on Paving, on motion of Alderman Viles, and subsequently that vote was reconsidered on motion of Alderman Wilder.

Alderman Gibson thought the wishes of a few abutters should not outweigh the convenience of the public in this matter.

On motion of Alderman Wilder the order was amended by making the location a single track, and as amended passed.

WARD ROOM IN WARD 24.

On motion of Alderman Wilder the report and order to establish a ward room at the Field's Corner police station in Ward 24 was taken up, and the Alderman presented a petition therefor from S. P. Dexter and 630 others; the chairman also read a petition from M. F. Lynch to the same effect.

A pending amendment, to have the order take effect on Dec. 1, was adopted.

The Alderman withdrew his objection, as so many citizens desired it. He had no personal interest one way or the other.

The order was passed as amended. Sent down.

STONY-BROOK IMPROVEMENT.

Alderman Clark submitted the following:

The Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the report of the joint special committee in favor of the improvement of Stony Brook, accompanied by an order providing that a joint special committee be appointed to take charge of the improvement of said brook at a cost of $133,000, would respectfully report in favor of the passage of said order. In relation to providing the means for the accomplishment of said work, your committee are aware that it has been the financial policy for a few years past not to borrow any money for undertakings costing less than $200,000, but make a direct tax for them; but in this case it appears from the report of the special committee who have investigated the subject that it is expected that a large amount will be received from betterments to be assessed on those benefited by this improvement; they therefore would recommend the passage of the accompanying order with the one attached to the report referred to the committee providing for a loan for $133,000 which will be taken by the Board of Commissioners on the Sinking Funds, the said order containing a provision that all moneys received from betterments or otherwise from said improvement shall be paid by the City Treasurer to the Board of Commissioners on the Sinking Funds for the redemption and cancellation of said loan as soon as received by them:

Ordered, That the Treasurer be and he hereby is authorized to borrow under the direction of the Committee on Finance the sum of $133,000 for the improvement of Stony Brook; and it is herein provided that all moneys received for betterments or otherwise from this improvement shall be paid by the City Treasurer to the Board of Commissioners on the Sinking Funds to be used by them specially for the redemption and cancellation of the loan provided by this order, as soon as received by them.

The report was accepted and the order read a second time and put upon its passage.

Alderman O'Brien—This looks like an expenditure of $133,000; but by the passage of the order 180 acres of land will be reclaimed and the betterments we are allowed to assess for the improvement will, it is believed by the committee, pay for the expense. About 1200 families will be relieved, who are flooded every year by the overflow of that brook. A short distance above the Roxbury stables it runs on almost a level grade to Hyde Park, and this improvement makes a gradual deepening and draining of the brook through its entire line. It will redeem a great deal of property, and relieve a great many people who are now in distress by this overflow.

The order for the loan was passed—yeas 11, nays 0. The order for a joint special committee to take charge of the improvement was passed, and Aldermen O'Brien, Burnham and Dunbar were appointed on said committee.

Sent down.

ORDER TO PAY.

Alderman Thompson, from the Committee on Streets on the part of the Board, submitted an order to pay Philip Sowdon, Jr., $171 for land taken and all grade and other damages occasioned by the laying out of Jenkins street. Read twice and passed.

Adjourned, on motion of Alderman Viles.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—Can any member tell us what this is? I should like to ask some committee if they can tell us what this order is about? If no one can give any information I move to lay the order upon the table.

The motion was lost by a division—15 for, 27 against, and the order was passed in concurrence.

Reference to Committee on Finance of the report and order of the Committee on Health in relation to the abatement of the nuisance in and about Roxbury Canal. (City Doc. No. 92.)

Concurred.

The orders were severally ordered to a second reading.

FIRE COMMISSIONERS.

A report on the subject of the meetings of the Fire Commissioners and absentees therefrom came down to be accepted in concurrence.

Mr. Spenceley of Ward 19—At the time this committee meeting was held I was sick at home, and could not be present. I am very glad the Fire Department Committee did hold one meeting and bring in a report. But I wish to ask the members of the committee present one question. Near the latter part of the report it says—

“Of official examination of the fire-alarm telegraph work in Brighton required some of these absences, but nearly all of them were caused while he was testing the department hose at the fire boat, circumstances requiring these tests to be made at the usual hour of meeting of the commissioners.”

I would like to know the circumstances requiring that these tests should be made from one to two o'clock, if any member of the committee can tell me.

Mr. Burke of Ward 2—I was present at the meeting, but I do not know that I can explain the matter to the gentleman any more than is contained in the report. The records of the commissioners were shown to the committee, and they appear to be substantially the same as the report read tonight. We were informed that Mr. Curtis had been making a test of the hose for weeks past, and it so happened that he chose the time of day that the commissioners generally meet.

Mr. Spenceley—When this matter came up before the Council I stated that a gentleman had not been present for a week at City Hall. I stated it on good authority, and I have yet had no reason to find it to the contrary. Therefore I move that it be referred back to the committee.

Mr. Howes of Ward 18—I trust that it will not be referred back in that way. The report seems to be a full one and if the gentleman was not present at the meeting it certainly is his own fault. There need n't be any reflection upon the commissioners because the gentleman had a sore on his face which kept him in the house.

Mr. Spenceley—I think the gentleman [Mr. Wilbur] put the order in to find out whether this gentleman was attending to his duties or not, and that was one reason why I stated what I did at the time in regard to this matter. Now, I only ask that this matter may be sifted to see whether I am right or wrong. I have made a certain statement. I don't know whether I am at fault. I don't know whether it is his business whether I have a sore on my face or anywhere else; and when the gentleman speaks of such accusations as that, I think the rest of his speech can go along with it. But I do want to know this, not only for the benefit of the Council, but also for the verification of the statement I made at that time, and that is the reason I ask it.

The motion to recommit was lost, and the report was accepted in concurrence.

INSPECTOR OF BUILDINGS.

The confirmation of the executive appointment of John S. Damrell as Inspector of Buildings came up under unfinished business, the question being on ordering the previous question on the motion to reconsider.

At the request of Mr. Webster of Ward 3, Mr. Flynn of Ward 16 withdrew the motion for the previous question, to allow debate.

Mr. Webster of Ward 3—As the records will show, Mr. President, I have advocated the absence of all partisan spirit in city affairs, and it is my intention to be consistent tonight. But the rule must work both ways if it is to be applied at all. It has been my endeavor, in considering this matter and putting my ideas together, to judge it from a purely business standpoint. I assume at once that Mr. Damrell is a Democrat—speaking in the municipal sense of the term. He undoubtedly voted for Mayor Prince at the last election, and I suppose will vote for him at the next one. Now, I have always opposed the removal of any Democrat and his place filled by a Republican simply because the incumbent was a Democrat, and I should object to any one being removed because he was a Republican and his place filled by a Democrat. I contend that we should advocate the filling of the positions from a purely business standpoint. Now, it has been said that our policy would be to keep this matter upon the table for two months, and then the succeeding Mayor would have the appointment of this officer. I am opposed to that, as a matter of principle. Mr. Prince is Mayor, and is the man to make nominations, if any are to be made, and it is for us to either approve or reject them. We cannot elect whom we choose; but we can consider whom the Mayor appoints, and if it is not a proper appointment we have no other alternative but to reject it. The idea that we have any moral right to keep it upon the table will not bear the test of any critical examination. The idea would be futile, if attempted to be carried out, for many who oppose Mr. Damrell would be away, and therefore it would prove a failure theoretically and practically. The first question for us to consider is whether there should be any vacancy there, or whether there should be any new appointment at all, and if it proved to be a good thing for the city to retain Mr. Shaw, I would vote against confirming my own brother for the place. That I think is the key-note to the entire matter. Had it not been for the unfortunate affair at the South End I would have advocated Mr. Shaw's case freely tonight. He is personally my friend and I consider him competent for the position. I think he did as much as any man could do in regard to the accident at the South End; he sent his deputies to inspect the stands, believing them to be competent for the duty; and, looking at the matter from the ordinary standpoint, I think he did all that could be done. But, looking at it from a broader standpoint, it is a fact that a careless accident took place, and the result showed the inefficiency of the department; and, looking at it as a matter of life and death, I don't see why he should not be held responsible for the failure in his department. He considered his deputies first-class men; but nevertheless the accident occurred. If a man is going to run a department, and that department proves a failure, in any view of the matter you have got to look to the head of that department for the responsibility. If you sent to a druggist for medicine, and your child should be poisoned by the medicine you received, you would hold that druggist responsible.

Mr. Webster's time having expired, on motion of Mr. Thompson of Ward 9, it was extended, and he continued—

I would not be understood as saying that the Mayor has treated Mr. Shaw as he should be treated. I withhold any opinion upon that matter. But I firmly believe that if I was Mayor—which is of course a ridiculous proposition—I think my feeling would be that the head of the department should be responsible, and I should make some new appointment. Now, the simple question for us to consider is whether Mr. Damrell is fairly competent for the position—not whether he is the best man for the place, for that test would not be applied if Mayor Cobb was making the appointment, as I can mention some of his appointments that would not stand that test. I do not believe the best man can be obtained for this place for $3000 salary. The question is to be judged from the same standpoint that it would be if the Mayor was more popular. If Mr. Damrell is well qualified for the position, it is my duty to vote for him; and, if he is not, to reject him. We all understand that he has retired from the active business of building, but we find that he is a first-class mechanic, carpenter and engineer of the Fire Department. It is claimed on the one hand that his experience in the Fire Department and his knowledge of unsafe buildings must preëminently qualify him for the office, so far as the safety of buildings, fire escapes and the general fire question are concerned, and that he must be peculiarly qualified for that part of the duty. The next question is whether he is a competent mechanic, and whether he is the right man for the place. There are two sides to this story, both of which present their claims very strongly. His friends claim that he was instrumental in drawing up both the building law and the ordinance which succeeded it, and in getting the law passed; in fact, many of his friends say if it had not been for Mr. Damrell we would not have had any building law. Of course any man who had knowledge enough to draw a law and force it through, ought to be competent to execute it. This is the statement of his friends and himself. On the other hand, I find many architects in Boston who claim the entire credit for the building law themselves, and I found some architects who claimed that he knew nothing about the building law. For the purpose of giving some facts in the matter, I will read a few lines from the New England Insurance Gazette of March 30, 1871.

"The committee met to hear the officers of the City Government and others, upon the bill providing for the inspection of buildings in Boston. Assistant Solicitor Stackpole explained the bill and its objects, which were to aid in the preservation of life and property by fire and other causes, incidental to the erection of unsafe buildings. He gave a full history of the growth of feeling in Boston in favor of the measure before and since the falling of the Tremont-street Skating Rink and Riding School, and remarked that the bill had been under consideration for two years, and had been drawn up with great care with a view to its simplification and comprehensiveness.

"Chief Engineer Damrell gave a full history of causes which led to the necessity of framing such a bill, and stated that the increasing tendency among builders to sacrifice safety to cheapness had given rise to much general remark, which had culminated in its introduction to the Legislature. Thirty per cent. of loss by fire he thought would be saved by its operation, if passed into a law, and he recounted various causes of fire which had come under his observation, defective flues, furnaces, etc. The danger to firemen and occupants from chimneys supported by wood-work; the careless proximity of wood to hearths and fire-places; the insecurity of partition walls, the non-reliability of pile-foundations, and the superiority of cylindrical flues were explained at some length, and the opinion was given that the establishment of a system of fire inquest and inspection of building in process of erection, would be the means of lessening the number of fires that have their origin in the carelessness of mechanics and the indifference of consequences to life entertained by speculators. He explained the various plans of putting up sham buildings, and gave several instances of dangerous support of chimneys by wood which would burn off, when down came the structure. Mr. Damrell also spoke of the overloading of buildings, of dangers resulting from changing dwelling houses into shops and stores, and particularly of the defective partition walls, which were certain to let in smoke and generally fire; also of the imperfect mode of setting grates. Half the fires of a certain class would be prevented if it was known that the causes would be thoroughly inquired into, as proposed by this bill. He also alluded to the poor foundations for buildings, which caused tenants to become frightened—a block on Ruggles street, Highlands, and one in Blossom street. The principal builders and mechanics in the city were in favor of the provisions of this bill."

I will also read an extract from the Daily Advertiser of yesterday, and will then read another extract from the same paper of quite a number of years ago, showing quite a change in its opinions:

"The nomination of J. S. Damrell for the office of Inspector of Buildings took the public by surprise, and the more it is considered, the more its fitness is questioned.

"He has never held a prominent position as a builder, and no one questions that the office should be filled by either an engineer, architect or a builder of large experience.

"That Mr. Damrell possesses these qualifications does not appear, and in view of the strong petition of the architects and builders against his appointment, it is reasonable to suppose that the Council will reconsider its action and reject it."

I will now compare this with an editorial of the Daily Advertiser of Feb. 27, 1872, in regard to the building laws:

"Some of the builders and building owners in this city are considerably exercised in relation to the building law passed last winter, and the proposed amendments now pending before the Legislature. This is well. The attention of the people of Boston should be especially called to the subject. The character of the city depends in a large degree upon the quality of its buildings. No amount of enterprise and business energy will make a permanently prosperous city unless the buildings are of a substantial character. To withstand the destructive action of the elements they must be thoroughly built and of enduring materials. Especially to be exempt from the disastrous effects of fire, they should be so built. It is the experience of every city of considerable age and size that it will not do to leave each real-estate owner and mechanic to determine, without restriction, the size and character of any building he may choose to erect. Certain regulations affecting the kind of material, character of foundations, thickness of walls, amount and disposition of wood work, arrangement of flues, heating apparatus, and the like, have been found absolutely necessary.

"No well-informed and disinterested person will claim that we can safely do without such regulations. In fact, our building law has come none too soon. The first large fire or shock of an earthquake, of which there have been slight forewarnings, will demonstrate that we have already in the heart of the city many buildings of a dangerous character. Is it not the part of wisdom to see that no more such are erected? Years ago the custom was to build lower stories and less in number; consequently, light foundations and party walls were all sufficient. Now the temptation is to build upon such walls several stories more, adding greatly to walls and foundations, never intended for such a load. As long as all is quiet they will stand; when the severe test comes they will fail. A large portion of our city stands and must stand upon piles. It is of the first importance that they should be well driven, cut off below high-water mark and properly capped. In every department of business in order to get the best advice we consult competent and disinterested persons. If a merchant or capitalist contemplates the erection of dwellings or warehouses, he employs skilful mechanics, because they possess the requisite knowledge of the business, which he does not. It needs the same knowledge to frame a proper building law as to erect the buildings themselves. The Chief Engineer of the Fire Department and those who were associated with him in procuring the passage of this law, are competent mechanics experienced, and skilful house builders. They stand in the position of impartial advisers.

"Their past experience and present positions show them most clearly that the true interest of the city requires a sound and stringent law to regulate the erection of buildings for all purposes. In regard to many of the details, however, builders will honestly differ. It may be that the law is needlessly stringent and minute in some particulars, but in regard to the general principles, which should govern all building operations in a large city like ours, that would be but little difference of opinion."

Without introducing any more testimony upon that point, or expressing any opinion of my own, I will state what evidence I have obtained upon my side, and leave the Council to judge of the merits of the case. I have called upon many of the gentlemen who signed the remonstrance. I know an instance where one partner refused to sign it and the other signed it. I know several gentlemen who did sign it who told me that they had but little knowledge of Mr. Damrell, and they do know a good deal about Mr. Shaw and Mr. Sears; that they knew Mr. Sears to be a first class mechanic, and that they did not know that Mr. Damrell was. Some preferred Mr. Shaw and some Mr. Sears. One gentleman, a prominent builder, whose name I cannot give, as he signed the remonstrance, told me he did not know anything particular against Mr. Damrell, and he would as soon have signed a paper in favor of Mr. Damrell as he would in favor of Mr. Shaw. Now, I don't claim that they all said this. I find a good deal of serious opposition to him, and they claim to give good reasons for it. The story which had been circulated, and which shook my faith in Mr. Damrell, was in regard to the building in Portland street. The agent claims that the work was given to Mr. Thomas Damrell and he engaged Mr. J. S. Damrell to assist him; and the agent claims that Mr. J. S. Damrell had entire charge of the matter, and that any defects in carpenter or mason work he should be held responsible for. It had no solid foundation, was built in an unworkmanlike manner, and a few years after another builder had to go entirely through it to prevent any accident. I heard this story from one party. I went to Mr. Damrell himself and examined his books. This story was circulated by some of the architects, and of course had a good deal of weight. Mr. Damrell's books simply show that he was responsible for the carpenter work. The bills speak only of the carpenter work and days' labor, and he had nothing to do with the mason work. In order to set this matter at rest Mr. Thomas Damrell has made a sworn affidavit, which I will read:

CITY OF BOSTON, COUNTY OF SUFFOLK, AND COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.
I, Thomas Damrell of Boston, County of Suffolk and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, being duly sworn, do hereby state that Messrs. Damrell & Long of said city, county and State were employed by me to shore up a stable on Portland street, numbered (20) twenty on the numbering of said street, and that said shoring was done in an acceptable manner, and that the aforesaid Damrell & Long had no knowledge of other work to be done, and that I, the said Thomas Damrell, performed and executed the mason work necessary to complete the job; making application for permit and taking the same out in my name and doing the said work under the immediate direction of the assistant inspector of buildings, Mr. George W. Griffin. THOS. DAMRELL.

Witness,
D. L. WARE.
Signed and sworn to before me, this fifteenth day of November, A. D. 1877.

M. W. BURLIN,
Justice of the Peace.

I must say, with what knowledge I can obtain, I cannot see how that story has any foundation in fact, and why Mr. Damrell is not exculpated in the matter. Eleven years ago the church in Temple street was burned, nothing being left standing but the walls. Mr. Damrell was employed to put in new galleries, put on an entirely new roof and make extensive alterations—practically an entire rebuilding of the church so far as the carpenter work was concerned. The insurance company awarded $17,000 for the job, and considered it a fair price. Mr. Damrell executed the work for about $12,000, leaving about $5000 for the church. The trustees were Mr. Woodbury of the firm of Standish & Woodbury (and they refused to sign this remonstrance), William Clafin, ex-governor of Massachusetts, James Mills and John Borrowscale. At the meeting of the trustees the vote in favor of giving the job to Mr. Damrell was unanimous, and I think the vote accepting the building was also unanimous in every respect. Now it seems to me that men of such standing in the community would not have employed Mr. Damrell unless he had been a competent mechanic. I am informed by Messrs. Damrell & Long that they have built about fifty buildings. In conclusion, I will read a few letters which I think will have some weight. First is that of Joseph R. Richards, who has charge of many buildings in Boston:

BOSTON, Nov. 12, 1877.
Captain John S. Damrell, Dear Sir—In answer to your question, "What do you know of me as a carpenter and practical builder?" I have known you as such ever since I knew you. Twenty years ago I knew you as a carpenter doing an extensive and profitable business. During a few years, say covering a period of from 1857 to '60, each year I made for you portions of plans of dwelling houses, and for alterations and additions to private buildings, the carpenter's work of which I knew you were to perform, and the whole work of which you were to assume entire control. In some instances the outline memoranda were made by yourself. Perhaps my earliest recollection of you as a carpenter was at the time you made the cases and drawers for the State Board of Agriculture from my plans, more than twenty years ago.

I have also a recollection that more recently, and during your official capacity as Chief Engineer, your advice was sought and opinion obtained before plans of engine and hose houses were completed and accepted by the official committee—so far, at least, as it concerned any plans made by me—as to their being especially adapted to the requirements of location and the purposes for which they were intended. That is to say, plans for such structures had to be submitted to you for approval.

I am very truly yours,

JOSEPH R. RICHARDS.

I will also read another letter from Mr. John Bacon, a chemist and a retired gentleman of quite large means, who lives on Somerset street:

BOSTON, Nov. 13, 1877.

To whom it may concern: This is to certify that Mr. John S. Damrell for the past twenty-five years has been employed by me as a master mechanic,—making designs, building and improving my estates, and executing the work in a skilful manner. I found him thoroughly conversant with the different branches of mechanism, and gave him full supervision of all my work, and I most cheerfully indorse him as a skilful and competent mechanic.

JOHN BACON.

I have also a letter from Mr. John Federhen, a jeweller on Washington street:

BOSTON, Nov. 10, 1877.

To whom it may concern: This is to certify that Mr. John S. Damrell has designed, executed and completed a number of dwellings for me in this city, as well as made extensive alterations and improvements in other buildings, previous to the year '66. Since that time, under the firm of Damrell & Long, they have erected a block of stores and also a block of dwellings, and I cheerfully bear testimony to his judgment, skill and thoroughness as a mechanic.

JOHN FEDERHEN,
371 Washington street, Boston.

If I had time I could have procured several more letters, and I will add that I also obtained a good deal of information which I am not at liberty to quote. A good many gentlemen do not care to be mixed up in this controversy, and who would give me no opinion that I could quote. I will read a letter from Mr. William Washburn, who, I am told, is one of the best architects in Boston, and who built Tremont Temple and one of the largest and finest stores in Boston. I think that no one will question that he is one of our best architects, and a man who has been really valuable to the community. He writes—

BOSTON, Nov. 15, 1877.

Mr. John S. Damrell, Dear Sir—I notice by the papers that your fitness to perform the responsible duties pertaining to the office of Chief Inspector of Buildings is questioned on the ground of want of "mechanical skill, sound, practical judgment, and mature experience." In view of this unjust and injurious statement I am constrained to say, as an act of simple justice, that I have known you during the last twenty-nine years, and have had repeated personal knowledge of your ability in the execution of work requiring mature experience, sound judgment and unusual skill. Indeed, your reputation as a competent builder was so well established in 1866 that it was understood to be one of the strongest points in favor of your election to the office of Chief Engineer of the Fire Department, the power to prevent the erection of unsafe buildings being then exercised by the Board of Engineers. I will say, further, that from my knowledge of your qualifications and long experience as a builder, engineer and business man, and from what I understand to be the duties required of the Chief Inspector of Buildings, I have no doubt that if the authorities confirm your nomination to that office the public interests in that department will be faithfully and properly protected.

Respectfully,

W. WASHBURN, Architect.

I can only say in conclusion, that, in looking up this matter as I have had time to do, I have found the best authorities upon the matter very conflicting. There seems to be a good deal of prejudice against Mr. Damrell because he did not save the city from the great fire. I have found many who do not consider Mr. Damrell the best man for the place; on the other hand, I have found this testimony, and a good deal more. Arguing in my own mind that a change should occur; considering that there is fairly and honorably a vacancy, and that his Honor the Mayor did right in making an appointment; judging it by the standard of other appointments, I have come to the conclusion that this appointment is a very good one. Judging it outside of politics, with which the question has nothing to do, I shall vote to confirm the appointment.

Mr. Howes of Ward 18—I had the honor at the last meeting to present a memorial of various architects and builders of Boston, and—

The President said the time for debate on the motion to reconsider had expired.

On motion of Mr. Spenceley the time allowed for debate on reconsideration was extended.

Mr. Howes—I had the honor at the last meeting to present a memorial from various builders and architects against the confirmation of Mr. Damrell to this position. In doing so I was in no way influenced or prejudiced in favor of Mr. Shaw. It was not a petition in Mr. Shaw's favor in any respect. If the question of Mr. Shaw's confirmation came up before this body, it would then be the duty of the Council to say whether they would accept or reject him. The duty of the Council in the present instance was, and now is, to act upon the confirmation or rejection of Mr. Damrell; and for my part I want that to be distinctly understood, so that Mr. Shaw may be kept entirely outside of the question, as he does not enter into it at all. The gentleman who last sat down has, as he rightly should, brought up the question of Mr. Damrell's qualifications for the position. He has also stated, what I have heard stated on quite a number of occasions, that Mr. Damrell was the father of the present building laws. Possibly the gentleman does not know that, prior to the great fire, our building laws were very simple and crude compared with the same laws as they now exist, in their perfectness; and I may say they are the most perfect in America. They are not the work of Mr. Damrell. His work was the framing of a building law which held up to the time of the great fire. Immediately after the fire there was a special session of the Legislature, and many alterations were made in the building law; subsequently, in 1873, numerous other amendments were made, and there have been amendments since; so that as the building law now stands, it is anything but the work of Mr. Damrell. In fact, it would be difficult to trace his workmanship in the building laws. The gentleman says Messrs. Damrell & Long have done a large amount of work. I have understood that that is the fact, though I am informed that while Mr. Damrell was Chief Engineer of the Fire Department, he did very little duty outside of that; that most of the building done by that firm was the work of Mr. Damrell's partner rather than himself, and what credit is due for that should go to the partner of Mr. Damrell rather than to Mr. Damrell. Now, as to the statements made in the opposition memorial presented at the last meeting. Quite a number of gentlemen have written letters complimentary to Mr. Damrell; but they are not professional. Those who have known Mr. Damrell twenty-nine years or more are certainly personal friends who, under any circumstances, would be willing to tender anything they could in order to favor him, so far as testimony is concerned. The gentleman from Ward 3 cited the case of the Temple-street church. I don't say but that Mr. Damrell was employed in all good faith, and that the trustees scoured the city before selecting him. But gentlemen must know that in matters of that kind the religious denomination to which a man belongs has something to do with a man's reputation for repairing churches, and possibly it might have influenced them as much as any other consideration. The gentleman says Mr. Damrell is qualified for the office because the testimony is as strong on the one side as on the other. Now I think that any nomination that would come before this Council for an important office like that, if he were a competent, practical mechanic, it would be difficult to get persons to come forward and say he is not qualified. The mere fact that there are twenty or thirty or forty builders and architects willing to say that they believe this man is disqualified from a want of experience is to my mind a very strong fact against him. These men know that after he is put into the office he has power over them; and yet in spite of that they are willing to come forward and say he is not the right man. The testimonials in his favor, compared with those against him, really amount to nothing when you sift them down, and I certainly trust that the Council will not be misled by any such specious plea as was made by the gentleman who preceded me.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—In regard to the evidence put in by the gentleman from Ward 3 as to the qualifications of Mr. Damrell, he mentioned the names of gentlemen who had signed the remonstrance. I do not wish to draw the names of those gentlemen into the controversy, but I call upon the gentlemen for information in this matter, as they advised me not to vote for Mr. Damrell. There is one point in this discussion upon which I hope we shall get some information. It must be remembered that the Inspector of Buildings requires other qualifications besides being a good mechanic. A man may be a good carpenter, but this is an office requiring considerable executive ability. The Inspector must have great discretionary power over our streets, by the ordinance we passed this year, in addition to the power of granting permits for the erection of buildings; but the authority to grant permits to occupy portions of the public streets for building purposes rests with him. His powers are very largely discretionary, and his duties require talents which enable him to act promptly. He should have a firm, quiet mind, competent to prescribe rules, which he will observe and make other people follow. I hope the friends of Mr. Damrell will give us some information in regard to that question.

Mr. Webster of Ward 3—One part of the information I had I neglected to give, and that is, a comparison of his record with that of Captain Chamberlin would not, in my judgment, be unfavorable to Mr. Damrell. Mr. Chamberlin was a carpenter and had not had the building experience Mr. Damrell has had. He had not built any large blocks of buildings. It was precisely the same case with Mr. Shaw. He was a competent engineer; could draw plans thoroughly, and was no doubt scientifically qualified for the place. It might be a question whether a man who has never built a block of buildings would not be deficient in many qualifications which Mr. Damrell would possess, after his long experience as a carpenter and builder, and an engineer in the Fire Department; but of this I am not practically qualified to judge. I should admit that Mr. Shaw was scientifically qualified for the place; and I have been assured by men whose names are upon that remonstrance that they consider Mr. Damrell as well qualified as Mr. Shaw was when he took the position, but they consider Mr. Shaw's four years' experience invaluable. Of course there is something in that; any man who has been in the office has learned something, and Mr. Damrell can learn as well as any other man. There is one other point. It is well known that architects and mechanics have their distrusts and dislikes, just as men in mercantile life do. I am informed that two of the architects who signed that petition built the marble block at the corner of Summer and Washington streets, the entire front of which had to be taken down because it was not built properly; also that one of the masons on the remonstrance had charge of the Huntington-avenue bridge, and that it was his fault that it had to be built over again. I have no reason to doubt this information. Those men may be competent builders and masons; but they are professional opponents of Mr. Damrell, and why not tell the truth about them? and, as I say, we must make some allowance for that sort of thing.

Mr. Crocker of Ward 9—I agree with the gentleman who last sat down, that the main question is whether Mr. Damrell is qualified for this place, and not specially whether he is a Democrat or a Republican. But on that point—his qualifications for the place—I must say that the evidence I get leads me to think that he is not properly qualified. That is the information I get from most of those gentlemen who seem qualified to judge of his ability to fill the place. When we asked for information as to what he has done to prove his fitness for the place, gentlemen have seemed inclined to indulge in general statements, rather than to specify what he has done. Only three instances have been specified—one a building on the corner of Cambridge and Blossom streets, an addition to a college on the Neck (I don't know how much of an addition it was), and the repairing the woodwork of the interior of the church on Temple street. Those are not very important works, and, except the first one, they are not regular erections of buildings. One of his indorsers, in endeavoring to back him up, is driven to mention that he constructed a chest of drawers for the Board of Agriculture which I suppose might be examined; but I do not imagine that ability to construct a chest of drawers is very well calculated to show that he is the proper man for Inspector of Buildings. Then we are told that he helped to get the present building law, and was mainly instrumental in so doing; but the only evidence we have of that is that he appeared before the Legislature as a witness, and his evidence has been read. But gentlemen must know that the building law was called for on account of the great fire, and an almost necessary witness was the Chief Engineer who had charge of the fire. He was almost necessarily a witness there. How much he had to do with the law I don't know; but it don't seem to me that the fact that he was a witness on that occasion tends to show that he was mainly instrumental in getting the law passed. For these reasons, and from the evidence received from various sources, it seems to me that he is not a suitable man for the place; that a much more suitable man, and much better qualified, could easily have been found, and I therefore feel unwilling to vote for his confirmation. I feel still more unwilling—though I don't know that I should allow such a consideration to guide me if I found Mr. Damrell to be properly qualified for the office—I feel still more unwilling, by giving my vote for confirmation, to aid the Mayor in paying his political debts.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—I rise to a point of order. My point is that the gentleman is reflecting upon the Executive of the city.

The President—The Chair thinks the point well taken. The gentleman must confine himself to the question.

Mr. Crocker—I would inquire if we are not allowed in this body to express our opinions of the doings of any other branch of this City Government. I should suppose we might comment in here upon the doings of the Aldermen and the Mayor.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—Not in the insulting manner in which he has attempted to do it.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10—I should like to inquire where that order is, and who has the judicial determination of what is an insult in comments upon the performance of business or duty by any officer of the City Government. Who is above criticism? I ask for the order or rule that is referred to. The gentleman from Ward 13 calls the gentleman from Ward 9 to order. I call for the rule or order. I do not speak this in favor of one party or the other, but for fair play when a gentleman is called to order, because it is the rule I should like to see.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—I have called him to order and the Chair has sustained me; now it is for the Chair to explain it; I will it he cannot. I have been here long enough to know what is parliamentary in this body.

The President—The Chair thinks any reflection upon the Board of Aldermen or his Honor the Mayor would not be in order.

Mr. Webster of Ward 3—The gentleman from Ward 9 is still doubtful as to Mr. Damrell's influence in the matter of the building law, and I have some more evidence here which will prove conclusively that he played a prominent part in the establishment of the law. I will read very briefly from the report of the commissioners on the great fire:

The question was asked Mr. Damrell—

Q.—Do you desire to say anything about the construction of the buildings?

A.—About the construction of the buildings and the height of them, I would like to say this: I have for quite a number of years regarded the buildings that have been constructed in Boston, especially the large warehouses, as being the instrument which would eventually destroy Boston, on account of the vast amount of wood used and the inferior manner of their construction, and their inaccessibility on account of the height. So much was I impressed with this that I have labored for the last five years, of which I have a record here, to bring the matter directly before the City Council and also our State Legislature. Two years ago I succeeded in getting a bill (of which I have a copy with me), which I presented to the City Council, accepted by them.

[The witness here produced a copy of the ordinance in relation to the "Regulation and Inspection of Buildings" (City Doc. No. 55, 1871), appended to which was the following certificate:]

"CITY HALL, BOSTON, Nov. 30, 1872.

Sections 1, 2, 3 and 4 of the foregoing ordinance, reported by the Committee on Ordinances, June 26, 1871, were based upon the recommendations made by the Board of Engineers as presented by the Chief Engineer of the Fire Department.

Attest:

JAMES M. BUGBEE, Clerk Committee."

In view of this evidence, I cannot refuse to conclude that he did have prominent influence in bringing about the ordinance in the first place, and that he was continually calling the attention of architects and others to it; and in getting it enacted he is entitled to some credit. I am glad to learn from my friend from Ward 9, and others, that it is very unwise for us, in the matter of partisanship, to apply to the Mayor any test in regard to the civil service that we would not apply to the President. From beginning to end Mr. Hayes's nominations have been of gentlemen who have rendered him invaluable party service and who will continue to do so.

Mr. Crocker—I call the gentleman to order. I suppose it is not allowed to comment upon the doings of the President.

The President—The Chair thinks the point not well taken.

Mr. Webster of Ward 3—It is well known that Mr. Schurz, Mr. Sherman and others rendered great service to the President during the campaign, and that they will do so in the future. Now, I contend that we, as partisans, have no right to place the Mayor in any position that we would not put the President in. It places me in the very strange position of defending the Mayor; but I contend that if there is a vacancy the Mayor has the right to appoint his political friends.

Mr. Crocker—I call the gentleman to order. If the Mayor cannot be attacked, he cannot be defended.

The President—The Chair would remind the gentleman from Ward 9 that he impugned the motives of the Mayor. The gentleman from Ward 3 will confine himself to the question.

Mr. Webster of Ward 3—In conclusion I will only say as General Butler said when in Congress, "Shoo, fly, don't bodder me."

Mr. Spenceley of Ward 19—If that chest of drawers had as many errors in it as Crocker's notes on the statutes were said to have, it never did the Board of Agriculture much good. I am really well pleased that this matter is receiving such consideration before this honorable body. I don't think it has had much attention paid to it heretofore, because if we look over the past and see the election of Mr. Chamberlin and Mr. Shaw to that office, we find that there was no debate about it whatever. Mr. Shaw's nomination was referred to the Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings; they reported back by Alderman Gibson of East Boston, who said they had inspected the qualifications of the Inspector and found him well qualified to fill the office; and it passed both branches unanimously. Now we find a gentleman who has been before the public for many years, a man who has had his ins and outs like other men, who has stood high in the estimation of the public, as has been stated and reiterated a hundred times before.

His name appears here as the nomination made by the Mayor for this office, and immediately a gentleman, who, if he has not a sore spot on his face, has a sore spot on him somewhere, gets up and brings this matter up as a pompous idea, showing at once that there is animosity in his heart against a man who has served his city so well as Mr. Damrell has. I am pleased that the gentleman from Ward 18 has investigated this matter so thoroughly. I think he is doing his duty. I think he is growing. [Laughter.] I think if the gentleman had been half so thorough on the committee of which he is a member, he would have known something about the doings of the committee, and it would not have taken a committee three weeks to find out what he did know about it. Mr. President, the gentleman shows the point of his animosity, and I do hope this thing will be reconsidered.

Mr. Howes of Ward 18—I rise to a point of order. The gentleman is reflecting upon my motives.

The President—The Chair did not understand the gentleman [Mr. Spenceley] to impugn the gentleman's [Mr. Howes] motives, but simply to criticize his official action.

Mr. Howes of Ward 18—The gentleman states that I am opposed to the confirmation of Mr. Damrell on personal grounds, and that is reflecting upon my motives.

The President—The Chair did not so understand it.

Mr. Spenceley of Ward 19—Allow me, Mr. Chairman, to read from the gentleman's remarks.

"It has been my misfortune"—

I do not know what that means. [Laughter in the galleries.]

The President—Gentlemen in the galleries must preserve silence.

Mr. Spenceley of Ward 19—And do hope this matter will be reconsidered, that we may find out what the misfortune of the gentleman has been, "to know Mr. Damrell in years gone by"; I do not know what it is.

Mr. Howes of Ward 18—Most of the members of the Council do.

Mr. Spenceley of Ward 19—I do think, Mr. President, that we are here tonight to consider the qualifications of this man and to see if he is well fitted for this position. As I said, I am well pleased, because the gentleman has made such inquiries as he has—it is not the first time he has been after the Inspector of Buildings—about this matter, so that we may fully know and realize what we have to do. I think the office is a great one. It is a case where we need a man of executive ability as well as of practical ability. I think we want a man there who theoretically understands about building materials as well as about them after they are put together, and I believe that in Mr. Damrell we find all this. I have known him for some time, ever since I was in Boston, and I have known him as a builder. I know of many buildings which he has erected, and I know they are standing today as substantial as when they were built. I do not know but that because we have had a remonstrance in here from Nathaniel Adams, who is a great mechanic—and we all know it—from J. J. McNutt who is another mechanic, and who makes mistakes like some other people, and John W. Cavanaugh, who is a building mover—I do not know that he ever built a house in his life, but he moves buildings, and that is all right. I do not know whether Mr. Damrell is not mechanic enough for this office, and these men do not know it. Does Mr. Adams claim to know every building in Boston, how they are constructed, whether well or ill? Does he keep the run of all the buildings in Boston? Does he know whether down on Cambridge street Mr. Damrell may not be building a block of buildings as large as those on Washington street? Is it any sign that because he is not building these large stores on Milk and Devonshire streets he is no mechanic, and that he is not well qualified to fill this office?

The President—The gentleman's time has expired.

On motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 13, the gentleman's time was extended.

Mr. Spenceley of Ward 19—I think not, Mr. Chairman. I think a man may be a mechanic and not have a box down at the Mechanics' Exchange, and going there to loaf two or three hours every noontime. I think he may be a mechanic who knows his business and does his business well, and be doing it well while others may be speculating on a suitable candidate for Inspector of Buildings. I was talking with one of these gentlemen the other day, and he said, oh, he could go and lay his finger on a man who had all the qualifications for Inspector of Buildings! "But what is the matter with Mr. Damrell," I asked. "Well," he said, "I do not think he is just the man; why don't the Mayor appoint such and such a man?" Mr. Chairman, it is just as plain that they have picked out a man who they think is fit for the position, and they asked that he should be appointed, and the Mayor has seen fit not to appoint him, but has appointed Mr. Damrell in his place, and they are sore. The gentleman says he had the honor to bring in this petition. I do not know whether he went to get these gentlemen to sign or not, and I do not know how many gentlemen he asked to sign it who refused to sign, but I think if we had their names here they would number twenty-five as well as the men who did sign it. It shows that these gentlemen who signed that remonstrance did not know to what use it was to be put. Some of them have already said that they would just as soon sign a petition for Mr. Damrell as for Mr. Shaw. I think this state of affairs shows the animosity in the hearts of men who want to kill out Mr. Damrell for an old score which they have against him. Now, Mr. Damrell has been a mechanic twenty-five years in the city of Boston. He went to learn his trade when thirteen years of age; he served four years in Cambridge and then came to Boston and went to work, his own man, when seventeen years old. The first job he took was to finish the addition to the Quincy House, and if he had not been somewhat of a mechanic the gentleman who owned it would not have given him that large job to finish when he was only seventeen years old. It seems to me that shows something of ability. Ever since that time he has been a mechanic in the city of Boston. Ever since that time, with the exception of eight years when he was Chief Engineer of the Fire Department—and I defy any gentleman to prove that during that time he had any thing to do with Mr. Long, or that any buildings he ever erected were put into the schedule of that eight years he was Chief Engineer of the Fire Department—I say that all this time he has been a mechanic in the city of Boston he has done his work, done it faithfully and well, and for these honors the Mayor has appointed him to this position, and I say that he has appointed him because he knows that he is a capable man to fill the position not only practically but theoretically. The gentleman thinks not. What does he know about the strength of iron? What don't he know about it? What does he know about the strength of stone? What don't he know about it? Gentlemen can go out and see whether he knows anything about the strength of iron, wood or stone or of a truss. He has built buildings and I have seen them within a week where he has put trusses through a house and where he has put up iron columns under wooden beams which others had laid and which today show as level as when it was built. Now, Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Ward 18 refers to the law which was framed some years ago—it is City Document No. 55 of 1871—in relation to the inspection of buildings, and which Mr. Bugbee says Mr. Damrell was the chief engineer of and he says, "Why, what is that? That is an old antediluvian affair. I think the man has got so much conceit that he would not look at the man who first thought of the insurance company. Insurance companies have grown and multiplied, and, because the first insurance laws were made so long ago, he would have us throw them all overboard. I believe the man who organized the first insurance company knew more than four-fifths of those who carry on the business today. And so with the first building law, the man who first had courage to stand up and say, 'Gentlemen, we must have this law established in the city of Boston,' I say he had more stamina and courage than three-fifths of the mechanics in Boston today. Why don't you declare against Columbus, who came here in three old boats without decks, and say that was nothing; 'he ought to have had a steamship.' It would have been a great thing, I suppose, but Columbus thought he would travel around the world in a boat. That is antediluvian. Throw it away; it don't amount to anything! But, gentlemen, is it so? Is not the man who brings forth a theory, and starts it, the man that we should respect and admire rather than the man who makes some amendment to it or who attempts to call it something new by introducing some new idea? Now which is best? Now, Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Ward 18 said in his remarks—

 “I think his entrance into city hall would tend to demoralize one of the most useful departments. Mr. Damrell has been known to be one of the most active of politicians.”

I defy him to prove that for the last eighteen years Mr. Damrell has had anything more to do with politics than any private citizen should have to do with it. It is well enough for the gentleman to get up here and make such an accusation as that, but I defy him to prove it to be true. Mr. Damrell, since he went into the Fire Department, has not had anything to do with politics more than any citizen ought to have to do with it, and is bound to have, and is bound by every tie to have an interest in the good of his country, and love for good government—I defy the gentleman to prove otherwise. Why are all these slurs thrown in here if the gentleman has no animosity against this man. Why are all these things, piled one upon another, to kill Mr. Damrell, if there is not something lurking beneath, which the gentleman has not the backbone to stand up and declare, and say plainly, I am down on Mr. Damrell, because of my mistake, whatever that may be. Now, Mr. Chairman, I hope we will take this matter plainly and clearly, as it has been stated before us. I say it is wrong for the gentleman from Ward 18, or anybody else, to bring this accusation against Mr. Damrell just because some insurance company has failed up, because Mr. Damrell did not put out a big fire which I do not think the Angel Gabriel could have put out if he had been here on earth. I hope we will look at the matter just as it is, squarely in the face, and if we find that Mr. Damrell is not qualified for the office, reject him; but if he is I say throw overboard all these personal animosities which have come in here and let us act like square and honest men towards an honest man.

Mr. Howes of Ward 18—The gentleman has referred to me several times in the course of his harangue regarding the personal feeling I have against Mr. Damrell. Now, sir, I never spoke to Mr. Damrell in my life. I think I should know him if I should see him, because I have had him pointed out to me. I am quite certain, or at least I imagine, that Mr. Damrell does not know me. There is nothing personal in any statement I make against him. The gentleman will remember, as he was here last year, that I criticised that office as conducted by Mr. Shaw, and perhaps would do so again. I have nothing against Mr. Shaw personally, nor against Mr. Damrell personally; but I know, from the situation I have filled for several years past, the merits and the importance of this particular office to the city of Boston. The gentleman further says that, in his opinion, Mr. Shaw is a competent builder.

Mr. Spenceley of Ward 19—I beg your pardon. I never said so.

Mr. Howes of Ward 18—Mr. Damrell, I mean. He said that Mr. Damrell was a very competent builder. That may be; but then there are others that may have a different opinion of that gentleman. As to the knowledge we have of the men, he speaks, for instance, of Mr. Chamberlin and also of Mr. Shaw. Mr. Chamberlin was put into the office for a particular reason, as I understand. The office was a new one at that time in the city of Boston, though it was not anything new outside of Boston. Other places had this building law long before Mr. Damrell thought anything about it, and long before any one else in Boston seemed to think anything about it. When the office was created Mr. Chamberlin was put in there as a matter of trial. When the office was vacated by Mr. Chamberlin we did not go outside to get a man, but we took a man from the office and promoted him, and that was Mr. Shaw. It would have been a very handsome thing if the Mayor had done the same this year, and it would have been carrying out civil-service ideas, which my friend from Ward 3 does not seem to understand anything about; and if the Mayor had made an appointment like that, I think it might have been very satisfactory without knowing who the assistants in the office are. As for personal feeling against Mr. Damrell, I have none at all. I don't know the man personally.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—There has been considerable discussion in regard to who drew this bill. I hold in my hand City Document 43, of the year 1873. Mr. A. C. Martin, an architect, in giving his sworn testimony before a committee of this City Government, says—

“Two years ago we got a building act passed, and that had certain restrictions; but even those were opposed by certain parties in the City Government, and we had to make a fight last year before the Legislature to retain those restrictions.”

Passing on, a question is asked by Mr. Russell—
 “Were the architects generally desirous of having the act?”

“Yes, sir, the Society of Architects drew up the act, or compiled it from the London, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore fire laws; and after I had gone as far as I could with it, the society passed it in review, amended some of the provisions, and then it was handed over to the City Government, and they further amended it, changed quite a number of the provisions to suit their own views, and then it was put into the hands of a committee at the State House, and after a number of hearings, it finally became a law.”

It seems to me that disposes pretty well of the claim that Mr. Damrell, or of the friends of Mr. Damrell, that he drew this law. Here is sworn evidence that you have as to where the law originally came from. It came from the society of architects who drew it up. While I have this document in my hand I wish to read an expression of the opinion of the committee who investigated the fire department after the great fire. The committee was composed of Thomas Russell, Charles G. Greene, Samuel C. Cobb, A. Firth and E. S. Philbrick. In their opinion of Mr. Damrell they say—

“He is described as being cool, and, with perhaps one exception, as master of himself, of his temper, and of his faculties. But while seeing this, and while admiring his many good qualities, we cannot fail to see that there was a want of preparation for so great an emergency, a want of system when the emergency comes, and especially the want of a leader capable of grasping the details of a great plan adapted to the terrible occasion. The fire was attacked piecemeal, as chances occurred. The heroism of individuals was too often wasted because it was not directed by a master mind.”

I read that, gentlemen, for the sake of giving point to the question which I am going to put, and which has not yet been answered by any of Mr. Damrell's friends. Have we any good reason to believe that Mr. Damrell has those executive qualities which are very desirable in the office which he is called upon to fill? If he does his duty in that office, he must be constantly making himself disagreeable to builders who are applying to him for permits to use the streets of the city or permission to put up buildings in a certain way. He must be a man capable of saying no, saying no decidedly, and seeing that his no is carried out. Now, have we the slightest reason to believe that Mr. Damrell is that kind of a man? From my recollection of the investigation which took place after the fire, I have every reason to believe that he is not that kind of a man, and that is one of the vital essentials of the office. Mr. Damrell may be a good carpenter or a bad one; he may be a good architect, he may be a man of good executive ability, but it seems to me we should not confirm him on these facts under the circumstances.

Mr. Spenceley of Ward 19—The remarks I made in reference to Mr. Damrell regarding this building law are just as I have stated. They were indorsed by Mr. Bugbee, who said it was prepared by the Chief Engineer and his associates. If it is necessary I will read:

First is the limit in which certain buildings should be built in the city of Boston. Mr. Martin had nothing to do with that. Next, the outside limits in which no wooden building should be built. That was the beginning of the building law in reference to this inspection of buildings. Section 2 goes on to state it shall be lawful to erect wooden buildings outside of certain limits, with the roof not more than forty-two feet in height above the sill. Section 3 says no wooden building shall be erected for mechanical purposes, etc. That was the beginning of the building law in the city of Boston, as now carried out. When I was up before I forgot to state one thing. If gentlemen will examine this law they will find that three out of five of the sections there apply to buildings in case of fire. The gentleman raises the objection to Mr. Damrell that in executing the law he has got to make enemies of all the builders because he cannot say no. Mr. Damrell only appeals to the law, and it says thus and so. He does not make the law. If I am a mechanic and I know there is a law, I don't make an enemy because the Inspector says this is so. I do want a man there who knows the law and does not make a mechanic do these things which he is not required by law to do. I would rather hire a man who would find out this than a man of so much executive ability that he wants all the time to say no. I do not think it requires much effort to say no where there is a law and the officer knows the law. I have a list of buildings which Mr. Damrell has built during past years of his life, and if any gentleman wants to hear it read I will be glad to read it.

Mr. Crocker of Ward 9—I was interrupted in the remarks I was making before, and in order to know just how far I can go in completing my remarks I should like to inquire whether it is considered a rule that a member impugns the motives of the Mayor if he intimates that the Mayor appoints to office a gentleman because he voted for him and worked for him at the last election. I would like to understand that, so as to know how to guide myself in any further remarks I may make.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—The reason I called the gentleman to order was that he was impugning the motives of his Honor the Mayor. He said it was a part and parcel of the bargain to nominate Mr. Damrell for Inspector of Buildings.

Mr. Crocker of Ward 9—I used no language anything like that.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—You forget what you said.

Mr. Crocker of Ward 9—No, I do not.

The President—The gentleman will please address the Chair.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—I am addressing the Chair, and he is addressing me. I say that is almost exactly his language. He did say it was a part of the trade which the Mayor had made to nominate Mr. Damrell as Inspector of Buildings, and therefore I called him to order for the reason that he was impugning the motives of his Honor the Mayor. I now move the previous question.

Mr. Crocker of Ward 9—I believe I have the floor. I merely gave way for a point of order. I will state in reply to the remarks of the gentleman, that I did not say what he attributes to me. What I did say was that I did not care about giving my vote to help Mayor Prince pay his political debts. I had a few remarks to make on that subject, but I did not wish to go on with them and be called to order further; therefore I inquired whether it was the ruling of the Chair that it would be so far impugning the motives of the Mayor that I could not make further remarks.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—I rise to a point of order that thirty minutes have expired for which the motion to reconsider was made.

The President—That time was extended by vote of the Council.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—It was specially extended, I understood, for the gentleman from Ward 19.

The President—That extension was made before the gentleman from Ward 18 commenced his remarks. The gentleman from Ward 9 will proceed.

Mr. Crocker of Ward 9—Mr. President, as I got no further information, I will go on and say what I was going to say before. I had but a few more words to say. From the best information I can get I should not say that Mr. Damrell was duly qualified. What I said before was—I don't know as I will repeat that, because it was ruled out of order; but I will say further, that I believe that this gentleman has been nominated to this office, not because he was particularly qualified for it, but because he was one of the men who worked and voted for Mayor Prince at the last election, and it was hoped that he would do the same this year; and that was the main reason for his nomination. A nomination made for that purpose, and in that way, a man would hardly vote to confirm. If the Mayor will make a nomination of a man well qualified for the office, I will not inquire whether he is a Democrat or a Republican, or how he voted; but if I believe that a gentleman is picked up not specially qualified, but simply by reason of the votes cast at the last election and the vote he is expected to give at this election, I should not be ready to vote for his confirmation.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—The gentleman from Ward 19 asserted that Mr. Damrell had some part in drawing the building act of 1871. That is quite compatible with the statement of Mr. Martin, who said that the bill was compiled by himself, submitted to the Society of Architects, and and they sent it to the City Government, where it was amended. Now, it is quite possible that Mr. Damrell had something to do with the act of 1871, and the ordinance passed here at City Hall, and the question is, whether the thing which he had to do with was a very desirable one, and it appears to me it very probably was not.

The President—The question is, Shall the main question be now put?

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—I rise to a point of order, that the motion for the previous question was made while the gentleman from Ward 9 had yielded the floor, and could not be made at that time.

The President—The point of order is good as far as the gentleman's remarks are concerned.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—I renew the motion.

Mr. Webster of Ward 3—I wish to offer a communication, which I wish the Chair would read, bearing upon the matter, and from Captain Damrell. The gentleman from Ward 9 seems to be laboring under a strange delusion. I should judge that he thought the question was upon the confirmation of the Mayor. Now, if that is the case, I want to vote in the negative; but I believe it is simply and solely upon the confirmation of John S. Damrell, and I believe today that if Mayor Pierce or Mayor Cobb should make this same nomination the gentleman from Ward 9 would be the first to vote "Yes."

The President—If there is no objection the Chair will read this communication:

BOSTON, Nov. 15, 1877.

My Dear Sir—It has been intimated by several gentlemen who have made inquiries concerning the association of my name with a prominent city office, that some sort of trade, understanding, agreement or bargain was had between the city authorities and myself. Will you permit me to say that nothing of the kind has occurred; that I am too well known as a Republican in this city to have any question raised in that direction in connection with myself. The position for which I have been named is one which, in my judgment, should be entirely lifted above all questions of party politics, and there is no office within the gift of the City Government which I would think of accepting if its acceptance required any condition, political or personal, except an impartial, faithful and efficient performance of the duties of the same.

Very truly yours,

JOHN S. DAMRELL.

Mr. Spenceley of Ward 19—I want simply to say and to confirm that matter more fully, that in conversation today with the Mayor he said that this story was a falsehood from beginning to end; that he had not been approached by Mr. Damrell; that he had not seen Mr. Damrell, and that no friend of Mr. Damrell had been to see him since last August, and any statement as to this being done was unqualifiedly false. He said I might use these words here tonight, and I believe it.

The question was taken on the motion to reconsider, and it was declared lost.

Mr. Howes of Ward 18 doubted the vote, and the yeas and nays being called, the motion was lost—29 to 38.

Yeas—Messrs. Barnard, Beeching, Blanchard, Blodgett, Brown, Coe, Crocker, Danforth, Felt, Hibbard, Howes, Morrill, Mowry, Pearl, J. H. Pierce, O. H. Pierce, Pope, J. B. Richardson, M. W. Richardson, Roberts, Ruffin, Sampson, Shepard, Smardon, Stone, Thompson, E. R. Webster, Wilbur, Wolcott—29.

Nays—Messrs. Barry, Brintnall, Burke, Cannon, Clarke, Cox, Cross, Day, Dee, Duggan, Fagan, Fernald, D. A. Flynn, J. J. Flynn, Fraser, Ham, Hiscock, Jackson, Kelley (Ward 3), Kelley (Ward 6), Kidney, Loughlin, McClusky, McDonald, McGaragle, Mullane, Nugent, O'Connor, O'Donnell, Perham, Roach, Souther, Spenceley, Thorndike, Upham, Vose, Warren, G. B. Webster—38.

Absent or not voting—Messrs. Doherty, Pratt, Reed, Sibley—4.

COMMERCIAL STREET.

On motion of Mr. Flynn the special assignment for 8 P. M. was taken up,—36 for, 56 against, viz.—Report and order for a loan of $1,000,000 for the widening of Commercial street.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13 moved to specially assign it to 7.45 next Thursday evening.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10 desired to know why such an unusual course should be taken with this matter. It had been specially assigned three or four times without debate. The gentleman who has moved that it be taken up has invariably moved its further assignment for a week later. He thought there could be no reason for such action unless it was to postpone it from time to time until there was some opportune moment for its friends to call for a vote which will prevent debate, or that it may be incidentally connected with some order and go through that process of legislative legerdemain called log-rolling, and thus get it through. No other bill has had such an experience as this. It should be taken up and discussed upon its merits and not be connected and log-rolled with other measures. He made this statement because he understood the friends of the bill had said that unless gentlemen in favor of other improvements vote for this, those gentlemen may expect no favor from the friends of this measure. Each measure should be considered on its merits, without prejudice to any other.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13 said he supposed the Council was tired of listening to debate, and there is considerable other business to be done. There are other important measures coming up next week and they can be considered together. Mr. Richardson was right in saying the friends of this measure desire to see what the friends of other matters in their section will do in this matter.

Mr. Mowry of Ward 11 moved to lay this matter upon the table.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—I hope that motion will not prevail, and I hope the friends of the measure will vote it down.

The motion to table was lost and the motion to assign was carried.

BRIMMER SCHOOL.

The following was received from the School Committee:

Whereas section 6, chapter 241 of the Acts and Resolves of Massachusetts provides that "Whenever, in the judgment of the school committee, a new building or any addition to or alteration of a building, is needed for school purposes, of an estimated cost of over $1000, they shall make a statement in writing to the City Council of the necessity of the proposed building, addition or alteration; and no contract for the purchase or lease of any building, or for any addition to or alteration of any building, for school purposes, shall be authorized by the City Council until such statement has been made, nor until the locality and plans for the same have been approved by the School Committee, or by a sub-committee thereof duly authorized to approve the same." And whereas, alteration has been made in the Brimmer School building at an estimated cost of over $1000, and whereas no statement in writing has ever been made by authority of this board to the City Council of the necessity of the alteration; and whereas, no plans for such alteration have ever been approved by the School Committee, or by a sub-committee thereof duly authorized to approve the same,

Ordered, That the School Committee respectfully request the City Council to inform them by whose authority and for what reasons steam-heating apparatus has been introduced in the Brimmer School building, at an estimated expense of $5000.

GEORGE A. SMITH, Secretary.

Mr. Spenceley of Ward 19 stated that when this matter came before the Council before, he rather unceremoniously moved an indefinite postponement, which was carried, which was not complimentary to the honorable School Committee. When the Building Committee took hold of this work they put in some heating apparatus, and they had offended the School Board. In order that they might obtain the desired information, he moved its reference to the Committee on Public Instruction. Carried. Sent up.

A PARK TO BE DONATED TO THE CITY.

Mr. Perham of Ward 23 presented a communication from W. E. Blakemore, offering to deed to the city, without cost, a tract of land containing 27,772 square feet of land on the summit of Mt. Bellevue, West Roxbury, on condition that the same shall forever be kept open for public use as a park. Referred to Joint Special Committee on Parks. Sent up.

PETITION REFERRED.

A petition was received from Sarah A. Holman, to be paid for personal injuries caused by a defect in the sidewalk at the corner of Tremont street and Temple place. Referred to Committee on Claims. Sent up.

Mr. Hiscock of Ward 21 presented the petition of Martin Milmore for compensation for extra materials furnished for the soldiers' monument. Referred to Committee on Claims. Sent up.

RECORDS OF THE FERRIES.

Mr. Howes of Ward 18 read the ordinance requiring the records of the departments to be kept open for public inspection, and said that one department had violated that provision. A constituent of his had called to see the records of the East Boston ferries, and was refused.

Mr. Pearl of Ward 1 said it was the first he had heard of it. It had never been called to the attention of the directors.

TAXES AND BETTERMENTS ON SITE OF POST OFFICE EXTENSION.

Mr. Stone of Ward 3 offered the following:

The Committee on Treasury Department respectfully represent that there is now due the city of Boston the sum of $70,784.80, on account of uncollected taxes and betterments, assessed for the years 1873, 1874, 1875 and 1876 on the land which was taken for the extension of the Post Office and Sub-Treasury building.

The act authorizing the United States to purchase the land was passed in 1873, and the estates have been acquired at various times since the passage of the act. The owners were prevented from using their property during the pendency of the proceedings, and therefore declined to pay the taxes thereon.

The following schedule will show the amounts due on each estate:

Land of Thomas Goddard,
Tax for 1875.....	$602.80
" " 1876.....	558.80
Betterments.....	2,000.00
			$3,161.60
Land of Peter B. Brigham,
Tax for 1873.....	$1,056.00
" " 1874.....	1,388.40
" " 1875.....	1,219.30
" " 1876.....	1,150.30
Betterments.....	4,600.00
			$9,394.80
Land of Merchants Ins. Com'y,
Tax for 1873.....	$2,995.20
" " 1874.....	3,759.60
Betterments.....	11,100.00
			$17,854.80
Land of Thomas Wigglesworth,
Tax for 1874.....	$842.40
" " 1875.....	739.80
" " 1876.....	685.80
Betterments.....	3,500.00
			$5,768.00
Land of Edward Wigglesworth,
Tax for 1875.....	2,753.70
" " 1876.....	2,552.70
Betterments.....	14,900.00
			$20,206.40
Land of the United States,
Betterments.....			14,400.00
Total.....			$70,784.80

In December, 1876, the City Collector applied to the United States Treasury Department for the payment of the amount, and was informed by the Secretary of the Treasury that it was not a matter for that department to take care of.

As the matter now stands the city has no claim against the persons in whose name the assessments were made, as the taxes are a lien on the land only, and as a lien cannot be enforced against the United States, there is no legal method of collecting the amount. The only alternative is to petition Congress for payment.

The committee would, therefore, respectfully recommend the passage of the following order.

For the Committee, P. J. STONE, JR.

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be requested to petition the Congress of the United States for the payment of the sum of $70,784.80, the same being the amount assessed for taxes and betterments upon land taken for the site of the United States Post Office and Sub-Treasury building.

Order read twice and passed. Sent up.

PERMITS FOR WOODEN BUILDINGS.

Mr. Kelley of Ward 3 submitted reports from the Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings, with orders for permits to erect wooden buildings by Thomas Mayo (to enlarge) on Green street, Ward 23; Maverick Oil Company, on Chelsea street, Ward 4; George W. Hollis, on Western avenue, Ward 25; Highland Methodist Episcopal Church (to enlarge), on Warren street; Butchers' Slaughtering and Melting Association, rear of Martin street, Ward 25; East Boston Dock Company (to enlarge), in rear of 114 Border street. Severally read twice and passed.

THE BLACKSTONE SQUARE ACCIDENT.

Mr. Sampson, from the Joint Standing Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the petitions of Ann Collins and Hannah J. Lynch and Mrs. Kate Chamberlain, to be paid for personal injuries caused by the accident in Blackstone square, Sept. 17, 1877, reported that they submitted the question of the liability of the city or its agents to the City Solicitor, and received from him the following reply:

CITY SOLICITOR'S OFFICE, }
2 PEMBERTON SQUARE, BOSTON, Oct. 29, 1877. }

Gentlemen—The questions you propose to me are—

1. Whether or not the city of Boston is liable for injuries to persons caused by the fall of the spectators' stand on Blackstone square on the 17th of September.

2. Whether or not the Committee on the Army and Navy Monument are individually liable for the injuries so caused.

I reply that, in my opinion, the persons who suffered injuries by the misfortune stated, have no legal claim for redress upon either the city or the committee by whose direction the stand was erected.

No duty rested upon the city or the committee to erect the stand, and neither derived or expected to derive any benefit from it. The persons who entered upon it did so of their own volition and for their own gratification.

Very respectfully,

JOHN P. HEALY.

In view of the above opinion the committee respectfully recommend that the petitioners have leave to withdraw. The report was accepted. Sent up.

STONE CUTTING AT PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS.

Mr. Webster of Ward 1 submitted a report from the Committee on Public Institutions, on request of directors, recommending the passage of an order—That the Board of Directors for Public Institutions be authorized to erect sheds, purchase tools, and make the necessary arrangements for establishing stone-cutting business at Deer and Rainsford islands; the expense thereof, not exceeding $5000, to be charged to the appropriation for the House of Industry. Ordered to a second reading.

LAND FORFEITED.

On motion of Mr. Clarke of Ward 22, the order to declare forfeited a lot of land bargained to Stephen H. Tarbell was taken from the table. Mr. Clarke explained that he did not remember the facts at the time it was laid on the table. The land was conveyed by Mr. Tarbell to Mr. Carruth, who is unable to pay the interest. The order was passed in concurrence.

ARMORY.

Mr. Shepard of Ward 4 submitted a report from the Committee on Public Buildings on the part of the Council, recommending the passage of the order to fit up old Winthrop Schoolhouse in Charlestown as an armory for the Fifth Regiment of Infantry. Order passed in concurrence.

REGISTRATION OF VOTERS.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13 offered the following:

Ordered, That the Board of Registrars of Voters be authorized and requested to hold sessions for the registration of voters in the several wards of this city, as was done prior to the recent State election, for at least seven days before the close of registration for the next municipal election, at an expense not exceeding $2000; said sum to be charged to Incidental Expenses and Miscellaneous Claims.

Mr. Flynn moved a suspension of the rule.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9 asked for some explanation.

Mr. Flynn said it was to offer the same facilities to clerks and mechanics to register that were offered at the State election.

The rule was suspended and the order was read twice and passed. Sent up.

SALARIES FOR MEMBERS OF THE CITY GOVERNMENT.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10 offered the following:

An Ordinance

To provide for the payment of members of the City Council, for expenses incurred by them in the performance of their official duties.

Be it ordained by the Aldermen and Common Council of the city of Boston, in City Council assembled, as follows:

Section 1. From and after the first Monday in January, 1878, there shall be allowed to each member of the Board of Aldermen, for expenses incurred by him in the performance of his official duties a sum in all not exceeding five hundred dollars per annum, or at that rate. The same to be paid to him from time to time, on presentation of his certificate to the Auditor of Accounts that the amount at any time asked for has been properly incurred by him in the performance of his official duty as such Alderman.

Section 2. From and after the first Monday in January, 1878, there shall be allowed to each member of the Common Council, for expenses incurred by him in the performance of his official duties, a sum in all not exceeding one hundred dollars per annum, or at that rate, the same to be paid to him from time to time, on presentation of his certificate to the Auditor of Accounts that the amount at any time asked for has been properly incurred by him in the performance of his official duty as a member of the Common Council.

Section 3. From and after the first Monday in January, 1878, no bill for refreshment or carriage hire, or any other bill or expense, incurred by any member or any committee of the City Council, shall be paid, unless such bill or expense shall have first been authorized by the City Council.

Mr. Richardson explained that he desired to have this ordinance considered at the same time the orders on the same subject were, and which had been assigned to next Thursday at 8½ P. M. He moved to assign this to the same hour.

At the suggestion of Mr. Ruffin, the motion was amended so that the ordinance should be printed, and as amended the motion to assign was adopted.

REFRESHMENT BILLS.

Mr. Webster of Ward 3 offered the following:

Whereas, Certain statements have been made and published in regard to bills for refreshment incurred by members of the City Council tending to reflect discredit upon said members; and

Whereas, Every citizen has an undoubted right to the most complete information in regard to all items of public expenditure:

It is hereby ordered—That the Auditor of Accounts be and hereby is instructed to report in print to the City Council copies of all bills for refreshment and carriage hire incurred by members of the City Council from Jan 1, 1877, to the present time.

Mr. Webster of Ward 3—I am very reluctant to bring up this question of junketing again. Members will bear witness I have taken little part in the discussion, but I do believe that the public have an equal right to a complete statement of that kind of expenditure, the same as for sewers or anything else. It is evident that public curiosity now tends that way. I offer the order in no spirit of self-righteousness, as I have eaten and drunk and ridden in carriages at the public expense, and I am perfectly willing that the public should know any expenditures of that kind that I have caused. The reason I offer it is that copies of some of the bills have been printed in the Transcript. In my judgment the bills are published for political effect, and have been gotten up with a special view of making it appear that certain members are economical and others extravagant. I believe the citizens have a right to the complete record in this matter. I think it should be fair and impartial for us, and that no reporter should go there and garble and extract a few bills and do any one an injustice. It seems to me that that would be fair to every gentleman not ashamed of his own record.

Mr. Spenceley of Ward 19—I move to amend by making it Jan. 1, 1878, as the bills for the whole year will come in together.

Mr. Webster—On many accounts the amendment would be better than the original motion; but the fact is the public desire this information before the election. As the bills are published they are partial and unjust. If the public are to have it before election it must be done right away. I fail to see why a desire for such information is not right.

Mr. Spenceley said he offered the amendment on account of Mr. Webster's own words, that the newspapers were publishing them for political effect.

Mr. Webster said if it was to have any effect they should be fair and square and not garbled.

The amendment was declared lost. Mr. Spenceley doubted the vote.

Twice the Council divided, but no quorum voted.

Mr. Webster of Ward 3 moved a call of the roll. Adjourned, on motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 13.

BRIMMER SCHOOL.

A request by the School Committee for information on the authority for placing steam-heating apparatus in the Brimmer Schoolhouse came up referred to the Committee on Public Instruction.

Alderman Fitzgerald—I do not wish to be captious, but it seems to me the School Board are unduly sensitive in this matter. They know all about it as well as the members of the Committee on Public Instruction. This request came before the Common Council once before and was indefinitely postponed; and it was again introduced a few nights ago into the School Board, who seem determined that we shall announce officially that we have done certain things. Any one who knows anything about the Brimmer School knows it was a trap, and that a fire has taken place there already. The matter was brought to the attention of the Committee on Public Instruction, and in order to prevent accident they introduced an order and had those repairs made and the apparatus put in during the vacation, and changed the heating apparatus from the old method to that by steam, making a fire-proof room, so that it is almost impossible for a fire to take place there. The building is so constructed that in case of a panic the children will be subjected to much danger in getting out of the building. The members of the School Board know this, and I think they are unduly sensitive. If the members of the City Council have transgressed the letter of the statute technically, they certainly have performed a work for which they ought to receive the thanks of the School Board. It was done during the vacation. The attention of the committee was called to it about the close of the term, and vacation was the only time when the committee could have it done. This is the second time it has been introduced in the City Council, and I move that the matter be indefinitely postponed.

The Mayor—Does the Alderman desire the Chair to read the order?

Alderman Fitzgerald—I think all the members understand it.

Alderman Thompson—I fully agree with the disposal of this subject proposed by the Alderman who has just taken his seat, although it may be proper to state the facts to the members of the Board, that they may properly understand them. At the request of the sub-committee of the School Committee on the East Boston District, the Committee on Public Instruction during the latter part of June visited East Boston to inspect the Adams School, to see what was necessary to be done in the way of alterations. They viewed the entire building from the attic to the cellar, and were perfectly astonished when they went into the basement to see the heating apparatus. I think there were six portable furnaces, each extending from the floor to the ceiling. The plastering was open, so that there was nothing to prevent flame and sparks from uniting with the floor above. They had with them the Superintendent of Public Buildings, the Inspector of Buildings, and the City Architect. The committee desired to know if there were other buildings similarly situated, as they did not wish to assume the responsibility of a fire taking place in this building with such heating apparatus. Their attention was called to the Brimmer School. There was no time to be lost, and if the changes were to be made at all they must be made during the vacation; and they had no time to go through the formality of obtaining the consent of the School Committee. With the advice of the Superintendent of Public Buildings they made those alterations, and only regretted that they had not time to carry them through other buildings. The members of the School Committee from East Boston approved of it, and I have no doubt they are just as well satisfied with it as are the members of the Committee on Public Instruction. I hope the motion will prevail.

Alderman Fitzgerald—If I remember the building act aright, the Inspector of Buildings could order that schoolhouse vacated, and the statute with regard to the survey and inspection of buildings supersedes the power which is granted to the School Board. Even if it did n't, I think the School Board are acting rather pettishly in this matter, and that is the reason I ask for an indefinite postponement. We did it for the safety of the children.

The matter was indefinitely postponed in non-concurrence.

THE CITY CLERK'S REPORT for the quarter ending Oct. 31—Received and paid to City Collector, $1482.67. Sent down.

LOCATION ACCEPTED.

A communication was received from the Middlesex Railroad Company accepting the seventeenth location, granted by this Board on the 12th inst. Placed on file.

Alderman Burnham—It seems to me that matter should lie upon the table. You have already received, and there has been referred to the Committee on Paving, a petition representing that certain matters in regard to that location were not understood, and claiming that the petition of the Middlesex Railroad was illegally granted. It seems to me that the proper thing to do is to lay that matter upon the table until after the hearing upon the petition which has been referred to the Committee on Paving, and I move that it be laid upon the table.

The communication was laid upon the table.

BONDS APPROVED.

The bond of William C. Thomas, constable, being presented duly certified, was approved by the Board.

Alderman Gibson presented the bond of Thomas Sherwin, Collector of Taxes, for $75,000, stating that it had been certified to its correctness of form by the City Solicitor, and had been approved by the Committee on the Treasury Department. The bond was approved by the Board.

ANCIENT LAND RECORDS OF THE ANNEXED DISTRICTS.

Alderman O'Brien presented the following:

To the Honorable the City Council of the City of Boston—The undersigned, citizens and taxpayers, respectfully represent that whereas the early land records of the town of Boston have been printed by the Record Commissioners, it is of equal importance to print the corresponding land records of those towns which have been recently incorporated with the city of Boston.

In regard to Charlestown, these early grants and conveyances are not matters of record in the Middlesex Registry of Deeds, and practically are not accessible or available to the legal profession and the public generally, being in the old style of handwriting, and without indices. These records, of whose existence, even, few persons are aware, are of the greatest value in tracing the titles of real estate, beginning as they do in 1638 (fourteen years earlier than the Boston Book of Possessions), and affecting lands now embraced in the towns of Malden, Woburn, Stoneham, Burlington, Somerville, Reading, and parts of Medford and Cambridge, which originally were included in the confines of Charlestown.

We therefore respectfully request your honorable body to authorize the Record Commissioners to publish a report to contain a transcript of the Charlestown Book of Possessions, and such other early land records of Charlestown as are connected therewith.

Alderman O'Brien—I have received the following letter, from which I will read:

CHARLESTOWN, Nov. 17, 1877.

My Dear Sir—I beg to commend to your favorable consideration the petition to the City Council for the printing of the Book of Possessions of this place of the date of 1638. Over thirty years ago I had occasion to examine this book with great care, going over every page of it, and I now regard it as one of our most valuable manuscripts, having far more than an antiquarian interest and value. I think the money will be well appropriated that shall place it beyond the reach of accident.

Yours truly,
RICHARD FROTHINGHAM.

Alderman O'Brien.

On motion of Alderman O'Brien, the petition was referred to the Committee on Printing. Sent down.

PERMITS FOR STABLES.

Alderman Viles submitted reports from the Committee on Health on the part of the Board in favor of granting permits to occupy stables by Cook & Handy, Island street; Thomas White, Longwood avenue; Renny Anderer, Rockland street; Simonton & Gill, in rear of Marvin street. Severally accepted.

SEWERS.

Alderman Viles, from the Committee on Sewers, submitted an order—That $53.84 be abated from the assessment levied upon Fanny E. Benedict for a sewer in Adams street on account of inability to pay.

Read twice and passed.

CLAIMS.

Alderman O'Brien submitted a report from the Committee on Claims of leave to withdraw on petition of William S. Keith, that certain encumbrances be removed from real estate sold for non-payment of taxes. Accepted. Sent down.

ELECTION RETURNS.

Alderman Viles submitted the following:

The committee appointed to examine the returns of votes cast in the several wards at the recent State election have examined said returns and have recounted the ballots cast for Representatives in Wards 8, 12, 15, 16, 17, 20, 22. The results of said examination will be found in tables hereto affixed. No changes were found in the persons returned as elected, except in Ward 8, where James L. Locke appears to be chosen instead of Dennis O'Connor, who was returned as elected by the ward officers. The results of the election are correctly entered in the books kept for that purpose, from which it appears that the following-named persons have been duly chosen to represent their several districts in the next General Court, viz.:

District No.

LAND DAMAGES.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets on the part of the Board, submitted an order to pay William Childs $2857.60, for land taken and damages occasioned by the widening of Emerson street. Read twice and passed.

SMALL-POX HOSPITAL.

Alderman Clark submitted the following: The Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the communication of the Board of Health, asking for an additional appropriation of $6500 for fencing the new smallpox hospital lot on Canterbury street, and for completing the said hospital building and grading about it; also for the erection of a stable, to be used in connection therewith, represent that there remains unexpended of the original appropriation for the smallpox hospital, after taking out the appropriation of $25,000 made Nov. 24, 1875, the sum of $4243.64; and they recommend the further appropriation of the last-named sum and the transfer of the sum of $2256.36 from the appropriation for the Board of Health to that of Smallpox Hospital. In advising this appropriation the committee would say that the practice of exceeding the amounts appropriated for buildings and other expenditures is very reprehensible, and that the Board of Health exceed their powers by incurring liabilities for hospital purposes in excess of their appropriation.

Ordered, That the Board of Health be authorized to expend towards the erection of a new smallpox hospital on the lot on Canterbury street, purchased for that purpose, for fencing the lot around said hospital, for extending the water pipes to supply the same, the grading about it, heating apparatus for same, and the erection of a stable connected therewith in addition to the amount of $25,000, heretofore appropriated for the purchase of a lot and the erection thereon of a smallpox hospital, the further sum of $6500; of said amount $4243.64 to be charged to the appropriation for Smallpox Hospital, and the balance, $2256.36, the Auditor of Accounts be and he hereby is authorized to transfer from the appropriation from Board of Health to that for Smallpox Hospital.

Read twice and passed—yeas 11, nays none. Sent down.

ROXBURY CANAL.

Alderman Clark submitted the following: The Committee on Finance—to whom was referred the report of the Joint Committee on Health, printed City Document No. 92, that the nuisance in and about the Roxbury Canal be abated by taking, in accordance with an act of the Legislature of Massachusetts of May 11, 1877, certain parcels of land, filling said canal, and extending the sewers emptying into the same, accompanied by an order for taking the land in question, and estimating the whole cost at $391,300—would report that the Committee on Health having in their printed report given in detail the reasons why the city should undertake the abatement of the alleged nuisance in and about the Roxbury Canal, this committee, without expressing any opinion in reference to the same, would recommend that if the City Council are in favor of the passage of the order attached to the report of the Committee on Health for taking of land, then the accompanying order should be passed providing the means for paying for the same and the completion of the improvement:

Ordered, That the City Treasurer be and he hereby is authorized to borrow, under the direction of the Committee on Finance, the sum of three hundred and ninety-two thousand ($392,000) dollars, to constitute a special appropriation to be styled "Roxbury Canal Improvement," to pay for estates to be taken, the cost of filling the canal, the cost of sea-wall, and the cost of intercepting sewer to outlet opposite Brookline street; and it is herein provided that all moneys received from said improvement shall be paid by the City Treasurer to the Board of Commissioners on the Sinking Funds, and by them specially applied for the redemption and cancellation of the loan made by authority of this order.

PAVING REPORTS AND ORDERS.

Alderman Robinson submitted the following from the Committee on Paving:

Reports in favor of granting permits to move wooden buildings, by W. R. Cavanagh, from Cottage street to Stoughton street, Ward 24; Beven & Sefton, from 79 George street to 508 Dudley street, Ward 20; John S. Blair, from 468 Harrison avenue to 446 Harrison avenue, Ward 17. Severally accepted.

Read twice and passed.

METROPOLITAN RAILROAD LOCATION IN CONGRESS STREET.

Alderman Clark—At the last meeting of the Board of Aldermen it was voted to grant the Metropolitan Railroad leave to lay down additional tracks in certain streets in the city of Boston. I have given notice of a motion to reconsider that vote. I make the motion so that we can fully understand the views of the Alderman from Ward 21, who is on the Committee on Paving, and who signed the majority report to allow them to go down Devonshire instead of Congress street, as has been passed by the Board of Aldermen. For one, I should like to have the views of the Alderman from Ward 21, who was absent at the last meeting, and for that purpose I move a reconsideration of the vote whereby that order was passed. It was stated that the Alderman from Ward 21, one of the Paving Committee, who signed the majority report, was in favor of a change of the location from Devonshire street to Congress street.

Alderman Fitzgerald—I don't want this Board to make this reconsideration for my sake. I would say to the Alderman opposite, "Speak for yourself, John Alden; don't speak for me." I am very thankful to him for moving a reconsideration of the vote, but I fancy that it would n't make much difference; it will only make an additional vote against reconsideration. It is true that I signed the majority report in favor of Devonshire street as the more convenient of the two routes; but in any matter where there is no principle involved, if I cannot get a whole loaf, I will take all I can get. Therefore, as this Board have voted to grant the location in Congress street, I shall vote against reconsideration. If the Alderman moved a reconsideration in order to give me an opportunity to ventilate my views, I will say the order meets my approbation. I am satisfied and I am much obliged to the Alderman.

Alderman Clark—Having accomplished the object I had in view, I withdraw the motion for a reconsideration.

WARRANTS FOR MUNICIPAL ELECTION.

Alderman Viles offered an order—That warrants be issued for the meeting of the legal voters of this city in their respective wards on Tuesday, the 11th day of December next, at seven o'clock A. M., then and there to give in their votes for one able and discreet person to be Mayor of this city for the ensuing year; also for twelve Aldermen to serve for the year ensuing, also for eight members of the School Committee to serve for three years; and one able and discreet person to serve as a Street Commissioner for three years,—all the foregoing to be inhabitants of this city. Also, for three able and discreet men, qualified voters, and inhabitants of their respective wards, to be members of the Common Council for the ensuing year (provided, however, that this year the voters in Ward 22 shall elect one such member only, and the voters in Ward 25 shall elect two such members); also for a Warden, Clerk and three Inspectors of elections, all of whom to be inhabitants of this city and resident in their respective wards. All of the foregoing to be voted for on one ballot; the polls to be kept open until four o'clock P. M.

Ordered, That notice be also given that the registration of voters for this election will cease on Tuesday, the 4th day of December, at twelve o'clock, midnight, after which no names will be added to the voting lists except as provided by law.

Alderman Fitzgerald remarked that the law allowed the polls to be kept open until sunset, and asked what time the sun set on the 11th of November.

The Mayor said twenty minutes past four.

Alderman Fitzgerald—I move to amend so that the polls shall close at a quarter past four.

Alderman Viles accepted the amendment, and as amended the order was passed.

Adjourned, on motion of Alderman Viles.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,

NOVEMBER 22, 1877.

Regular meeting at 7½ o'clock P. M., Benjamin Pope, President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

Petitions were referred in concurrence.

Quarterly report of City Clerk. Placed on file.

Report of leave to withdraw on petition of William S. Keith that certain encumbrances be removed from an estate sold for non-payment of taxes. Accepted in concurrence.

Report and order for an expenditure of an additional sum of $6500 in the erection of a new smallpox hospital, etc., $2256.36 to be transferred from the appropriation for Board of Health, and the balance to be charged to appropriation for Smallpox Hospital.

Mr. Stone of Ward 3—A few weeks ago the Committee on Common and Squares asked for an additional appropriation, and we ordered an investigation into the manner of conducting the business of the department. Here is a board who have exceeded their appropriation by some twenty-five per cent. They have had a job of about $31,000, and I understand that the principal part of it has been done by the day. It seems to me it ought to have been done by contract, especially as the architect gave it as his opinion that the building could have been built for $13,000. I move that this matter be referred to a special committee to report who is to blame for exceeding the appropriation in the manner in which the building has been built.

The motion prevailed, and Messrs. Stone of Ward 3, Reed of Ward 17 and Fernald of Ward 15 were appointed on said committee. Sent up.

STONE-CUTTING BUSINESS AT THE ISLANDS.

The order to erect sheds, purchase tools, and make necessary arrangements for establishing the stone-cutting business at Deer and Rainsford islands, at an expense not to exceed $5000, was considered under unfinished business, the question being on its passage.

Mr. Mowry of Ward 11—I should like to hear some explanation of this order.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—This subject was presented to the City Council by the Board of Directors for Public Institutions some time ago. The object is to keep from the island a certain number of tramps who go there from year to year to make it their home during the winter. There are some thirteen or fourteen hundred inmates of the institutions on the islands, of whom some four or five hundred are males, a large number of whom are tramps; and the object is to keep the tramps away from the islands. If these sheds can be erected, and these men put to work in the winter, instead of keeping them in a room where the temperature is about seventy, the directors feel that the interests of the city will be better protected during the winter months. The cost will be about $5000 for the erection of sheds, purchase of tools, etc.

Mr. Pratt of Ward 21—Has this matter been before any committee of the City Council?

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—It has been before the Committee on Public Institutions and they unanimously recommend the passage of this order.

Mr. Wilbur of Ward 20—I would state further, for the gentleman's information, that this matter came before the Committee on Public Institutions, who considered it one of the best moves made in that direction this year. It will give employment to the men at the islands; and though, perhaps, the cost of the stone may be no less than that which is procured elsewhere, yet it will result in many good things. They unanimously recommended it.

Mr. Clarke of Ward 22—I would state further that I understand that the Committee on Paving have had a great deal of difficulty in getting block stone for paving the streets. I understand that the paving of one street was delayed three months on account of delay in getting the stone; that the contractors took the contract to furnish the stone at a very low price; and they can only get it out in winter, for, when laboring men can get work on the farms during the summer, they will not work in the quarries, and they have to employ cheap help in winter. It seems to me that it will be very desirable for the directors to be able to furnish the Paving Department with that article.

Mr. McGaragle—While this may be very desirable for the Directors for Public Institutions, I hardly think that the city of Boston is the right party to go into the stone-cutting business, especially at Deer Island. I don't think the large amount of paving stone they will get will pay for the delivery, and five thousand dollars will scarcely pay for the sheds and purchase the tools. There must be some means of conveying the stone to the city. Again, there is so much labor unemployed that I don't think it is best for the city of Boston to start opposition to them. If the present police regulations were enforced, they would get rid of the tramp nuisance. Let them be sent down to the Chardon-street Home and be made to saw wood. I think there are enough laboring men who need subsistence, without putting tramps to work in opposition to them.

Mr. Sampson of Ward 17—This order meets the entire approval of the directors. It does not affect the laboring men here. There is a class of men who seek the island for a home during the winter and stay there, and it is expected that this plan will reduce the number of these men there during the winter. I think it will be a great benefit to the city and prove very economical in the end. The first cost will be considerable, as the order indicates; but they will be there for all time, and the expense will be very small.

Mr. McGaragle of Ward 8—I fail to see how we are going to get the stone from Deer Island to the city without hiring an extra steamer; certainly the J. Putnam Bradlee would n't be suitable for this kind of business. But I am thinking that the Board of Directors for Public Institutions are taking steps to put inmates there; because, if they find they are going to get sheds to cover them from the weather, and further, that they are going to get something to eat three times a day, they will be pretty sure to go there.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—I desire to inform the gentleman that the granite will be delivered at the island by sloops from Rockport, at one dollar a ton, on the wharf. One or two expert mechanics will be employed to superintend the work, and the male inmates will be obliged to cut these stones, which will be landed by the Rockport Granite Company or some other company.

Mr. McGaragle—I understand that; but they don't propose to carry this stone from Deer Island to Boston. I want to know how you are going to get this stone to Boston?

The order was passed in concurrence. On motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 13, the rule was suspended to allow him to move a reconsideration, which was moved by him and lost.

STONY BROOK.

The order for a special committee to take charge of the improvement of Stony Brook, the estimated cost of improvement not to exceed $133,000 (City Doc. No. 86); and also an order for a loan of $133,000—all money received for betterments or otherwise to be used for the redemption and cancellation of said loan—was considered under unfinished business.

Mr. Brown of Ward 23—In order that the members of this Council may fully understand the importance of this Stony Brook matter, which is now before us, I desire to go back a few years to the first movements of the town of West Roxbury to abate the evils of the overflow of the brook within its limits, caused in a measure by obstructions and encroachments by the abutters on its borders, more especially on the line of the brook which flowed through the city of Roxbury. I propose to inform the Council what has been done in the Stony Brook interest up to the present time. This Stony Brook matter is no new scheme, which is now under consideration. Some fifteen years ago the attention of the selectmen of West Roxbury was called to investigate the sanitary condition of the overflowed lands within the limits of the town. The mode of relief of this great nuisance in the midst of our people was freely discussed by those in authority, but for a long time they could not see their way clear to recommend the means for the better drainage of the territory.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13 inquired if it would be in order to call for the special assignment for 7.45 o'clock [widening of Commercial street], and the President said it would not.

Mr. Brown—It became more and more apparent to the inhabitants of the town that the periodical freshets, which occurred in spring and fall, were continually becoming a greater nuisance to the inhabitants, especially to those living on the low lands. Some ten years ago this nuisance became so great, by affecting the health of our people who resided in the valley of the brook, that the physicians of the town brought the matter before the selectmen and urged some action which should lead to the abatement of the imperative causes of increased sickness in the town from these stagnant waters. Those in authority could devise no means of relief within their own power. In 1867 several prominent gentlemen of West Roxbury and the city of Roxbury petitioned to the Legislature of Massachusetts, praying for the enactment of a law authorizing their respective municipalities to take land to straighten and deepen the channel of Stony Brook, for the purpose of procuring better drainage of the low lands bordering on said brook. By such an act it was hoped that this standing nuisance in our town might be abated and the health of our people would not be jeopardized by the overflowing of the territory in the valley at Jamaica Plain in times of freshets. The town employed counsel to represent its case at the General Court, and to urge favorable action upon the petition. In 1868 an act was passed by the Legislature, entitled "An act to authorize the town of West Roxbury and the city of Boston to improve the drainage of Stony Brook and its tributaries." The town of West Roxbury immediately took measures to commence operations within its limits under the act. Money was appropriated and some improvements made during that year by the selectmen. They employed Mr. Bradley, Superintendent of the Boston sewers, to make surveys and profiles for some general plan which should connect with such improvements as Boston would be likely to make. It was hoped that the city authorities of Boston would act promptly in this important matter to carry out the plan contemplated by the act, but nothing was done that year by either municipality further than to make the surveys and the removal of some slight obstructions in the channel of the brook in the limits of West Roxbury. At the annual town meeting in 1869 the sum of \$25,000 was appropriated to enable the selectmen to commence the improvement of the channel of the brook under the act. After due consideration of the whole matter by both municipalities it was thought that the contemplated improvements should be done under the supervision of a competent commission, and it was decided to petition the Legislature for an act authorizing the appointment of commissioners by the town of West Roxbury and the city of Boston to carry out the necessary improvements, award damages and assess betterments. In 1870 the Legislature passed an act conforming to the above-named petition. Under this new act the town appointed three commissioners with full powers to go on and complete the improvement contemplated within its limits, and it was hoped at this time that Boston would do likewise. During that year the West Roxbury Commissioners devoted their time to the taking of lands and paying for same, and did nothing to the channel of the brook. The city did nothing that year. In 1871 the commissioners entered into negotiations with the authorities of Boston, which promised a satisfactory settlement of the joint interest between the two municipalities as to the immediate commencement and carrying out of the improvement of the brook. The West Roxbury Commissioners expended about \$25,000 that year on the brook, and at the close of the year Boston had done nothing in this direction within its limits to relieve the hundreds of human beings suffering on the line of the brook at Jamaica Plain and from the overflowing of the waters, which could not pass through the limits of Boston to tide water for obstructions created by man in the natural channel of the brook within its limits. In 1872 the West Roxbury Commissioners reported to the selectmen that they had taken a strip of land thirty feet in width from the Hyde Park to the Roxbury line, being a distance of about  $3\frac{1}{2}$  miles, and that they had nearly completed their works within the limits of the town, and had settled with the most of the abutters for the lands taken. The commissioners also stated in their report that they had endeavored, in all proper ways, to obtain the cooperation of the city of Boston in this important matter, but had failed. At this time the question of annexation of the town of West

Roxbury to Boston was agitated, and the interest of the Stony Brook project was not so well cared for, for a time, by our people. In 1873 the commissioners made their final report to the town, saying they had expended about $43,000 on the improvement, within the town limits, and had completed the important matter intrusted to their care. And at this point, Mr. President, the town of West Roxbury, its inhabitants, together with Stony Brook, became a portion of Boston by annexation, and the first movement made by Boston to relieve the many sufferers residing in the valley of Stony Brook, within its newly acquired territory by annexation, was in the year 1874, when an order was presented to the Board of Aldermen requesting some information as to what action was necessary to complete the improvement of the channel of Stony Brook, commenced by the town of West Roxbury. This order was referred to the Committee on Sewers, and Alderman Power, chairman of said committee, reported back that his committee had been advised by the City Solicitor that the city would be liable in proceeding under the previous acts of 1868 and 1870 to pay damages for the contamination of the waters of Stony Brook, which was used by manufacturers within the limits of old Roxbury, so-called; and the following order was recommended and passed:

"Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be authorized to petition to the Legislature for the passage of an act to enable the city of Boston to straighten, deepen and improve the channel of Stony Brook within its limits."

This petition was presented and granted; and the full provisions of said act will be found in chapter 196 of the acts and resolves of 1874. Under this new act it was expected by the entire population of the West Roxbury District that the city would at once take the necessary steps to carry out and complete the long contemplated improvements in the channel of the brook—which had been commenced by the town of West Roxbury six years ago. At this time the physicians of Ward 23 demanded of the citizens of the ward that something should be done for the sanitary benefit of the ward, and a strong petition was presented to the City Government, signed by Alden Bartlett and many others, demanding immediate relief from these troublesome waters. This petition was referred to the Committee on Sewers, and its chairman, Alderman Viles, reported back that the expense of completing this job was too heavy for the Sewer Committee to undertake under its appropriation, and recommended that a special appropriation should be made for the Stony Brook improvement, also recommended its reference to a joint special committee, and it was finally referred to the Street Commissioners, who reported back to the Sewer Committee the estimated cost of land damages in the Roxbury or Highland District. The city of Boston and the Providence Railroad Corporation did jointly expend the sum of about $2000 in constructing culverts under the streets at Forest Hills station during the season of 1876. And here, Mr. President, the present City Government finds Stony Brook in its sluggish and unhealthy condition. Here this Council finds hundreds of human beings whose lives are endangered, year after year, by the unhealthy condition they are placed in, and compelled to submit to this wicked nuisance. Mr. President, it is unnecessary for me to try to picture to this Council the inevitable danger of sickness, resulting from such causes as are produced by living in houses whose cellars are partially filled with stagnant water. During the past spring the Councilmen in this board, representing Ward 23, appealed to the Board of Health, by the earnest solicitations of doctors, ministers and people of the West Roxbury District, to report to this City Government the sanitary condition of the brook, and the people residing in the valley at Jamaica Plain. The Board of Health reported that it had visited the location asked for and had found 126 dwelling houses and one schoolhouse between Boylston and Forest Hills station—a distance of about one mile—which were more or less flooded during the freshet of the past spring to the depth of three inches to five feet, and the duration of water was from two days to four weeks. And, Mr. President and gentlemen of this Council, the Board of Health reported that they found 750 men, women and children occupying these 126 houses and one schoolhouse flooded with Stony Brook waters to the depth of five feet or less, and remaining in many instances four weeks; and, sir, this sad state of things is found in the city of Boston in Ward 23, and in the midst of a progressive and civilized community. The Board of Health did report to this Council that the city should do something to protect the health and lives of these people.

Mr. Brown's time having expired, on motion of Mr. Clarke of Ward 22 the rule was suspended and his time was extended.

Mr. Brown—An order was offered in this Council by a member from Ward 23 asking this body to appoint a special committee to investigate this matter with the view of remedying the intolerable evil—and there was a joint special committee of both branches appointed. This committee has done its duty and I refer the Council to the report of the committee on this matter. We asked for an appropriation of $133,000 to complete and forever settle the Stouy Brook troubles, we hope. The Finance Committee approved of the undertaking unanimously and provided for the means; therefore, the Board of Aldermen has passed the order appropriating the $133,000 unanimously. And now, Mr. President, the last act of this scene is before this body of men who have this sacred trust committed to their honor for the final passage of the order in concurrence. And I hope it will pass unanimously—and that the work may be commenced at once; in order to abate this intolerable nuisance as soon as possible, I desire to state to this Council that the representatives here from Ward 23 and advocates of this measure, are not here in the interest of any land speculators. We proclaim our disinterestedness on this subject in the interest of our people, and in the interest of humanity and our honest duty. There are about 180 acres of meadows and low lands in Ward 23 which are flowed by the waters of Stony Brook and its tributaries, which are of little value in its present condition. These lands will be all drained by the completion of the channel of the brook as contemplated; and your committee say in their report, that in their opinion, the betterments will nearly pay the expense of the improvement. The lands connected with the 127 houses which are flooded in the valley of the brook at Jamaica Plain are not included in the 180 acres of meadows and low lands. Mr. President, in conclusion, I sum up the whole matter under consideration. Stony Brook, as it now exists in Ward 23, is an intolerable nuisance to the whole people of the ward. It is unhealthy, and the lives of hundreds of our people are endangered, and $133,000 will forever make us healthy and happy, as regards Stony Brook. I now, Mr. President, submit the whole matter to the wise consideration of this branch of the City Government.

COMMERCIAL STREET.

Mr. Fraser of Ward 6 called up the special assignment for 7.45 P. M., viz.:

Order for a loan of $1,000,000 for widening, grading and repaving Commercial street, between Eastern avenue and Charles River Bridge, and for paying damages occasioned thereby.

Mr. Richards of Ward 10—That the street which it is proposed to widen is narrow and poor: that upon it are many shabby and dilapidated buildings, unfit for human habitation or any other purpose; and that the proposed widening would result in the removal of many of these old buildings, in the improvement of the street, and in a rise in value of the estates upon it, I do not deny. I concede the propriety and the full force of this argument for it, and I heartily wish that the financial condition of the city would not only warrant this, but also other and even larger expenditures for the improvement of streets, places and buildings in various other parts of the city. If I thought it wise to enter upon the business of street widening at this time, I might not object to commence on this part of Commercial street. But in view of what we have already done, and especially of the enterprises which we have entered upon, and are bound to go on with to completion, unless we want to incur the shame of the recorded folly of those who fail in attempts to build without counting the cost, I question the expediency of entering upon this business of street widening in general at this time. I doubt if I can better use part of the time during which I bespeak your patience than in referring briefly to some of the largest of these appropriations made, and to those enterprises to which we have irrevocably committed the city within the last ten months. Let me mention, as I pass, that the appropriations made for street purposes in the general appropriation bill are $1,125,000—

$850,000 for paving, $125,000 for street widening in general. $150,000 for the extension of West Chester park. These are three only, though the largest of the general appropriations for the year for street purposes; this does not include any appropriations or expenditures for commons and squares—which amount to $90,000 more. But is the special appropriation to which I ask your attention; the first is that of $3,713,000 for the new sewer, an expenditure inevitable and unavoidable, but not the less large, not the less to be paid, nor is it the less likely to require as much more to complete the work, and what the final aggregate cost of this great undertaking will be, no one can say; then came the appropriation of $450,000 for land—if indeed it can with any propriety of language be called land—for the Back Bay park, and I venture to assert that that amount will be but the earnest of what the park will absorb. Who of us lives to see it completed will have seen the cost counted by millions—with fifteen acres of macadamized avenues, its water park of stone bridges. Then comes the abolition of the tolls of the East Boston ferries; in my judgment an unfortunate act—a constant drain from the treasury of at least $250,000 per year; an experiment which many persons believe will prove to be what Voltaire called the royal gardens at Versailles—“the bottomless pit for the public money.” Then there is the appropriation of $350,000 for a new English High School building—a worthy and necessary object, but none the less to be paid for. There have been various other quite large appropriations and expenditures for commons and squares, for dedication of the new monument, for land and other damages, and judgments against the city, not to mention by name some expenditures which have done not a little to injure the good name and credit of our city. All amount to a very large sum, and were appropriations made at a time of the existence of a large debt, and of continued unprecedented depression in all departments of business, and when we were required and professed to act here in the spirit and interest of economy. Before us is the proposition to buy a new vegetable market at a cost of $320,000, of doubtful utility and expediency, unless our citizens can have some guarantee that, after we have bought it, they may have something left to buy the vegetables with. The spectre of the Stony Brook nuisance still stalks abroad over the territory of the Back Bay, notwithstanding the assurances that the location of a park there would extinguish it. The estimated cost for the removal of the nuisances of the Roxbury Canal is $392,000. And I agree that whatever is necessary for the health of the city must be done. These places, where is bred and where lurks the “pestilence that walketh in darkness,” must be purified. For it money is required and must be paid.

The appropriations made and asked for on sanitary grounds within the last year, including the new sewers, amount to $5,000,000. This, of course, does not include the $1,125,000 for streets and paving, or the $450,000 for the park, though passed at last as a sanitary measure; nor the $90,000 about spent on commons and squares. And, sir, I cannot vote to increase this long list of large and unusual expenditures now, except for the most necessary and urgent reasons, and, I was about to say, for those things which are indispensable to the preservation of the city. I know that those who hesitate to join the popular clamor for any scheme put forth in the name or guise of public improvement may be called “old fogies,” conservatives who are not up with the times, etc., and will be ridiculed at any expression of fear in regard to the burden or increase of the burden of taxes; but I believe it is a time when we should here, as some of us do at home, exercise a rigid discrimination in expenditures between those which are quite necessary now and those which, though perhaps desirable, may be deferred. I believe that the present dead weight upon the wheels of business is burdensome taxation, and that we are losing much more than are we gaining by many of our so-called expensive improvements. We are driving the rich beyond our borders, and keeping the poor man in them on starvation prices; and it is a great popular fallacy for the poor man to think that he pays no taxes. The truth is the laboring man pays more in proportion to the rich, for besides the plain fact which every man can see, if he will, that high taxes do make a low price for labor, the laboring man, though he gets no tax bill, pays a tax in the increased price on everything he eats and wears, and in the increased rental of the roof which shelters him from the storm. Taxes enter into the price and cost of all manufactures and of all productions, natural or mechanical, which the consumer has or uses. In fact it is, as theoretically it must be, that the higher taxes are, the more the consumer pays, and the less he can get also for his labor. The rich man always has this advantage, that he can hide his money in bonds or other securities from the reach of the assessor, but the consumer's food, clothing and shanty are unconcealed. His very necessities expose him. So it is a great and stupid mistake for the poor man or laboring man to suppose that a park or a free ferry or a street widening costs him nothing. I assert they cost him many times as much relatively as they do the rich man. I am, of course, speaking of the honest man who earns his support by the sweat of his brow, not of paupers or criminals. But it is said that present money is not required to be raised by taxation; that we can borrow on long credit. Does it never occur to those who are so willing to incur debts for the next generation to pay, that the next generation and the next will have their own expenses and bills to pay? their own battles to fight? the ravages of the wars, fires, pestilence or famine of their own times to repair or provide for? There are times in the lives of cities, as well as of men, when a mortgage upon the inheritable homestead is justifiable, because sometimes necessary; but money borrowed on credit, especially for others to pay, and spent for that which is not necessary, is making a show of generosity upon other men's money! A debt for posterity to discharge is a mortgage upon their inheritance, and a lien upon their industries. Yes, it is a pledge in advance of the future poor man's labor! Honored be the memories of those a generation before us here, that they did not bequeath such burdens to their children! Therefore, as a matter of street improvement merely, I cannot vote for this appropriation at this time. But it is urged that the proposed widening will revive business on the old wharves there, which for many years have stood silent and decaying. If this is true, it is a reason for doing it; but I believe that this rests in assertion and stops there. Because exports and imports are increasing it does not follow that we need a larger number of wharves any more than we need a larger number of vessels, and we know well that a modern steamship—that best illustration of the genius and commercial enterprise of this age—will accomplish as much transportation in any given time as a score of the old ships which used to summer or winter between voyages in these old docks. I do not believe that those old wharves at the North End, useful in their day, are, or can be adapted to the wants of modern steamships or modern ways of shipping. Constructed for other times and other fashions and upon other ideas than those which now prevail, their day has gone by, and I think you might, with as much reason, expect to effect a return of fashionable society to the once aristocratic Charter or Sbeafe street, by increasing their width, as to effect a return of shipping and scenes of business activity upon these old wharves by the widening of Commercial street. I understand that we have no contract, no guarantee or assurance that Constitution wharf will be used by a single steamship company or by any ship of any kind even after the proposed widening is made. And I submit, sir, that I cannot find it among my duties to vote $1,000,000 on any such ground or argument as that suggested for it in this respect. As for widening the street to facilitate the business of other vessels, sailing vessels, at these wharves, the argument for this will not bear examination. Sailing vessels have not left these old wharves because the street is narrow; the street and the wharves are as wide and large as when built, and when, according to tradition, business flourished there! No, sir. Sailing vessels have left and are leaving these old wharves and docks because sailing vessels are leaving the ocean. The future steamships, of which the Great Eastern is the type, are, at least for transoceanic business, superseding them, and for these steamships these old wharves are of no use. And I cannot omit to call attention in this connection to the great wharf and dock facilities and accommodations being constructed on the South Boston flats. If I am correctly informed, there are in the process of construction by the State and various parties and corporations about 300 acres of wharf territory and docks, built of stone, in deep water, more accessible than are the wharves at East Boston, some of which are nearly completed; one, a dock with wharves on either side of 900 feet in length, to be ready for use by January next, surpassing any other dock or wharf accommodation on this continent, and rivalling possibly the splendid works of the kind of Great Britain. They will furnish wharf facilities for the shipping needed in Boston for the next fifty years. It is claimed that the proposed widening will aid the business of several railroads. Very likely; but do either or any of these offer or propose to pay anything towards the expense? I have not heard of it. If any railroad desires to get to Constitution or any other wharf, why should it not purchase a roadway of the intervening owners, or get a charter of the General Court, take the land under it, and pay for it, as other railroads have usually done when they wanted to increase station facilities here? Why might they not as well ask us to lay their track or build an elevator as to provide or furnish them with a roadway without compensation? It strikes me that the railroads are not acting quite fairly in this matter—at all events, with a view to get the lion's share of the benefits, and pay nothing!

This also is the position of the owners of estates on the street, and the owners of the wharves, which it is said will be so much improved and benefited, they do not agree or propose to pay a dollar of the expense; and this puts, or ought to put, an end to all their fine talk about being actuated only by disinterested motives for the public good. As to getting anything back in the way of betterments, I understand from the commissioners that very little if anything could be expected to be recovered in this way, if widened on the land side, as the order contemplates. It is proposed to make the street of an unnecessary width. In the debates which took place in the Board of Aldermen of last year on the subject of street widening, two Aldermen who voted for this widening of 100 feet, both stated that fifty feet for most purposes, and sixty feet, was as wide as any business street in Boston was required to be, and cited at length instances to prove the truth of these their assertions. You will find them on pages 495 and 496 of reports of proceedings for 1876. I agree with those opinions, and I believe that all agree that too wide streets are not desirable. I doubt if, for example, the stores on New Washington street on both sides of it are as valuable for business purposes as the same places were before. It is a fact, I think, that the stores and buildings in the very narrowest parts of Washington street rent for the highest prices. Then consider the grade damages inevitably to follow from laying out this street so wide on the land side. I am informed that at one place, if the street is widened to one hundred feet on that [land] side as proposed, there will be a bank of a perpendicular height of ten feet where Copp's Hill is nearest the street; that at several places the grade of streets where they meet Commercial street will have to be changed for the distance of one or two hundred feet. This would lead to the demand for the levelling the whole of Copp's Hill. I believe that whenever the street is widened, it should be done on the water side—which is not sought or contemplated by the present advocates of this appropriation. The plan of widening on that side, as shown on a plan of Mr. Talbot (which if members have not already I hope they will examine before voting), has many advantages, especially of cheapness and of attractiveness. If you will remove the old buildings on the water side, widen the street to seventy-five feet and remove the railroad track over to the water side, you will have there an attractive avenue, something like, indeed, an embankment, from which, and from the houses on the land side, you have a clear and unobstructed view of the wharves, of the passing vessels, the channel, and the open sea—to the poor in the vicinity not a mean substitute for a park at their own doors. But if you widen it on the land side, leaving the other side and the old buildings standing there, you lose all these attractive features, and the occupants of those houses or stores will have before them only the unchanging and unvarying view of a bank of earth, with a lot of rickety buildings upon it. It would be almost like a tunnel in respect to light, air and general attractiveness, contrasted with the street open on one side to the sea, which I have suggested; everybody, except the land owners on the land side can see this, and yet they say they do not want it widened on the water side; they go so far as to say they want it on the land side or not at all. And I submit that in this also they expose their insincerity when they ask to have it done for the "public good." The plan of Mr. Talbot's, to which I have alluded, makes the street exactly as useful for commercial purposes—but cannot detain you to explain it in detail—beginning at Lewis wharf, cutting a short distance on the water side, so as to make the avenue continuous, then crossing with the widening on the other or land side, as far as Eastern avenue, then crossing again as the street curves, so as to greatly straighten the street. This plan does not take any off from Battery wharf, Union wharf or Constitution wharf; and this plan can be carried out at one-half the cost of the other, because you avoid grade damages and obtain betterments. All considerations of economy, beauty and general utility, except the sale of land, lead to the widening on the water side whenever it is done. Sir, on no ground or reason yet stated do I believe that this expenditure is now so required by the general interest or good of the city as to be expedient or right to make it. I do not say that the street should not ever be widened or improved, though it seems to me that a greater width than sixty or seventy feet is wholly unnecessary ever, beyond that width. The only object can be is to make a market for land which is now probably paying a very small income upon its assessed valuation. In voting against it, I go against my professional interest, and, harder still, the interest and expressed wishes of personal friends, who own property there. But standing here, I look upon our city as a corporation—a savings bank, as it were—of which for the time being I am a trustee, in which all citizens are depositors of their fortunes. If it increases in wealth and prospers, so do the depositors; but it cannot increase in wealth by spoliation of some depositors to give to others; and it is suicidal for one class or one party to try to benefit themselves by plundering the common treasury. In the wreck of financial disaster some spoils might be found and appropriated by those who had the heart to hunt in the ruin, but their joy would be brief, and their small gain be their endless reproach. A single further suggestion. I should be content that the order should be referred to the next City Council. If the people desire this appropriation to be now made they will by their votes and voices say so. But I deny that public sentiment sustains the action of the Board of Aldermen in passing it. The delay of one month can do no harm at least; a desire to carry it through now betrays, it seems to me, a mistrust or suspicion that our action in doing it is not according to the wishes of our constituents; and if they would not have us vote for it, to do so now, because we have the power to do so, would be the abuse of our rights and a misrepresentation of our constituents. If the order is not referred I must vote against its passage; but whatever its fate, I do hope and trust it may be decided and voted upon on its own merits.

Mr. Barnard of Ward 24—I move that the subject be referred to the next City Government, and when the question is taken I call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—I think, to say the least, that the motion is an unfair one to make at this stage of the proceedings. The friends of this measure have allowed the opposition to go on debating this matter, and now the gentleman comes up here and moves that it be referred to the next City Government. I hope no such reference will be made until the matter has been fully discussed by the members of the Council. I think it is an unfair motion to make at this time.

Mr. Mowry of Ward 11—I agree with the gentleman last up that it is unfair to cut off debate at this time. I hope the gentleman will withdraw the motion.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13 called for a division of the question, which the President ruled out of order. The Council refused to order the yeas and nays.

Mr. Clarke of Ward 22—The gentleman last up stated that the widening of the street on the land side was going to interfere with the grade of Copp's Hill. Now, sir, some weeks ago I introduced an order in this Council to invite the members to go down and view the proposed widening of Commercial street, for the very purpose that he, as well as other members of this Council, might inform themselves; that we might have the City Engineer with us to explain the route where this extension is proposed to be carried. But he did not choose to go, and I suppose other members did not; but if he had gone, one-half of his speech would not have been delivered. The Engineer shows us that it don't require to be widened upon the west side at all, so far as Copp's Hill is concerned, and it does not interfere with any grade of the street from the hill. After they get down to Commercial street, where you come to Copp's Hill, they go to the other side and widen on a very small portion of the gas company's works. At the same time, it is proposed—after the gas company's works are removed from that section of the city, as will be done at some future time, not a great while hence—that portion may then be widened to the same width, as far as Charlestown bridge. Well, sir, I don't understand that this is any railroad proposition brought here to benefit any particular railroad. It is a project to widen the most important commercial avenue that we have in this city, and the only avenue upon which we have a water front suitable for discharging large vessels. Sir, the great mistake that the city of Boston made a few years ago was in commencing at the foot of Summer street and laying out Atlantic avenue to India street. The improvement should have been commenced at the other end, at Charlestown bridge, and gone the other way. Those wharves at the south part of the city are only fit for small coasters to come up to at high tide; whereas, the wharves upon this proposed widening are all on deep water, where vessels drawing twenty-five feet of water can go at low water; and it is the most important water front that we have in this city of Boston. Now, sir, some years ago, the principal part of the business of Boston was done at the North End. I remember the time when all the caulking and the repairing of ships was done at those wharves. But what has been the result? The city of Boston in its economy—and it is the same thing now—did not widen the street and give facilities for doing business there, and the business increased so that they were obliged to go to East Boston and Charlestown to do the business which should have been done in this portion of the city. In 1838 Mr. William Eager, a Boston merchant, invested a large fortune in building ships of seven or eight hundred tons, which was at that time considered a very silly thing to do, and they called it Eager's folly—the idea of building vessels large enough to carry 700 tons. I remember seeing his vessels lying at Central wharf idle for a year, because they could not get employment. But it was found that they could go South and get cotton and carry it to Europe for much less than smaller vessels, and instead of being Eager's folly it proved a success, and other merchants followed his plan. But we have not kept up with the times, and have gone into the promoting of manufacturing interests rather than of commerce. We have spent some five or six millions of dollars in widening streets to keep the shoe and wool trades and other branches of industry in the city of Boston. Gentlemen say that manufacturing trade is leaving Boston. What is the reason? It is because that business can be done cheaper in other cities than it can be done here, and consequently the only thing we can fall back upon is what we ought to have encouraged in the first place, and that is to benefit the commerce of Boston. We have the best commercial water-front outside of New York; we should foster it and not lose it. The only thing to do is to give the merchants proper facilities for landing their cargoes at the wharves and delivering them in the city. It is a well-known fact that a manufacturing business can be extended year after year. A man can build manufacturing buildings larger and larger, year after year. It is not so with commerce. Unless you made your provisions in advance it wont come here. When a captain proposes to take a cargo, and if it is stated that it is to go to Boston, he asks, What are my facilities for discharging when I get there? It is well known that captains of vessels will not come where they have to pay a percentage for every bridge that they have to pass through. You may talk about Chester park, or Stony Brook, or the suburban residences; but what will they be worth if we lose our commerce? for that, in fact, is the only thing we have to rely upon. Anything that promotes that, it is our duty to do. It isn't whether Boston can afford to do it; it is whether Boston can afford not to do it. Now, sir, the gentleman says that perhaps this widening will accommodate Constitution wharf. But, sir, if I understand it aright—and I was down there a few days ago—we have several other important wharves besides Constitution Wharf. We know that the principal part of the marble that comes to this country from the Mediterranean is brought to this port, and that the facilities for discharging it are not surpassed in this country. What is the result? They cannot get from that wharf with a loaded team. They have to hitch on a block and tackle on the building opposite, in order to turn their wagons to cart it through the city. It is a disgrace to Boston that she requires her merchants to deliver their cargoes in that way. When this matter first came up I supposed it would be acted upon. The gentleman says the press is against this project; but in looking over the daily papers I don't understand that they oppose any important project for the benefit of the interest of the city of Boston. I took the trouble to cut from the Boston Herald of Oct. 13 a little paragraph which may interest somebody here:

"A time shipment of cotton made from Memphis, Oct. 4, arrived at Norfolk Oct. 9, was immediately placed aboard the steamship Johns Hopkins, and was placed on board the steamship Palestine of the Warren line, which sailed from Boston today, and will be delivered in Liverpool on or about the 25th inst., making the quick time of twenty-one days from Memphis to Liverpool."

Now, sir, that fact shows that we can deliver cotton from the Southern States in a shorter time than it can be shipped here by rail, and then shipped from here by steamship. The article continues—

"Three European steamers which sailed hence today for Europe took out in the aggregate 133,000 bushels of grain. Four other sailing vessels which have sailed hence this week took out 131,000 bushels of corn.

"The imports of foreign coal at this port during the past week were the largest on record, comprising 5218 tons, of which 2534 tons were from Newcastle, Eng., and the balance from the Provinces."

Now, sir, gentlemen who went down to view this widening will remember that there were two steamships at the Boston Gas Company's works discharging coal, and since that time there have been several more there, and after discharging coal they have had to go to New York to get cargoes for Europe. If we had the facilities for loading those vessels, they would not have to go to New York for cargoes. We are losing business every day from Boston because we don't look after our commercial interests. We may lay out our parks and improve our sewerage, but we must keep looking after our commercial interests; for if we lose that we lose everything. Then, sir, on Oct. 17, the paper referred to says—

"Since Jan. 1, 1877, forty-three East Indianmen have arrived at this port, all laden with immense and valuable cargoes. Seventeen ships and harques are now on the way to Boston, all due before Jan. 1."

Making sixty East Indianmen that have arrived and are on their way and due this year. That shows that our East India trade is reviving, instead of our losing it. We are not losing our commerce, but our manufacturing business. Now let us hold on to our commerce, if we have sense enough to do it. Now, sir, in regard to other branches of business. I see by the papers the past week that one of the largest firms in Boston was obliged to suspend business—the Boston Lead Works, a very wealthy corporation, who have made money in days before. But what is the trouble? It is this, sir. They have elegant works and machinery for doing business; but lead is now manufactured in the States where the ore is procured, and they can make lead pipe there and compete with and undersell our Boston firms. That is what the trouble is with that branch of business. And so it is getting to be with the furniture trade. Out West they can manufacture furniture cheaper than we can do it here. Formerly we used to furnish all the West and most of the Southern trade with furniture. I know of a vessel today that is loading for Africa, and the only cargo she can carry at an advantage is furniture and New England rum. We have lost our Western trade, and have got to find a foreign trade; and if we wish to keep up our manufacturing interests we must hunt up foreign markets for our manufactures, and we must give our business men facilities equal to those of any other city in the United States.

Mr. Danforth of Ward 10—If he only knew it, the gentleman who just sat down has made the strongest argument I have heard against the widening of Commercial street. He speaks of 133,000 bushels of grain to be exported. I wonder if he is aware of what it requires to export it. It would take three hundred full cars, and I would like to know how they are going to get through Commercial street. There is no public necessity for widening Commercial street. Since this matter has been before the City Government I have been down to Commercial street about twice a week. The last time I was there I counted nine teams between Eastern avenue and Charlestown bridge. I went into a number of places and asked if there was any necessity for widening the street, and whether any blocks occurred there; and they said that all the blocks they had were when some members of the City Government came down there, and then they got up a block. Now, in regard to marble; there is no marble trade that causes any business there. Those wharves are simply used for storage by vessels that come and discharge their cargoes. One house landed about 90,000 packages of sugar at Fisk's wharf and carted it through the city, and the teamster told me he had no trouble about getting through there. The afternoon the Council were there they had a large six-horse team with a large block of marble upon it, and they kept it standing till the Council came in sight; and when the members of the Council came in sight they turned it, and of course it blocked the street. Another team came through there with six hogsheads of sugar on it, and it was taken from South Boston and brought to Commercial street while the Councilmen were there. People who live on the street tell me there is no necessity for it, and that there are no blocks except when the Councilmen are there. So far as the business at Constitution wharf is concerned, there are about 450 feet of track upon it, and they can discharge three cars at a time at the elevator. Now, anybody who can figure can tell how long it will take to load a steamer if they have to unload those three cars and take them back to the Fitchburg depot before bringing any more on. No steamers come to Constitution wharf except one line from Europe twice a week, and they take away no cargo from here, but go around to New York. They cannot do a steamer export business at Constitution wharf. They have not more than about half as much land as the Boston & Albany use at East Boston, where there are about thirty acres and five miles of track for cars to stand upon; and they can run twelve cars through the elevator at once; and even then they have not room enough. The steamers of the Warren line used to go to Constitution wharf, but they have gone to East Boston. The gentleman speaks about cotton coming here and going to Liverpool. It is all taken to East Boston. It is very much like giving up steam railroads and going back to sailing vessels. The business is all done by steamships; they have got to have room, as they frequently discharge and take in a cargo in thirty-six hours. The cargo of one steamship would cover the whole of Constitution or any other wharf that they could get there. So far as the facilities for the Fitchburg Railroad and the Tunnel line are concerned, Boston has already paid forty per cent. of the cost of the tunnel, and I think it should have some benefit of it. Setting aside the financial question, I see no reason for widening Commercial street. So far as business leaving the North End is concerned, there is no city in this country which grows to the North. Every city in this country grows to the South and West. It is not the way population moves. Even in New York the heavy business has grown toward Jersey City. I hope the order will not pass.

The motion to refer to the next City Government was put and declared carried. Mr. Flynn (of Ward 13) doubted the vote, the Council divided—21 for, 31 against.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—This question of the widening of Commercial street is one that has occasioned me—and I have no doubt has occasioned all the members of the Government—very considerable worry of mind. When the matter was first brought before us I was very ready to say that there was nothing in it and that I would vote against it. As time passed on, and it became necessary to investigate it, I tried to do so fairly and thoroughly. I found that there were arguments—and it seems to me, strong arguments—on both sides. The man who examines this question candidly must see that there are two sides to it. Gentlemen on one side make much of the increase in value to the wharf property to result from this widening; on the other side they say that this amounts to nothing. One gentleman argues that he would not widen a street for the use of a railroad; others that this improvement is necessary to get the good from the expenditure of money made by the State on the Hoosac Tunnel. It seems to me the truth of this matter lies midway between these two opinions. Undoubtedly the widening of Commercial street will benefit the wharf property there. I know that is the opinion of some as shrewd and as able men as there are in the city of Boston, men not connected with the property, and who do not own the wharves there. Persons who have made it their special business to look after the affairs of the city of Boston for a long period of years have expressed a decided opinion that that wharf property would be greatly benefited by the widening of Commercial street. We are all familiar with the present condition of this street—Atlantic avenue—a wide avenue leading from South Boston along a great portion of our wharves and then stopping at Eastern avenue, and narrowing down until, at its narrowest part, it becomes too narrow for a business street. We know that the Legislature of the State has given to a private corporation the right to lay its tracks in that street, and that over that street a very large amount of freight is drawn by means of steam cars. We know the effect of that freighting business has been to almost entirely destroy the value of the dwelling-house property on that street. I have made it my business to go through that street a good many times this year, for no other purpose than to observe the effect upon travel there, and for one I was convinced that in warm weather these dwelling houses must be almost uninhabitable. The windows could not be opened because at any time, either day or night, a passing locomotive might pass along and fill the room with dust and smoke.

Again, we must remember that the action of the City Government in widening Atlantic avenue and stopping just where it did has materially depreciated the value of a large property there. The property along the wharves and the property along the street cannot be improved while this question is pending. No sane man would put out a large amount of money for the erection of valuable buildings, either on the wharves or on the land side of this street while this question is unsettled. Any person who has been familiar with the affairs of the City Government knows that this matter has been before the City Government ever since the widening of Atlantic avenue stopped. Every year this thing comes in and probably every year it will come in until it is passed upon. Now, it seems to me it is better for us to stop right here and recognize the fact that it is our duty to investigate fairly any matter that is before us, and not attempt to save ourselves trouble by throwing this all upon the shoulders of the next City Government. We know that they will not take this matter up till it comes to the end of the year, as we have done; and the chances are that it will not be investigated, or the time may come when it will be rushed through without much investigation.

We must remember one thing more,—that whether or not the traffic that comes from the northern and western railroads goes to the wharves which lie off of Commercial street, or to the wharves at South Boston, that traffic must come over this street; that is, the traffic that comes in over the Hoosac Tunnel line. If the anticipations of those who guide the affairs of our State are to be realized, a very large business will be done in the way of bringing grain from the West through the Hoosac Tunnel. That grain will come over the Fitchburg Railroad, and must pass over this street to get to the wharves at South Boston, or to the wharves before you come to South Boston, unless it is stopped at the Grand Junction Railroad, which is controlled by the Boston & Albany Railroad, and carried over to East Boston in that way. But it will be observed that the effect of running the freight cars of the Hoosac Tunnel line over the line of the Boston & Albany Railroad at once puts an end to that which the authorities of the city wish to promote—profitable competition. If you have to move freight over the line of a competing road, even if only for half a mile, by that half-mile they may destroy competition by putting on such a charge as will destroy it. We all know the business of moving grain from the West is done at a very small profit, at best. Now then, is it for the interest of the city of Boston that we should encourage the bringing of grain here? There is one very indisputable fact that has been made to appear clearly within the last few years; that is, that the city of New York is in some way losing its trade; that the cities of Philadelphia and Baltimore have been gaining from it largely, and Boston to some slight extent. What is the reason? As far as I know it is this: That the competition of competing railroads has destroyed the benefit which the city of New York has derived from the Erie Canal, so that they no longer can put grain into New York cheaper, on an average through the year, than it can be put into Baltimore, Philadelphia and Boston. And, furthermore, the terminal facilities of New York are not good; not as good as they are at either Philadelphia or Baltimore. A slight advance in cost affects freights largely and makes a very great difference in the cost of grain there. For that reason New York has been losing the business of exporting grain; and in losing its export business it rapidly loses its import business. I think there is a gentleman in this Council, a member of it, who has told me that he himself was largely engaged in the importing business; that formerly the vessels which brought the article which he imported from Europe brought their freight to Boston, and that Boston was the great distributing point for his particular trade. In the course of time Boston no longer had any article of export and the vessels which formerly brought his goods here stopped coming here and went to New York, where they could get a return cargo. It would not pay them, as a matter of expense, to come to Boston and discharge their cargo and then go to New York for a return cargo. They, therefore, went to New York, and that gentleman tells me that now his goods are imported at New York, that New York is the distributing point for his trade, and that he does his business there, though he still maintains his business house here.

Now, if we can encourage the grain trade here, we ought to do it. It is surely going to benefit every business interest of Boston. I am aware that every time we ask for one of these large appropriations for a public improvement we are touching upon a very difficult question. We must remember that we are appropriating the money of the citizens of Boston, many of whom have no direct interest, hardly an indirect interest, in the matter in question. Before we vote away that money we must be very certain that there is such a necessity as will justify us in doing so. Now, what are the interests connected with this street which seem to make the widening a public necessity? First—It is going to give us a street over which two lines of railway can be laid down, and over which the freight traffic coming from the Hoosac Tunnel line can pass and go either to Constitution wharf or Battery wharf, or the wharves in South Boston. Gentlemen here have said that no business could be done upon Constitution wharf or upon Battery wharf. I have not mastered that question, and I cannot say whether they are right or not. I have been told—and this is a matter which the City Council can, before finally passing upon it, determine by evidence—I am told that large capitalists are prepared to put large sums of money into improvements on these wharves in the way of erecting large elevators, such as would be capable of sustaining a weekly line of steamers; that the presence of these elevators will be used for bringing in freight and getting a combination of different freight lines using the Hoosac Tunnel to guarantee to steamers minimum return cargoes, which will result in bringing there, at least, a weekly line of steamers. That is something that should be investigated before we determine this question, and if it is true I think we should say there is one interest which would be subserved.

Second—There is this public interest to be subserved. The city of Boston has permitted—although perhaps that is hardly the proper term, for the Legislature of Massachusetts has granted to this corporation the right to take that street, but the city never resisted it. It was felt that it was for the benefit of the city that a railroad should be allowed to run through there, the city permitted it to stay there, and it has practically destroyed the value of the private property bordering on that street, and it seems to me we ought to do something towards repairing that injury. The third thing, it seems to me, is this: We put through Atlantic avenue to a certain point; we have stopped there. We are holding this question, and it is being agitated year after year, saying to the people there, "Some time this street may go through." Perhaps it will, perhaps it will not. We are preventing them from improving their property, and so far we are damaging the city. That is an argument in favor of doing so much as to have an investigation whether it should be done, and for making that investigation so thorough and so full that, whatever conclusion may be arrived at, it will put an end to all questions of widening or not widening.

Now the gentleman from Ward 10 who spoke upon this matter voiced my views as to the way this street should be widened, exactly. I believe it would be utterly against the interests of the city to widen it on the land side. Any person who has passed along that street knows that his explanation of it is correct. If you widen it upon the land side you put such buildings as are upon the water side way down—you have the practical effect of lowering them. If the street is widened something in accordance with the plan here, it will give a street which will improve very largely the value of the property on the land side for business purposes or for the purpose of residences. It would give a wide avenue extending from South Boston by Eastern avenue to Charlestown bridge. Gentlemen have used as an argument against the widening of this street the fact that they have passed through it very often and have seen very few teams going through it. Now strange as it may seem, that has not occurred to me as an argument against the widening. We know, as a matter of fact, that there are a great many teams which have to pass from the Northern and Eastern depots, and from Charlestown to the South End, and to South Boston, and Commercial street would be as direct a line for them as they could have. They do not go that way now because they are liable to be interrupted at any time in the narrow part of the street. They choose the other course; they clog up our present business street—Washington street—and the other business streets running in that direction; they put a burden upon them which ought not to be put upon them, and which would not be put upon them if Commercial street was a wide street as Atlantic avenue now is.

But I believe that entirely too much money has been asked for for this purpose. I believe it can be widened at a great deal less expense. I believe there are persons who should contribute to the expense who, under the present law—and as this order stands at present—would not be compelled to pay a cent. The Old Colony Railroad, the Providence Railroad, the Fitchburg Railroad, are very largely interested in it. They should contribute and contribute largely. Some of the larger wharves are interested in it, much more largely than are the smaller wharves. That is to say, more largely in proportion to their value. The larger wharves would receive a greater benefit than the smaller wharves would. Under the new condition of affairs, their property would be increased in value more in proportion than the smaller ones. They should pay a larger proportion than the system of betterments would compel them to pay.

Before I sit down I propose to offer an amendment to the order as it stands now. I will read it now, and will offer it as an amendment.

By striking out the words "one million," and inserting in place thereof the words "eight hundred thousand," and by adding the words "provided, however, that no land shall be taken or other thing involving the expenditure of money done, until the abutters and persons interested in the widening of the street give to the Street Commissioners satisfactory bonds to pay one-fourth of the estimated expense of widening said street"; and by inserting after the words "for the widening of Commercial street" the words "on the water side."

Mr. Thompson's time having expired, on motion of Mr. Richardson of Ward 10 the rule was suspended and his time extended.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—As a matter of fact, the whole order is somewhat improperly before us. It is properly the business of the Street Commissioners, who recommend a widening, to have their plans and their estimates made, and then to put before us only the simple question, "Will you widen such a street in such a manner for such a cost?" and then we can pass upon that. But this order puts before us something indeterminate. It says, "Will you appropriate a large sum of money and allow the Street Commissioners to do what they please?" I, for one, would not vote that money in that way. But it is also true that before a regular plan can be made and submitted to us, it would call for the outlay of a considerable amount of money, which would be saved by considering the subject generally and by making a conditional appropriation such as we would be willing to approve. The amendment I propose to offer will restrain the expenditure to be made by the city to about $600,000. Now, with all the consideration I could give this matter—and I have thought of it a great deal and have been troubled about it a great deal, because my instinct and personal feeling, in the first place, were to oppose this motion—I have come to this condition myself, that I should be willing to vote this year for an appropriation equivalent to $600,000 to widen that street on the water side, and give it such a widening as $800,000 would do. I think that would result in making a street somewhere about eighty feet wide—that is my impression of the Street Commissioners' estimate—and would straighten that part of the street from Atlantic avenue to Hanover street. The larger wharves with sufficient length for steamers will lose no part of their land, and the smaller wharves will lose nothing they cannot afford to lose. The city will get a good wide street and an end will be put to this question. I do not use this as an argument in favor of it. It is simply an argument for investigation, because this is a question that is sure to trouble you until it is settled. If you decide it without proper investigation it will come back. You must stamp it down one way or the other. You must do it or make sure that it can never be done. I say, taking that idea of it, if you think there is reason for it, you will know how to act. I do not think the argument that has been used here, that we have done a great deal, and should leave something for our successors, is the true principle of public duty. You are to examine and act upon the things that are brought before you by the proper authorities. The Street Commissioners are the proper authorities to bring this matter before you; they have brought it before you, and you should examine it and act upon it.

At the suggestion of the gentleman from Ward 10, I will insert in my amendment before the word "persons" the word "corporations."

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—I hope that amendment will not prevail. I have no objection to the first part of it making the appropriation $800,000, but the provisions which are set forth after that I do object to, because, in my opinion, it never could be carried out. I believe that if the street can be widened for $800,000, the city ought to do it, and that the betterments should be assessed by the Street Commissioners as in all other cases. I would therefore call for a division of the question on the amendment.

Mr. Howes of Ward 18—I certainly trust that the amendment will not pass. I also hope that the original order will be voted down. The gentleman who offers the amendment bases it entirely, it seems to me, on the ground that the widening of Commercial street is necessary for the development of our Western trade. Now, sir, if he had studied into the matter a little more thoroughly he would have found that his facts are absolutely bad. That is, that he has no facts to base that argument upon, because it is absolutely impossible for one steamer a week to be accommodated there after the Western trade has been built. It is a mere matter of fact. The distance of track room on which cars can stand and be discharged at the North End is not sufficient. It is absolutely impossible, and after the widening is done steamers from Europe can no more load there than they can at present. The only use that can be made of the North End wharves is for sailing vessels. To a certain extent I agree with the gentleman from Ward 22 that it is very bad that this city has at present no more maritime trade than it now has. I think that he and I perhaps are alone among the members of the Council who have had our ancestors engaged in maritime affairs in Boston for a long number of years. I certainly regret as much as any one to see the North End wharves deserted, but it is a matter of fact that they must be because we have not the commerce and never can have the commerce to put there. He brings up the matter of the East India trade as reviving. Why, sir, the East India trade of today is not one-quarter of what it once was. We have lost all our California trade and we have lost our China trade. We have none at all at present, and even what trade we have with South America has pretty much gone, and our trade with Australia as well. Now, sir, what does this come from? Not from the fault of our wharf accommodations. We have just as large accommodations now as before. But the nature of the trade has changed, and the trade no longer comes to Boston; in fact no longer comes to New York—for many of the things we once imported are now manufactured in this country, and there is no need to import them. The only point, as I said before, in relation to the widening of this street is the matter of facilities for the Western trade, and we cannot facilitate Western trade by any such expenditure of money. The gentleman has said that trade has left New York. The reason it has left New York very largely is not so much owing to railroad competition—though that was in part the cause—but it is on account of excessive taxation; and that is what will prevent trade from coming to Boston, provided we go on keeping up our city debt so as to make all merchants prefer to go to Baltimore or some other city where the rate of taxation is low. The wharves in New York where they load grain are perhaps as narrow and as small as our own. There the steamers are loaded largely from canal boats; and in fact, where they are loaded from elevators they are taken sometimes up the river to load, and at other times the wheat is dumped from the elevators into barges and then carried to the steamer by floating elevators, and they are loaded in that way. But we have not the facilities in Boston to accomplish anything of that kind, and if we had the wharves we now have are sufficient without Commercial street. Taking the matter as a whole, seeing that the expenditure is a very large one, and that the purpose for which it is intended cannot accomplish any good, I simply trust that the order will not pass.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—I merely want to make one statement in reply to the gentleman from Ward 18, as to the facts involved in this case. I think I stated, or I intended to say, that the question relating to bringing trade here involved such great research that it was impossible for any one of us thoroughly to search into it. One of my reasons for offering this amendment is because I believe that the real way of testing the truth of this motion is to let these people directly interested in it test it by their willingness to pull out their pocketbooks and pay. If these railroad corporations and these large wharf-owners are firmly convinced that they can get trade there, they will pay this money. If they will not pay, our appropriation goes for nothing. I offered this amendment for the purpose of putting this investigation on their shoulders and taking it off of ours, who are not competent to make it. It was stated to me by parties that I have every reason to believe, that people who had control of large amounts of money, and who stand as the shrewdest financiers in our city, are ready to make large investments on these two wharves, Constitution and Battery wharves, in the way of erecting large elevators there. Now, if they are willing to put their money out there it must be because they believe there is something in this kind of trade, and I believe they are quite as competent to pass upon this matter as the gentleman from Ward 18.

Mr. Danforth of Ward 10—In relation to the elevator on Constitution wharf and its capacity, I will say the elevator in East Boston holds a million bushels. You can stand 175 freight cars on the track. You gentlemen can easily figure it up. It is a mile from the Fitchburg depot to Constitution wharf.

Mr. Clarke of Ward 22—Does the gentleman say a million bushels?

Mr. Danforth of Ward 10—I said a million.

Mr. Clarke of Ward 22—It holds five hundred thousand bushels.

Mr. Danforth of Ward 10—A million, sir. The elevator on Constitution wharf holds one hundred thousand bushels. A double track from the Fitchburg Railroad to Constitution wharf, with one hundred and seventy-five cars standing and one hundred and seventy-five cars going back would not leave much room for teams or anything else. The Boston & Albany are running three hundred cars a day for their Western business. They have three hundred full cars and three hundred empty cars going back. I do not know what you could do with them on Commercial street or on Constitution wharf. The Fitchburg Railroad Company have a wharf now with just as good water as there is in the harbor. It adjoins the navy yard; it is within an eighth of a mile of the station, but they do not choose to go there, though they have a track to it. Within a mile and a half of their track is Mystic wharf, seven acres; that would accommodate the tunnel business very much better than Constitution wharf. With regard to teaming, I have talked with quite a number of the largest teamsters of Boston and they say the widening of Commercial street, as far as they are concerned, is money thrown away; that what teaming they do to the Northern depots goes across the city, because it is very much nearer. I have talked with a large teamster, who stands at the Fitchburg tracks, and he said he rarely goes through Commercial street, except with something he has to carry to Constitution wharf. If he has anything going as far as Lewis wharf, he goes through Beverly street and Cooper street; and there is no necessity for the widening as far as teaming is concerned. I think this amendment is a very good one, and if it is passed, the street will never be widened, because the real-estate people do not wish to pay for this improvement; they wish to put their property on the city, and the railroads will not pay. I think the street would never be widened, and the passage of the amendment would be the end of it.

Mr. Spenceley of Ward 19—With regard to this part of the amendment, it seems to me that if the abutters would be pleased to raise $200,000 it would be a very large proportion of the amount. As to the widening of this street on the water side, it seems to me it would be a difficult job to do. While our water facilities are as small as they are at present, it seems to me that to cut off forty or fifty feet from our wharves would not be very desirable at the present time. I have thought a great deal about this matter, but I have never fully decided how I should vote. I think I have never stated. I voted against giving it a second reading, because I did not understand the question as it was. I had not looked into it, and had not seen it. But it seems to me that the question which comes before us tonight and which has already been so ably discussed, whether this street should be widened at the present time, and whether there is trade enough on the part of the city to necessitate it—it seems to me that the gentleman from Ward 10 has well stated it; that there is not at the present time passing enough over Commercial street to contemplate the spending of this money for the widening of it. I do not think it is demanded if we look only at the present state of affairs. But I think we should look a little further than that. I think we should believe that these times are not going to last always, and that the depressed state of trade which we find at present is not always going to remain in Boston. I know that sometimes farmers build barns when they see they are going to have large crops. I notice we all get our coal in the fall, when it is cheap, so that we may have it in the winter. Sometimes people buy cradles before the baby is born, in order that they may have it when he does arrive. I do not know but that we may take some such action in regard to this street. The gentleman says there is room enough without the widening. I doubt it, sir. I think the time will come within five years, if we do not do it this year, when we shall be called upon to pass upon a much larger sum for this purpose. It seems to me if we look at this question as it is today, with the depressed state of the money market, that we shall see very quickly that we can hire money at a very low rate of interest today, and that we can buy property at a very much lower rate than we could five years ago, or, as I believe, we can buy it five years hence, and so take time by the forelock, as it were, and do the work which we have to do instead of waiting until by and by when things are not in this depressed condition. I know it has been well stated that we have spent a great deal of money for improvements during the year. Yes, we have. But I do not know that I could change my vote in any way if I should go back and look it over. We economize where we can, just as we do in our families. We should do the same in city business. When we find there is anything we can do in our families to keep them physically well, we had better do it than to pay doctors' bills or some other bill which would have to be paid if we did not take time by the forelock. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," it is said. I do not know but what in the improvements we have made during the year that we have taken the ounce of prevention"

There is one thing, it seems to me, we should look at pretty fully, and that is the railroad running through Commercial street, as it does today. It has been stated here by the gentleman from Ward 9 that the houses there, a great many of them, are unfit for habitation. I don't know but what they are so. It has been stated that poor people are obliged to live there for want of better houses to live in, and that, perhaps, has been well stated. But it does seem to me that these poor people who are obliged to live there should receive just as much attention from this City Government as any other people in the city; and I would like to ask of gentlemen here how long a railroad like that would stay on Beacon street, or Union-park street or Worcester square, or any of the streets of the South End? Mr. President, we spend thousands of dollars here to abate nuisances because they are detrimental to the public health. I know for one I would not like to have my children play upon a street where I should fear that they would lose life or limb. And yet we say these are poor people. But are not poor people's children just as dear to their parents as rich people's children? and don't they need just as much care? Is not life there just as valuable as at the South End? Now, I believe, as the gentleman from Ward 9 has said, that down there in summer weather that railroad must be an intolerable nuisance; night or day the windows cannot be opened without the smoke and dust flying in. Is it a nuisance or not? Is it right to have it or not? The people on the street did not put it there or request it. It is there, and trains are running there, and I ask any gentleman if he would not vote to relieve them. I don't say that we should spend a million dollars for it, but the city has allowed these trains to go through there, and I say if we have allowed it we ought to be willing to rectify it as far as we can in order that these poor people may have just as good health and may have things just as comfortable as we have on South End streets or anywhere else. Now one gentleman comes in and says the Fitchburg Railroad is running this thing. I do not know that it is not so, but I have not seen anybody that had anything to do with the railroad that I know of. I do not know whether they need this in order to carry their freight or not. I have not gone into statistics to find out whether they can bring grain from Chicago here cheaper than they can to New York or not. I do not know their facilities for carrying it across the city or unloading it at Constitution wharf. I think they will find ways to unload all the grain the Fitchburg Railroad can bring there. But I do believe, sir, that whether it is the Fitchburg Railroad or the abutters on the street, or the men who carried out part of Atlantic avenue, with the promise we should extend it to Charlestown Bridge, I do not know, and I care not who brought it here, if it is a question we should consider. I recollect hearing, not a great while ago, a little story told in a Sunday school. The teacher was telling the pupils they were all born in sin. "Please, ma'am," said one of the pupils, "I was born in New Orleans." "It don't make any difference," said the teacher, "there is just as much sin in New Orleans as anywhere else." It seems to me, sir, it is a fact that there is a dreadful nuisance, and here are these things plainly before us. And with these things plainly before us, it seems to me, like men in other business, we should take this in just the same way. I find that narrow street; the people call for this widening—will have it—must have it. I find there is a railroad running through the street which is a nuisance to everybody on the street. I find we can hire help and get money cheaper and get these estates cheaper than we ever can again, and so for these reasons I shall vote for the widening of Commercial street.

Mr. Howes of Ward 18—I cannot say I know anything about the hypothetical financiering of the gentleman from Ward 10, but I rose to state this fact: that steamers cannot discharge and load at these wharves as they do at East Boston, and as it is necessary for large ocean steamers to do, that is, day and night, from four or five hatches. The wharves are not large enough, and the facilities are such that they would be cramped within two or three hours. That is a matter of fact, as can be proved by any one who will go to East Boston at any time and take measurements and witness the way vessels are loaded and unloaded. In regard to the argument of the gentleman from Ward 19 I would ask if there are not people who even buy their coffins before they need them?

Mr. Spenceley of Ward 19—Has the gentleman from Ward 18 bought his coffin?

Mr. Howes of Ward 18—I think those who go into this business will do something of the same sort.

Mr. Mowry of Ward 11—I hope that neither this amendment nor the original order will pass. It seems to me that in the solution of this question we must answer two inquiries. One is, "Is there a necessity for this improvement today?" Another is, "Do the conditions of trade at the present day demand or render expedient this contemplated improvement?" I certainly cannot come to the conclusion that they do. It seems to me to be unnecessary to make this improvement today. Another point, Mr. President, is this: We are nearly reaching the limit or margin to which we can increase our municipal indebtedness. On May 1 we could increase our indebtedness $7,296,618. Today we can increase it $2,783,618; thus showing that since the 1st of May we have increased it $4,513,000. Now, if we pass this order we shall then have a margin of $1,783,618. Now, under that state of affairs it seems to me impolitic to incur this large expenditure and thus reduce the margin by which we can increase the municipal indebtedness.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—I want to call attention to the fact that since the amendment was offered I have inserted the word "mainly" before the words "on the water side," because the gentleman from Ward 10 called my attention to the fact that the widening cannot be made wholly on that side.

The question was taken on the first part of the amendment, to strike out the words "one million" and insert "eight hundred thousand." Carried.

The question was then upon the remainder of the amendment.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10—I only desire to say that all members who have not looked at that plan, I think, will see at a moment's glance more satisfactorily than from any statement I can make that it is very plain indeed that if the street is widened on the water side, substantially by that plan on the green line, to eighty feet or even one hundred feet, it will give an opportunity and a chance for betterments; and by the assessment of betterments on the estates on the other side we shall recover back from the people who are benefited a portion of the expense of doing it, under the general and equitable system of improving streets. The estates on the water side which would be taken are very few—I believe not over one-fifth—in number compared with those taken on the land side. If it is widened on the land side as contemplated by this order (or was before it was changed) it will cut off all the estates on that side so as to entirely destroy a great many of them, and render it impossible for these people to receive any benefit. I have reason to believe, and do believe, from what gentlemen here told me who are interested in the matter—and I may say in regard to betterments it is my opinion, and I think the commissioners had this in view in their report, when they said it is doubtful if few or any betterments can be recovered. It is quite doubtful as a matter of law whether you can assess wharf property the same as you can land for the purpose of betterments. I do not know how that may stand. But I do believe that negotiations can be entered into and made with the owners of the wharf property, by which they would contribute something for the benefit which this widening would make, and it would be just as fair to widen it substantially by Mr. Talbot's plan, which he has been kind enough to send in. I only want to say that, because the question of the cost of this improvement is one that, as I stated in my previous remarks, is decisive, and with me the suggestion is timely. The gentleman from Ward 19, I think, has stated that it injures the wharf property. It does not. It does not touch Constitution wharf, except a little strip eight feet wide on one side, and runs down to the gate and fence of Constitution wharf. It does not touch Union wharf or Battery wharf at all. It does cut off a narrow strip of those small wharves which are now used for coal, stone and wood wharves around near the gas company's sheds, and which nobody pretends to say can be utilized by steamships or large vessels of any kind.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—I was merely going to ask that when the question be taken it be taken by yeas and nays.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—I was going to say that if the amendment is adopted it does cut all the wharf property along on that street. The wharves are of no benefit to the owners for large ships to come in at.

Mr. Spenceley of Ward 19—It seems to me, according to my logic, that when the gentleman says that the widening on the water side hardly touches the larger wharves at the lower end, and does touch the smaller wharves at the other end, but does n't hurt them any, it is like saying that if you cut six inches off of me you would not destroy me, but if you cut six inches off of the other gentleman you could hardly find him. It seems to me it is the same with the wharves. There are long wharves down at the lower end which extend a great way out into the water, which will not be touched; but the small wharves are so small that you do not hurt them at all if you cut off eight or ten feet from them. Another question I would like to ask is this: He says, if you widen on the water side you can assess betterments. I would like to know if he would have gentlemen pay their betterments and then raise $200,000 besides?

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—I think the answer to the gentleman is this: That a large wharf, that along the wharves where steamers can be accommodated, the line does not come down to touch the water in any case. This proposed widening does not come down to take off any of the docks. It takes off the tops of the wharves and leaves all the accommodations for the vessels that they have to accommodate.

The question was taken on the remaining portion of the amendment—"providing, however, that no land shall be taken, or other thing involving the expenditure of money done, until the abutters, corporations and persons interested in the widening of the street give to the Street Commissioners satisfactory bonds to pay one-fourth of the estimated expense of widening said street; and by inserting after the words 'for the widening of Commercial street' the words 'mainly on the water side.'"

The amendment was rejected—26 to 42.

HEARING.

A hearing was had on the petition of the Metropolitan Railroad Co. for an additional track in Battery street.

President Richards of the Metropolitan said the petition was for another track in Battery street from Hanover to Commercial street. It had been rendered necessary by the large increase of business on the ferry lines since the line to Chelsea was opened.

E. W. James desired two provisos put in that the Cambridge or Union road should never use the tracks, and if Mr. Richards don't build the track in a certain time some one else can go there. Recommitted to the Committee on Paving.

ROXBURY CANAL.

Report of the Committee on Finance, with order for a loan of $392,000 for cost of Roxbury Canal Improvement; also the order to cause said improvement to be made as recited in City Document 92, was considered under unfinished business.

Alderman Thompson—I should like to know from the committee if these estimates have been carefully considered, and if the sum asked for here is the exact amount that will be required.

Alderman Viles—We have been over this very carefully, and have given it a good deal of time and attention. The committee have had it under consideration all summer. The valuation of the land is taken from last year's assessment, not this year's, because they might say that we were lowering the estimate on account of the taking. The sewer will cost about $50,000, and upon that we have the report of the Superintendent of Sewers. The figures in regard to the filling we have from the City Engineer, Mr. Davis. They have all been very carefully considered by the committee. It is a fact that it is a great nuisance, and probably every member of this Board is nearly as well acquainted with it as the committee. I don't think much of anything need be said about it. The report is brief and to the point, and I am willing to leave it with this Board.

Alderman Burnham—As has been said by the chairman of the committee, this matter has received very thorough consideration by our committee, and the report in City Document 92, as has already been said, presents all there is about the matter. It is an acknowledged nuisance which we have created and are maintaining. It ought not longer to be endured, and in its present shape it cannot be even abated. Dredging has been applied and will neither remedy or remove it. As I see it, there is nothing to do but to fill it up—to wipe it out wholly. This is the only thing we can do. First, then, as a matter of economy, we must take the land; no other course is available, and we can do so. The courts have held over and over again that, where the city took land under legislative acts to abate nuisances, the owners could only recover the market value of the land. Then how do we stand? The territory being ours after the land is filled, the value will be greatly increased, and as the city is not under any obligation to reconvey it to the owners, the land will come into the market at a greatly enhanced price, and consequently to the advantage of the city. I said we must fill it. Let us settle this. I call the attention of the Board to the fifth annual report of the Board of Health, City Doc. No. 67, May 1, 1877. They say—

“Roxbury Canal still remains prominent among the nuisances of Boston. Leading in from the South Bay, five or six rods wide, and extending several thousand feet, to Harrison avenue, we find this great slough or open sewer in the midst of a thickly-populated section. The sewage and mire lie, a fathom deep, bubbling their gases through the black, putrid water, while the lighter and soluble portions of filth are slowly surging back and forth with the rising and falling of the tide. The sight of this canal from the Albany-street Bridge is sufficient to nauseate any decent man, and it is said that horses even have refused to cross the bridge over this slough. We would gladly pass over this subject without a word of complaint, but duty forbids, even though we have besought its remedy for four years in vain. Business and dwellings are alike rendered exceedingly uncomfortable and unhealthy in the whole neighborhood at times, including one of the most beneficent and well-managed institutions in New England, where two hundred and fifty patients lie blessed with everything which an intelligent and worthy Board of Trustees and hospital staff can supply, yet deprived of nature's greatest gift,—pure air. Last fall the medical staff of the City Hospital, together with other physicians and people of that neighborhood, petitioned the City Council for relief from this canal nuisance. Thereupon the City Council asked the Legislature for authority to fill the canal, as a remedy for the trouble. The legislative Committee on Harbors, to whom the subject was referred, gave a long and patient hearing on the subject, reported in favor of the petitioners, and the Legislature then granted authority to the City Council to take the land and fill the canal. We cannot think the present City Council, knowing the nature and extent of this nuisance, and having the power in their hands to abate it, will allow the people of that neighborhood to pass through another season with this open sewer in their midst."

"I ask you to notice," the Board of Health say, "We have besought its remedy for four years in vain." Now, Mr. Mayor and gentlemen of this Board, what is the use of a Board of Health if, when they call our attention to a manifest nuisance like this for four years in succession, we year after year pass it by,—not only allowing its existence but its constant accumulation of evils—let us be consistent. It is an acknowledged existing unmitigated nuisance. There is nothing to do but to fill it—wipe it out of existence. Do it now—this winter. Let it be finished before another summer. But to return to the matter of the expense. One great consideration, let me say, is, we can do it without large expense; indeed, the probability is that in the end it will not have added one dollar to our city indebtedness; and if you will allow me a moment, I will give you figures as an explanation why I claim this. The territory to be taken contains 329,466 square feet. The streets within this area, including the land needed to extend East Chester park to Sweet street, contain about 126,466 square feet of land, which, deducted from the total area, leaves about 203,000—say 200,000 square feet of land to be disposed of by the city of Boston after the nuisance is abated; and also remember 126,000 feet of land for streets retained. The average value by the assessors (of 1877) of the land taken is $1.75 per square foot. The amount of land left for sale figured at that rate would amount to $350,000, which, deducted from the estimate of the committee, shows an expense of say $42,000; and I may say from this should be taken the value of the fee of the dock (area about 65,000 square feet), which the committee were unable to determine. The act, chap. 217, acts of 1877, which authorizes us to abate the nuisance, provides for the appointment by the Supreme Court of a commission to determine the value of this fee; but admitting that it is an unknown quantity that cannot now be determined, it is certainly fair to assume from what measures we do have, if the land is now valued in its present condition at $1.75 per foot in these times, and depressed as it must be by the maintenance of such a gigantic nuisance, that the value of the property after the abatement of the nuisance would be greater than at present, if it should prove so to be, which I for one expect, it will probably leave, as I have said, a profit in place of being an expense to the city. There is still another indirect advantage which should be noticed. The city's property, as well as that of individual owners in the vicinity, is depreciated in value by this nuisance; the whole territory is greatly injured; the sewage matter forms gases which permeate Chester park and Chester square and other streets in the locality. With the canal existing, it is an infected territory; without it, the character of the whole neighborhood is changed. What is unsalable real estate today, because of this condition of sewerage, will find purchasers, and invite improvement when it is filled.

The city's interest directly in the large tract of land on Chester park, opposite the nuisance, is unquestionably injured thereby. No sales of land have been made here for a number of years, no doubt caused by the land being in an infected neighborhood. On the other side of the canal, in the Northampton-street district, the city owns other tracts of land also affected by this nuisance. Therefore, in a business light alone, to protect the interests of the city it is good policy to abate this nuisance, even if the protection of the public health did not imperatively demand it. As to the matter of health there is no question. Therefore, when both alike demand it, we should not hesitate to do it, and I believe our vote should, and will, be given for this measure. I believe we shall unanimously pass it, and the whole constituency of this Board will approve our action.

Alderman Thompson—I did not rise to oppose the passage of this order, but merely to inform myself in regard to one or two items. Everybody admits that the Roxbury Canal is and has been a nuisance in that section of the city for a number of years. But what I desired to know was, whether this hundred and twenty thousand dollars would be really sufficient to abate this nuisance. I do not see that it provides for consequential damages to the rights of the wharf owners, and whether their privileges to the docks have been considered. Then again, it occurred to me that the removal of the outlet of this sewer from this place down to Brookline street was nothing more than simply transferring the nuisance from this section of the city to another section of the city. At the same time it occurred to me that this new sewer that we are building will remedy the whole difficulty, and I wanted to know whether I was correct in my views.

Alderman Viles—The act provides that we are to take the sewage out of the limits of the Roxbury Canal; consequently we are obliged to take it some distance from where it is. Furthermore, it has nothing to do with the new sewer, and it will have to be done any way.

Alderman Thompson—Will the matter empty into the new sewer when it is completed?

Alderman Viles—This will have to be done any way.

Alderman Fitzgerald—There seems to be some difference of opinion among the members of the Board, and as the Council will not meet for a fortnight, and as we will have another meeting before the Council meets, I would like to have this put over until next Monday to afford the members an opportunity to look into the matter, and afford the City Solicitor an opportunity to send in his answer to the question put to him some months ago in regard to the city indebtedness. I confess that I should like a little more time to look into the matter, and as the Council will not meet until after we meet next Monday, I would ask that it lie over until next Monday.

Alderman O'Brien—I would like to call the attention of the Board to the fact, for their consideration during the week if the matter is laid over, that the city of Boston owns 353,900 feet of land in the immediate vicinity of this nuisance that will be largely benefited by this improvement, particularly the City Hospital. If the Board lets this matter lie over for a week I would ask them to consider that matter also.

Alderman Burnham—There is one thing in answer to the question of the gentleman on the opposite side of the house with reference to the relation of this improvement to the system of improved sewerage. In regard to the necessity for emptying it opposite Brookline street, if he will look at the act authorizing the filling of this land he will see that—

"On and after the completion of the work to be performed under this act, the sewers or drains now discharging into said canal within the limits of that portion thereof authorized to be filled, shall be discharged elsewhere and shall not thereafter be discharged into any part of said canal."

Consequently there is a necessity that this sewer should be extended down to and opposite Brookline street. It has no relation to the intercepting system of sewerage other than this: That when the system of intercepting sewerage is completed, the sewage of the houses will go into this intercepting sewer. But it is provided for in every case that the surface flow of water creates a necessity that this sewer should be extended from Albany street to opposite Brookline street; so that when the sewer is completed the underground sewage will go into the large intercepting sewer, and there is a provision made for the outflow of the drainage water.

Alderman Viles—As this will probably lie over another week, I hope those who are not particularly familiar with the canal will visit it and see for themselves.

The matter was laid over for one week.

PUBLIC LANDS.

Alderman O'Brien, from the Joint Committee on Public Lands, submitted the following:

Ordered, That the lot of land on Washington square, as shown upon a plan recorded in the office of the City Surveyor, and dated April 1, 1874, which lot was bargained to Freeborn F. Raymond April 24, 1874, be and the same is hereby declared forfeited to the city of Boston for non-fulfilment of the conditions of sale, and that the Superintendent of Public Lands is hereby directed to enter upon and take possession of the aforesaid lot of land, in behalf of and for the use of the said city of Boston.

Ordered, That the Collector be and he hereby is authorized to cancel the bond numbering 138, the amount of instalments due being $7406, and which was given by Francis F. Raymond for land on Washington square; provided Mr. Raymond shall give to the city a valid bill of sale of the buildings now standing upon the premises referred to in said bond.

Alderman Thompson asked for some explanation of the order.

Alderman O'Brien—Mr. Raymond came before the committee and represented that he was a comparatively poor man, unable to pay the instalments now due on this property; and after paying several instalments he was willing to throw up the land to the city, and also give a bill of sale to the city for the iron building on the property. The committee, knowing Mr. Raymond to be a man of truth and veracity, considered his statement, and thought it for the best interest of the city to take the property, as he was unable to meet the instalments coming due upon it.

Alderman Thompson—It has been the custom of the city of Boston, when land has been sold by auction, and pay has been received in instalments, that, if in consequence of dull times a depreciation of property takes place, parties can throw back their estates upon the city; but if there is an advance in real estate, it is not the case. Now, I have understood that a number of people who have purchased land of the city at sales by public auction and paid a certain amount in instalments, after a few years, or a certain time, concluded that there was no advantage or profit to them, that they have been in the habit of coming in here and throwing the lands back upon the city. It seems to me that that is not a proper course to take; that it is not just to the city and that it is not right to do so. Therefore, I think that if a party is able to pay and is responsible, they should carry out the terms of their bond to the city. I don't know anything about the present case, whether the party is able to do so or not; but if he is able he should be required to do so, as private individuals would be required to do with each other.

Alderman O'Brien—Does the Alderman from Charlestown know of a solitary instance where such property has been thrown upon the city when the parties were able to pay the instalments? The only instance that has come within the observation of the Committee on Public Lands was one in which a gentleman who is reputed to be worth two or three hundred thousand dollars asked leave to throw his property back upon the city, after expending some four or five thousand dollars upon it, even at a less price than it was valued at the present year, and the committee positively refused to do so, knowing that the man was perfectly able to take care of all his indebtedness. That is the only case that I am aware of of any one wanting to surrender his property when he was able to take care of the instalments.

Alderman Thompson—I can only relate my own experience. Some two or three years ago, at the time his estate was purchased of the city, I purchased an estate there on ten annual instalments. I sold it within a few months after I purchased it, and the party who purchased it paid one of the instalments. Some months ago I was notified that no more instalments had been paid, and it had been a year since it left my hands. I don't think, under those circumstances, that I should be held responsible, when the parties are abundantly able to pay the second and third instalments, and they had let it run without any information to me in regard to it. I know it is the opinion of parties outside that they can hold their estates or not; and that they can discontinue the payment of the instalments simply by relinquishing the property to the city. I have always understood that this party has a large amount of property; and if that is the case, there is no reason why the land should be allowed to come back to the city.

Alderman O'Brien—Do I understand the Alderman to say a thing of this kind has happened this year?

Alderman Thompson—It is this year.

Alderman O'Brien—That the property has been surrendered to the city?

Alderman Thompson—No, sir, I don't know what has become of it; but a year's time had elapsed before the instalments had been collected. I don't know why they had not been collected, and as there was some talk that it would be surrendered, it occurred to me whether I would be responsible for the amount of the bond. It seems to me that if other parties can let their bonds remain unpaid for a year or six or eight months, the business of the department is conducted in rather loose manner.

Alderman O'Brien—I am not particularly familiar with the manner in which the Collector of the city of Boston attends to its business; but, from my observation, I believe him to be a faithful, prompt and energetic officer. I suppose that those who are immediately connected with his office can speak for him; but, so far as I am aware, he is prompt in the collection of taxes, betterments, sewer assessments and everything of that sort. So far as my observation goes, I don't know of any neglect on his part.

Alderman Thompson—I do not intend to cast any reflection upon the Collector of the city of Boston. I believe him to be as efficient an officer as there is in this building, and certainly more so than some of his predecessors. It occurred to me that this might be in the hands of another department, for I remember that when I gave the bond I did not go near the Collector, but to some other officer in the upper part of this building, and I supposed it had been the same in this as that case, supposing the city was amply secured, they were not so prompt in calling the attention of the parties giving the bond to the non-payment of the dues.

Alderman O'Brien—All these bonds are in the Collector's office for collection. He attends to it, and when he fails in the collection of an instalment, he generally refers it to the Committee on Public Lands. That committee, in numerous instances, during the past year or two, have extended the time of payments. That is, if a party owed five or six instalments on the bonds, and could not pay them, in order to relieve him temporarily, they have extended it a few years, but without any loss to the city. It is only giving him in a dull and depressed year for business a longer time to pay his debts.

Alderman Thompson—Has the Alderman made any inquiries about the responsibility of the party who now desires to give up his estate?

Alderman O'Brien—The committee have made a great many inquiries in regard to Mr. Raymond, and they feel that now he is unable to pay the assessments upon his property; and under any circumstances we would be compelled to take back the property. That is the way the committee feel about it. The Alderman from the North End can speak of Mr. Raymond, as he knows him personally.

Alderman Viles—As the Alderman has alluded to me, I would state that I know Mr. Raymond well. He has a large amount of property in his possession, but perhaps he is unfortunately different from the Alderman from Charlestown, as it is mortgaged. A great deal of it is lying idle, and it is impossible to get any rent from it, and I know that it is impossible for him to pay the amount due on it at the present time. I was at the sale when this property was sold, and offered him an eighth of a dollar bonus on his bargain; but fortunately for me he did not take it. I know he has a great deal of property outside of Boston and in Boston; I know that he has lately mortgaged his property, and that it is impossible for him to pay it at the present time.

On motion of Alderman Gibsou, the orders were laid on the table.

LICENSES.

Alderman Fitzgerald submitted reports from the Committee on Licenses as follows:

Wagon License Granted—James M. Bennett, at New York & New England Railroad Station; F. A. Marple, 1480 Tremont street; George Baughan, 25 South Margin street.

Intelligence Office Licensed—Isabella McCormick, 115 Myrtle street.

Billiard License Granted—T. A. Emerson, 4 Warren and 3 Palmer street, Roxbury; Charles F. Clark, 70 Causeway street.

Skating Rink Licensed—Seth Whittier, 520-524 Albany street.

Hack License Granted—H. D. Smith, 12-14 Beach street, between 8 P. M. and 1 A. M.

Severally accepted.

PAY OF LABORERS.

Alderman Thompson offered an order—That the City Treasurer be authorized and directed to pay all laborers, whose names appear on the pay rolls of the several city departments, on Wednesday, Nov. 28, 1877, instead of on the regular pay day, the 30th of November. Passed. Sent down.

ASSESSORS' DEPARTMENT.

Alderman Wilder submitted reports from the Joint Committee on Assessors' Department, as follows:

Leave to withdraw on petitions of Joachim Guerrini that the tax paid on a certain estate in Prince street be refunded; Cornelia C. Brown and sister, that the tax paid in 1876 on estate 2 Bowdoin street be refunded, and that the tax assessed for the present year be remitted (the City Council not having legal power to grant the petition).

That no action is necessary on the part of the city on petition of Michael Donovan for the restoration to him of the title of an estate sold for non-payment of taxes, the matter having been adjusted; and Nathan Matthews, for the remission of taxes for 1875 upon certain property not in his possession, the matter having been adjusted by the Assessors.

Severally accepted. Sent down.

HISTORICAL MONUMENTS.

Alderman Thompson submitted the following:

The Committee on Historical Monuments respectfully represent that they have been requested by numerous citizens to place a tablet upon Christ Church, Salem street, commemorative of the fact that from the steeple of that church was shown the lantern which gave warning of the march to Lexington. The original order on which the committee was appointed contemplated the placing of a tablet upon this building, but, while the subject was under consideration by the City Council, a doubt was expressed as to the truth of the tradition which pointed out Christ Church as being the building from which the lantern was displayed, and the order was, therefore, amended by striking out all that related to Christ Church, and reducing the appropriation the amount which it was estimated the tablet would cost. The committee, after hearing the arguments for and against the authenticity of the tradition, and after carefully examining the historical authorities on the subject, are unanimously of the opinion that from the steeple of Christ Church was displayed the lantern which gave warning of the march to Lexington. The committee believe that the original design should be carried out, and they would, therefore, respectfully recommend the passage of the following order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Historical Monuments be authorized to expend, in addition to the amount already appropriated for erecting historical monuments, the sum of $1000, for placing a tablet, suitably inscribed, upon Christ Church, Salem street; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Incidentals.

Read once.

LAND DAMAGES.

Alderman Thompson, from the Committee on Streets on the part of the board, submitted orders to pay for land taken and damages occasioned as follows: Charles J. and Lydia L. Paine, $1656, widening of Ruggles street; Catherine Sturm, $600 (for grade and all other damages) laying out of Ward street; Alacia E. Marden, $250, for land taken in her name and that of Bartholomew and John Roach, by the widening of Mill street. Severally read twice and passed.

REGISTRATION OF VOTERS.

Alderman Fitzgerald offered an order—That the Board of Registrars of Voters be authorized to employ temporary additional clerks to assist them in the discharge of their duties, on account of extra registration, provided the expense does not exceed the amount appropriated for that department.

Alderman Fitzgerald—In explanation of that order, I would state that the Registrars of Voters are obliged to appoint their assistant registrars between the 1st of May and October, and if they need any special help in the registration of voters, they have to be appointed between those two days, for, under the statute law, they cannot appoint them after the 1st of October. During the last few days the work has been such as to necessitate the employment of additional clerks. The Committee on Retrenchment allowed them but one clerk, and they now ask to be allowed to employ additional clerks so that they can make up the written books which they are to supply on the day of election. If they have those clerks they will have the books on the next day after registration closes. The chairman of the board has asked me to offer that order. It does not entitle them to any additional appropriation, and does not go beyond the appropriation already made.

The order was read twice and passed. Sent down.

Adjourned, on motion of Alderman Wilder.

PETITION FOR AID.

A petition was received from Mrs. Jaue Burrill, representing that her husband had been employed for thirty years in the service of the city, and recently fell down a flight of stairs while in the discharge of his duty, and was instantly killed, leaving the petitioner entirely destitute, and she therefore requests aid from the city.

Alderman Viles—Since I came into the hall my attention has been called to that petition. The facts are substantially as stated in it. He had worked for the city for the last thirty years, and on the 7th of last September he fell down a pair of stairs and broke his neck and died instantly. This is something that has never come up before. I don't know whether it should go to the Committee on Claims or not.

The Chairman—The Chair awaits any motion. It is not a claim for assistance, but a request.

Alderman Viles—I move that it be referred to the Overseers of the Poor.

Alderman Thompson—As it is a petition to the City Council, it seems to me that it should be referred to some committee of the City Council. I move as an amendment that it be referred to the Joint Committee on Health.

Alderman Viles—I will accept the amendment. I have no objections to its coming to my committee. I don't know what there is to investigate.

The petition was referred to the Joint Committee on Health. Sent down.

The bonds of George C. Richardson and another constable, being presented duly certified, were approved by the Board.

ROXBURY CANAL.

The Board took up the special assignment, viz., Report of the Committee on Finance, with order for a loan of $392,000 for cost of Roxbury Canal improvement; also the order to cause said improvement to be made as recited in City Doc. 92. The question was on the passage of the order for the loan.

Alderman Burnham—Before proceeding to consider this subject, I ask the indulgence of the Board to make a correction of certain language used by me in presenting this subject at our last meeting, as it appears in the record. I said—

"I may say, from this should be taken the value of the fee of the dock."

I was under that impression in so wording this matter with reference to the dock, but I should have said—

"And to this should be added the value of the dock," etc.

The misapprehension arose from a hasty overlooking of the general cost, supposing that it included the estimate of the dock fee. I do not make this correction because there is anything very material about it, but that I may stand right on the record. While I am up, if the Board will grant me the indulgence, I wish to call attention to another matter which seems to me should be presented at this time by me as chairman of the Committee on Intercepting Sewerage, and as a member of the committee which made this report. While I do not ordinarily believe in noticing what may be said of the action of the various departments of the City Government by the daily papers—indeed, I question the propriety of it at all—but an article appeared in one of the papers yesterday which must have been written under a misapprehension of the facts, and as it seems to be so unjust in its criticism upon the action of one of the heads of the departments, and is also an indirect criticism upon the Committee on Intercepting Sewerage, I feel called upon to call the attention of the Board to the matter. The article I refer to is as follows:

"Through the filling of the Roxbury Canal, for the purpose of abating the nuisance now existing there, is a work of absolute necessity, and one which should be performed with the least possible delay, there are grave reasons why the order for this purpose, now before the Board of Aldermen, should not be passed in its present form. The principal main of the great sewer which is to drain the South End and the Highland District is to go through Northampton street, and thence to Dorchester. Now it seems that this little side improvement has been laid out without any reference to its connection with the general plan to which the city has committed itself. It appears to be the intention of the Superintendent of Sewers to establish a separate system on his own account, and to this end he has chosen to locate his new sewer in Northampton street, utterly ignoring the right of preemption as indicated by the printed plans of the City Engineer. It has been hinted that this action is due to professional jealousy; but the citizens are not at all disposed to satisfy private piques at an expense to themselves of tens of thousands of dollars. If, on the other hand, the proposed intervention arises from ignorance, the mistake should be corrected before the order goes any farther."

That is about all of the article to which I wish to call the attention of the board.

Alderman O'Brien—What paper is the article copied from?

Alderman Burnham—The Boston Herald of yesterday. Now, in the consideration of the subject let me say that this Albany-street sewer drains an area of three hundred and twenty-six acres, and also carries away the sewage of 2755 houses in that locality. It is well known to those who are familiar with this system of intercepting sewerage, that not only must the house sewage be provided for, but also the surface drainage, and that the two are, to a certain extent, independent of each other. The house sewage must be provided for, and also the surface drainage above ground as well. and, as I stated, the two are independent of each other to a certain extent. Now, until the overflow comes, the plan of the improved sewerage is to carry off all that that comes into it until it is full. But in case of heavy rain provision must be made by which this water which comes from the overflow of the ground will pass into the intercepting sewerage and thence into the ocean. Now, with this view the Board will see why I desire to review this article. It says—

“The principal main of the great sewer which is to drain the South End and the Highland District is to go through Northampton street and thence to Dorchester.”

Now, that plan has not been settled upon either by the Superintendent of Sewers or the Committee on Intercepting Sewerage. It is open between them. The two sewers are related to each other and there is no plan which may be said to have been adopted yet by either party. It goes on to say—

“This little side improvement has been laid out without any reference to its connection with the general plan to which the city has committed itself.”

It has not been laid out without connection with the general plan; there have been several conferences, and it is fully understood by the Committee on Intercepting Sewerage and the Superintendent of Sewers. Further, it says—

“It appears to be the intention of the Superintendent of Sewers to establish a little system on his own account, and to this end he has chosen to locate his new sewer in Northampton street.”

Now, as I have said, it may be that when this matter is fully understood there will be a reversal of the proposed system of carrying the sewage to the sea. It may be that the borings in West Chester park extended may make it desirable to put the intercepting sewerage there; and it may be that the Northampton-street sewer will be used for carrying off the surface water, and it may be desirable to put the intercepting sewer there, and the surface sewer in Chester park extended. There has been no decision in regard to it. The committee are unacquainted with the existence of any private, personal piques, or anything of that kind. The article says that “if the intervention arose from ignorance, the mistake should be corrected.” I believe that the committees on Health and Intercepting Sewerage fully understand the matter, and that the plan adopted did not arise from ignorance. It seemed to me to be but fair that I, being connected with those two committees, should make this statement.

Alderman Viles—I will simply state that in considering this matter of the Roxbury Canal, the Board well know that by the act under which we take the land and fill it up, we are obliged to take the sewage outside of the limits of the canal. The committee requested the Superintendent to give them the cost of taking it out, and he did so; and as the line where the canal commences has never been definitely decided upon, the nearest way was to take it through the yard of the Paving Department to deep water, and the cost will be about $50,000. We are obliged to take it there without any reference to this system of improved sewerage. The utmost harmony exists between the Superintendent of Sewers and the committee, and I have never heard of any jealousy in relation to it.

Alderman Burnham—As corroboratory of the Alderman's words, I will read from the report of the committee:

“On and after the completion of the work the sewers and drains now discharging into Roxbury Canal must be discharged elsewhere, and cannot be discharged into any part of the canal.”

And then in relation to the position of the Superintendent of Sewers in this matter, here is a concise statement from the report:

“The Superintendent of Sewers informs the committee that the cost of intercepting the sewers now discharging into the canal, and carrying them beyond the limits of the canal, as prescribed by the act, going over the Concord-street sewer and discharging opposite Brookline street, through the yard of the Paving Department—not including the cost of any land or damages for going through the territory of the Paving Department—will be $50,000.”

Alderman Fitzgerald called for the reading of a communication from the City Solicitor, which he understood had been received, and the Chairman read the following:

CITY SOLICITOR'S OFFICE, 2 PEMBERTON SQUARE, BOSTON, Dec. 3, 1877.

Sir—In reply to the order of the Board of Aldermen asking my opinion whether the city has not already exceeded the limit of municipal indebtedness, fixed by the act of 1875, entitled an act to regulate and limit municipal indebtedness, and also whether the city may now increase its indebtedness, to the extent of one per cent. additional allowed under section 10—section 7 supposed to be intended—of said act. Allow me to say that when said act took effect, the indebtedness of the city exceeded two per centum on its valuation, and the city then had the right under the act to increase its indebtedness to the additional amount of one per centum on its valuation, being $7,939,618.00. This right has been availed of to the amount of $5,156,000.00, leaving a balance of $2,783,618.00, to be still expended if the City Council shall so determine.

The only doubt that can exist as to the correctness of this result arises from the consideration that the leading purpose of the act cited was to oblige cities and towns to keep their indebtedness within the amount of three per centum on their respective valuations; and it is supposed that the authority to increase the indebtedness one per cent. of the valuation, when the municipality was then indebted to the amount of more than two per cent. on its valuation, was intended to be temporary, and cannot be longer exercised.

The statute fixes no time within which this right of increasing the municipal indebtedness shall be exercised; and therefore a reasonable time is granted; and in my opinion that reasonable time has not yet expired.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. P. HEALY.

To John T. Clark, Esq., Chairman of the Board of Aldermen.

Alderman Fitzgerald—As I understand it, the limit of our municipal indebtedness is now $2,700,000, in the opinion of the City Solicitor. And I understand that we cannot go beyond that. That, in the opinion of the City Solicitor, with the loans already made, we have a margin of $2,700,000. From that must be taken the $1,000,000 which has passed this Board for the widening of Commercial street, and the amount we have passed for the Stony Brook improvement—$133,000—and the amount for the Mercantile wharf. Deducting all those, and there will be left a margin of about $1,000,000, and not $6,900,000, as was asserted in this Board some time ago. I am glad we have got this opinion from the City Solicitor on this question, for there was a doubt in my mind whether we could incur this additional indebtedness. We now have an authoritative statement from the legal adviser of the City Council, to make our bonds legal. There is a margin of $2,700,000 allowed, and there are orders for one million six or seven hundred thousand more on the table of the other branch. If we pass these, we have $1,000,000 more, and after that we can expend no more until we come below the two per cent. I hope this Board will take all that into consideration before passing these orders.

At the request of Alderman O'Brien, the chairman read the opinion of the City Solicitor again.

Alderman Fitzgerald—The Alderman from Ward 21 perhaps labors under a misapprehension in regard to the opinion. At the time of the passage of the act limiting municipal indebtedness, we had exceeded the two per cent. Any city that had not exceeded the two per cent. indebtedness on its valuation could go no farther than that. But any city or town which had exceeded that amount could increase its debt one per cent. additional. We were in the category of those cities and towns which had exceeded the amount, and we were allowed to contract a debt exceeding three per cent. of the valuation at that time. If we had had the valuation at that time that we have now, we could not have contracted as much debt as we have. The valuation of that day was about seven hundred and thirty-nine millions of dollars, instead of six hundred and forty-nine or fifty millions as it is today; so that we can avail ourselves of about one million dollars more than we could if the act were passed today. We can contract what is equal to two million seven hundred thousand dollars. Since April we have already authorized loans that leave this balance of two million seven hundred thousand dollars. We have on the tables of the Common Council orders authorizing loans equal to about seventeen hundred thousand dollars, and if they pass, the limit of our municipal indebtedness will be about one million dollars, and we cannot go beyond that for any number of years until we bring our indebtedness below two per cent. It may be one, two or three or five years hence. If that is the meaning of it, I think the Alderman and I understand it alike.

Alderman Thompson—I should like to inquire of the committee if the act received from the Legislature was such an act as the city asked for.

Alderman Viles—I believe not substantially as they asked for; but it was the best the city could get. I am of the opinion that we should abate this nuisance, any way. This canal is about in the same condition that a man's house is when it is on fire—you would not stop to say what kind of water you would put on it. The city owns very much property in that vicinity which needs improvement. All of this money will not go out; much of it will come back. If it is not acted upon now, it will only come up every year hereafter to trouble future governments.

Alderman Robinson—As I understand by the remarks of the Alderman from Ward 21, the limit of the indebtedness this year is reduced by the valuation made last April, so that the indebtedness last year could be made to an amount of three per cent. of fifty or sixty millions of the reduced valuation this year, and that we cannot increase the indebtedness of the city this year by some million dollars. That is, that it goes down; that if we reduce the valuation next year, the percentage by which we can increase the debt of the city would be decreased in the same ratio.

Alderman Fitzgerald—The act is very specific. It excludes any debt contracted for water. It says the city may increase its indebtedness to an amount not exceeding two per cent. on its valuation, and if a city or town has already exceeded two per cent. it may increase its indebtedness one per cent. and no more. If we exhaust the additional one per cent. we must cease borrowing money for any purposes until we get down to two per cent.

Alderman Robinson—The Alderman did not understand me. Whether the increase is upon a sliding scale? Whether the limit is reduced by the reduction in the valuation?

Alderman Fitzgerald—The City Solicitor gives the amount on the valuation of 1874. If it were upon the valuation of today, then we would have exhausted the whole limit of our municipal indebtedness, and the city could borrow no more money.

Alderman Robinson—That is the point.

Alderman Fitzgerald—As I understand the opinion, if the Commercial-street and the other orders pass, which are upon the table of the Common Council, we cannot go beyond one million dollars. That includes this improvement also.

Alderman Thompson—I agree with the Alderman from Ward 6 that this nuisance should be abated, and if no better plan can be adopted than the one proposed, why I shall vote for that. But the objectionable feature in this plan is that the city will not know what it is going to cost. They propose to take a certain amount of land at the Assessors' valuation. Now, if the owners of this land are not satisfied to release it at this price, why it leaves the door open for suits against the city, and there is no knowing what may be the cost in the end. That is the objectionable feature of it. If the committee could agree with the abutters and owners as to what they should be paid, then I should agree to it. As I said before, I think this nuisance should be abated; but it has seemed to me that by diverting these sewers from this canal, whether or not that might not answer the purpose until the city or the committee could agree with the owners of this land, and then come in for an appropriation. If that has been tried, and nothing of that kind can be done, I shall vote for the order.

Alderman Viles—I would ask the Alderman from Charlestown if he thinks he could treat with the owners of property near the big nuisance in Charlestown.

Alderman Thompson—I think there would be no difficulty in purchasing it at all at very much less than the assessed valuation. I think the owners of property in that vicinity would be very glad to relinquish it for less than the assessed valuation, for this reason—that they see no prospect for relief. And I am very much surprised that the Committee on Health should not present a plan for the relief of a nuisance in one section of the city where they have suffered much longer than in any other section. If it were not for fear of being considered captious, I would move to have the report recommitted, to have it done, and have it acted upon by the Board. There is no reason why one section should be subjected to a nuisance any more than another. I do not see why there should not be relief for one section as well as the other.

Alderman Fitzgerald—Is there any absolute necessity for the passage of this order this evening? I must confess that I have not received that information from the committee, or from what I have heard, to enable me to vote intelligently upon this question this evening. The order was introduced here for the appropriation of a certain amount of money, and the argument was that it is a nuisance and therefore it should be abated. That is all. What the estimates are to be and what it will probably cost by and by the committee are not able to state. Now, I think we ought to have an estimate of the probable cost of this whole matter. The committee give their own estimates, and if the people go to law they do not know how much they will sue for, or how much they will take when they conclude to settle. The committee take the Assessors' valuation. I submit that in a matter like this, the shutting up of the wharves in the side of the canal, that these people would not be content with the valuation which the city is going to make, and that there should be some conference between the city and the owners on the canal before we pass the order. I doubt if this can be put in such a condition to relieve the city of the responsibility for twice the amount of money asked for in the order.

Alderman Viles—There is no way that the committee can get at the exact cost. We have given the cost of the land by its assessed valuation for the past two years; we have given the cost of filling the canal, from the figures of the City Engineer, the cost of the sea wall, and the cost of the intercepting sewer. It is impossible to treat with those men to find out what damages they will claim. It must be settled in the courts. I think that some of the land can be taken from some of the parties at its assessed valuation. I have no objections to its lying over another week, if the Alderman desires to look into it further.

Alderman Burham—I would ask the Alderman from Ward 21 if he is in possession of any information by which the committee can arrive at the probable cost of this matter. We have given the assessed valuation of the land; the City Engineer has made estimates of the cost of the filling; we have gone over the land, and listened to the statements of the owners of the land, and we have computed the city's interest in the matter, the city being the owner of large tracts of land adjoining the canal. We have gone all over this ground, and now the Alderman asks that it may lie over, that we may arrive at the probable expense. There must be some new avenue opened in order to arrive at further information upon this matter.

Alderman Fitzgerald—I would ask the chairman of the committee if in the hearings which have been given, he has asked the owners of the property on this canal if they will be satisfied with the assessed value of the land as assessed by the City Assessors; if they do not value the property and the privileges there higher than the assessed valuation.

Alderman Viles—They would give us no information as to what they would take. We had to use our own judgment.

Alderman Fitzgerald—The act provides, the committee say—

“For the settlement of all claims on account of taking the lands, first, by the appointment by the Supreme Court of three commissioners, who shall award and assess the value of the land at the time of taking and the amount of damage, if any; and, secondly, by an appeal from the decision of the commissioners to a trial by jury at the bar of the Supreme Court.”

Now, I submit that in this report of the committee we have nothing to guide us, save and except that the land is valued at so much.

That is all. We have no information as to any conversation between the owners of the land and the committee as to what they would be willing to take or the price which they set upon the land and the wharf privileges, which must be worth a great deal more than the intrinsic value of the land. There is nothing of the kind at all, and I venture to say that if we pass this order, the city of Boston cannot come out of this matter for double the amount named in the order. I say we have nothing to guide us. That is why I have asked the committee for some information in connection with that. There is no doubt that it is a nuisance, and that something must be done there. But if we are going to pass an order, we ought to know what we are voting for. If it is to cost $600,000 we ought to know it. If it is to cost $390,000, we ought to know that the amount named in the order will be something near the cost of taking the land and the wharf privileges from the owners, and filling up the canal. I submit that we have nothing in the report to guide us in that. I think it will be nearer seven or eight hundred thousand dollars than the sum named.

Alderman Viles—I would state in regard to the business on the canal that I saw but one party who is doing much there. There is one man, a Mr. Ham, who is doing quite a thriving business there.

Alderman Fitzgerald—Has any one of these owners fixed a value on his land?

Alderman Viles—I don't think they have. I think that one or two will settle on the basis of the assessed valuation.

Alderman Fitzgerald—Have the members of the committee asked any owner of land how much he would be willing to take for his property above its assessed valuation—if he has set a value upon it?

Alderman Viles—No, they have not.

Alderman Fitzgerald—Then the committee cannot give us any information at all about the probable valuation of this property except by the Assessors' valuation?

Alderman Viles—Is n't that the best valuation we can get—the judgment of the sworn Assessors?

Alderman Fitzgerald—The chairman will remember that the city offered to settle with some parties down near the wharf some years ago—I forget the corporation—and they had a margin of so much above the assessed valuation; but they went to a jury in the Supreme Court and got double the amount. I don't want the city to offer fifteen thousand dollars for property, when a jury in the Supreme Court would give thirty thousand. I think this committee ought to be able to report what these persons would probably be willing to take for their land, and not oblige us to offer so much on the assessed value of the property, and then be obliged to go into court and defend all these cases. I think the nuisance ought to be abated, but I think we ought to have some further information about the amount of money it will cost. If there is no great hurry in this matter, I should like to have it lie over until next Monday.

Alderman Viles—I have no objection.

Alderman Robinson—I should like the committee to see the different parties and ascertain the amount of money that they would take, so that the Board can act understandingly upon the matter.

Alderman O'Brien—I feel that it would be an impossibility at the present time to come to any arrangement with the parties who own property in that locality. If the Aldermen are convinced that it is a nuisance—and I feel assured that they are all convinced that it is an unmitigated nuisance—I think that they will have to take the responsibility, and let the commissioners of the courts fix the compensation for the damages. I believe that is the only way that it will be done, and that is all the responsibility that we will have to take in the matter. However, I don't think there is any hurry about it, and it is just as well that the matter should be postponed for another week.

Alderman Burnham—I am perfectly willing that the matter should lie upon the table, and no doubt it is proper that we should do so; but if gentlemen around this Board suppose that the members of this committee have had any means of arriving at the cost that are not open to any one they are mistaken. I cannot see how any valuable information upon the matter of mitigating this nuisance can be had unless we can go to the owners and bring bonds signifying that they will sell the land for so much money, or an agreement taken from the parties that in case the city seizes the land they will settle with the city for the amount that they signify in the agreement. Now there is not a man at this Board who believes that the committee can do anything of that kind. It seems to me that putting off this matter will only consume time, and that our object will not be gained.

Alderman Thompson—While we are upon this subject I would like to inquire of the committee if they have any plan in view for the relief of the nuisance in the northerly part of the city at the Mill Pond?

Alderman Burnham—As a member of the committee I may say that the committee have under consideration all matters that have been referred to them, and that it is the intention of the committee, to give every matter referred to them due consideration, including the matter referred to by the Alderman opposite.

Alderman Robinson—I don't believe there is a single member of the Board but is in favor of abating the nuisance at the Roxbury Canal; but as I understand the Alderman from Ward 21, and my own feeling in the matter, some efforts should be made, before we involve the city in lawsuits, to ascertain the cost of abating this nuisance. It has been the practice of the Alderman on my right, in another department, to ascertain something near the cost to the city, and to try to obtain some sort of bonds, as my friend from South Boston states, showing how much it will cost to make the improvements projected in petitions coming before this Board. I understand that that is about all that is meant by the Alderman from the Twenty-first Ward, and as my friend from South Boston says that the committee cannot probably ascertain how much those individuals will sell their land and wharf privileges for, it would seem to convey the impression that it leaves it open for those persons to make some sort of speculation, when there are only one or two individuals that will have any property injured by it. If this is laid over for a week, I hope this committee will see if they cannot get some approximate estimate of the damages that the city will be subject to. I move as an amendment that the committee be requested to ascertain as far as they are able the probable cost of abating this nuisance.

Alderman Viles—I am afraid the committee will be about in the same condition that the Committee on Streets were when they came to settle with the Alderman from Ward 24, when the street was widened in front of his house.

Alderman O'Brien—One of the owners went before the Legislaturc and fought it before the committee, and he will fight it before this committee. I don't believe he will come to any terms with the city unless the city takes his property.

The matter was laid on the table.

STREET LIGHTS.

Alderman Thompson submitted the following:

The Committee on Lamps, to which was referred the accompanying petition of R. M. C. Graham and others, to lay gas mains and manufacture gas in the city of Boston, submit the following report:

Your committee have given such careful attention to the subject referred to them as the importance of the question demands. They have personally visited New York and the works of the Municipal Gas Company there, which is understood to manufacture its gas under a process and a patent like those proposed to be employed here. They do not profess to be experts in chemistry, or in the manipulations of the various materials used by different companies to produce gas of a good illuminative quality, but they have given to the various bearings of the subject such careful examination as enables them, in their opinion, to form an intelligent judgment on it.

There is no question that an article which at first was a luxury has now become almost a necessity in every household, and we hold it to be the duty of every municipal corporation to know that the gas distributed through the streets under its charge shall be of good quality, and sold at a price for public and private consumption which shall be fair and just.

It is fortunate that the merits of the whole case should have received so recently a full and exhaustive examination from the Gas Commissioners of the City of Boston, who spent more than a year and a half in the investigations from which they derived their conclusions; and it will be seen in the progress of this report how largely we are indebted to them for statements of facts, explanations of processes of manufacture, and the logical conclusions to which their examinations led.

As shown by their report there are substantially but three processes of gas making which have any considerable use. First—Coal gas, which furnishes the only illuminating gas for all the great cities of Europe, and of Boston and Philadelphia in this country; second, petroleum or naphtha gas, in partial use in some towns and cities in the United States; third, water gas, in moderate use in half a dozen different processes in this country.

Neither of these processes has been substantially improved since its invention, although each has been simplified, and advantageous changes in the details of manufacture have been made.

Full descriptions of the comparative values of each of these forms of manufacture are to be found on pages 9 to 33, inclusive, of the commissioners' report.

The petition now before us for consideration is for permission to introduce a form of water gas now in use in the city of New York.

Of the character of this gas it is sufficient to say that its use was forbidden in the city of Paris on account of the large amount of carbonic oxide which it contained, which a scientific commission of eminent chemists reported that it would be dangerous to introduce, even by way of experiment.

By a law which passed the New Jersey Legislature at its last session, no gas is allowed to be sold in the State which contains more than two per cent. of carbonic oxide. In explanation of this it may be stated that carbonic oxide is a gas of so poisonous a character that one volume of it diffused through one hundred volumes of air renders the latter unfit to sustain life.

It is said by the commissioner to be a pure physiological poison producing death almost as readily when diluted as when pure.

We here subjoin an analysis of the gas furnished by the Municipal Company by Professor Heury Morton of the Stevens Institute of Technology, Hoboken, New York, a distinguished chemist, during the past summer.

Constituents.	Per cent. in volume.
Carbonic acid.....	.21
Oxygen.....	.14
Olefiant gas and like "illuminants".....	15.12
Benzine vapors and like "illuminants".....	1.13
Carbonic oxide.....	26.18
Hydrogen.....	27.29
Marsh gas.....	25.43
Nitrogen.....	4.45
	99.96

The amount of carbonic oxide here shown, viz., about twenty-six per cent., is, in my opinion, quite enough to render this gas very dangerous in view of the liability to leakage and escape which exists in its distribution and use. The amount of carbonic acid which this gas will develop in burning will also be about fifty per cent. more than that produced by ordinary coal gas.

Carbonic acid, as is well known, is fatal to life immediately if present to the extent of thirty per cent. in the air inhaled, and produces serious injury if present to the extent of even one or two per cent. in air which is inhaled for a long time.

"Carbonic oxide is, however, far more poisonous, and is stated to produce fatal effects when present even to the extent of three per cent. in the air inhaled; even very minute quantities producing severe symptoms of headache, giddiness, etc., in a short time."

Before considering specifically in detail what the petitioners desire, it is obvious that the establishment of such a manufacture must bring into employment additional capital upon which the gas consumers must pay interest. It is worth while to look for a moment at the price of gas as affected by the capital employed to manufacture and distribute it.

There is invested in the city of New York in gas capital and bonds the sum of $20,750,000, or $20.75 to each inhabitant on the basis of 1,000,000 population.

With recent proposed additions, Brooklyn will have invested a capital of $11,845,000, or $23.69 to each inhabitant, estimating the population at half a million.

In the large district supplied by the Boston companies, $5,333,000 is invested, or $15.24 to each inhabitant, on the basis of 350,000 population.

The practical result from this is that gas is sold to private consumers by every company but one in New York and Brooklyn at $2.50 per 1000 cubic feet, while in Boston proper it has been for many years sold at a lower price than in either of those cities, and the price is now $2.25 per 1000 cubic feet.

The general reasons for this result may be found in the masterly statement of John Stuart Mill, quoted in the hearing before the Board of Aldermen in 1874, page 124, and in the Commissioners' report, pages 60 and 61.

"When, in any employment, the régime of independent small producers has either never been possible, or has been suspended, and the system of many work-people under one management has become fully established, from that time any further enlargement in the scale of production is generally an unqualified benefit. It is obvious, for example, how great an economy of labor would be obtained if London were to be supplied by a single gas or water company, instead of the existing plurality. While there are even as many as two, this implies double establishments of all sorts, when one only, with a small increase, could probably perform the whole operation equally well; double sets of machinery and works, when the whole of the gas or water required could generally be produced by one set only; even double sets of pipes, if the companies did not prevent this needless expense, by agreeing upon a division of the territory. Were there only one establishment, it could make lower charges consistently with obtaining the rate of profit now realized. It is, however, an error to suppose that prices are even permanently kept down by the competition of these companies. Where competitors are so few, they always end by agreeing not to compete. They may run a race of cheapness to ruin a new candidate, but as soon as he has established his footing they come to terms with him. When, therefore, a business of real public importance can only be carried on advantageously upon so large a scale as to render the liberty of competition almost illusory, it is an unthrifty dispensation of the public resources, that several costly sets of arrangements should be kept up for the purpose of rendering to the community this one service. It is much better to treat it at once as a public function; and if it be not such as the government itself could beneficially undertake, it should be made over entire to the company or association, which will perform it on the best terms for the public. In the case of railways, for example, no one can desire to see the enormous waste of capital and land (not to speak of increased nuisance) involved in the construction of a second railway to connect the same places already united by an existing one; while the two would not do the work better than it could be done by one, and, after a short time, would probably be amalgamated. Only one such line ought to be permitted; but the control over that line never ought to be parted with by the State, unless on a temporary concession, as in France; and the vested right which Parliament has allowed to be acquired by the existing companies, like all other proprietary rights which are opposed to public utility, is morally valid only as a claim to compensation."

In this connection we quote to the same point from the commissioners' report, page 61, as follows:

"In the early days of railroads in this country and England competition was regarded as a sovereign remedy for high rates of transportation; but the result has shown a vast waste of capital, and compelled the public to pay interest on the cost of many lines which should never have been built. In gas companies the result has been the same, wherever competition in the same district has been carried to its legitimate and necessary issue. But one line of main pipes was necessary to supply the public wants, and wherever two were laid, in some form or other the consumer must pay the cost upon the unnecessary expenditure. Such a competition has led to precisely the result which might have been expected, a combination of or compromise between the companies, and an increased rate of gas to the consumers to pay the interest on the unnecessary outlay of capital.

"While the public interest in the proper and economical management of gas companies is less in extent than that in the management of railroad corporations, it is precisely of the same nature. Both are and must remain monopolies. Both are liable to be conducted arbitrarily and in a manner to injure and abuse. The railroad corporations of this State have been always controlled by law, while the gas companies have been left to pursue their way unchecked and untrammelled; and it is due to their managers to say that, in most instances, they have not abused the license they have enjoyed."

The advantages which the petitioners offer are two—a nominally lower price for the gas for the street lamps, including the care of the lamps; and a lower price for the gas used in the public buildings; with respect to the price to be charged to private consumers nothing is said in their proposals.

As regards the street lamps, they propose to use three-foot burners, as is done in New York, where the lamps are placed 100 feet apart.

In Boston, burners consuming not less than four feet per hour are used, and the lamps are 150 feet apart.

It will be seen, therefore, that to cover the same space which is now lighted by two lamps there must be, by the new plan, three lamps, the cost of which will be $75 per annum.

The experience of the Lamp Department shows that this is a little more than it now costs in the city proper.

As regards the public buildings the quantity of gas used is so small as not to be worth considering.

Whatever saving there might be would be far more than offset by the injury to the streets and the inconvenience to the public.

The whole cost of gas for the public buildings, for the year ending May 1, 1877, was $39,200.28. Of this sum $24,378.62 was paid to the Boston Gas Light Company, for the gas furnished to the public buildings in the city proper.

At the price at which the petitioners propose to furnish gas the cost would have been but $1500 less; and this saving is all the advantage which the city would derive from the grant of a perpetual right to a new corporation to break up the pavements and interrupt public travel whenever the necessities or convenience of the new corporation might require.

These are the considerations which are offered the city of Boston as reasons for the investment of further capital in the business, for the injury to be done to the streets, and for the erection of works, of the dangerous character of all works where naphtha is used.

In this connection we may quote advantageously some of the conclusions of the Gas Commissioners.

"I. That the citizens of Boston are being supplied by the Boston Gas Light Company with gas of excellent quality, and at a price, in comparison with the cost of coal and the quality of the gas, lower than in most of the cities of the United States. No fair comparison can be made in regard to price with European cities, on account of the great difference in the cost of labor and material, and the value of residuals.

"II. That there are other processes than those in use in the various companies in this city by which illuminating gas can be made, and for which great improvements in regard to cost and quality are claimed. At this present time, however, it would probably be impossible for a large gas company like the Boston Gas Light Company, to make use of any process for the manufacture of illuminating gas from naphtha or petroleum, without either paying a considerable royalty or becoming involved in lawsuits for the alleged infringement of some patent. It is, nevertheless, doubtful whether any of the patents for using petroleum or naphtha in gas-making are valid. We advise, most decidedly, against the admission of another private gas corporation within the limits of Boston to compete in the sale of gas with the existing companies, as being disadvantageous to the public generally."

In the course of our investigations we have visited the gas works in this city and the largest gas works in New York, as well as the Municipal Gas Company Works, and we find the works of the Boston Gas Light Company fully up to the standard of the best works which we have visited; and we believe that it is admitted by all gas engineers that their apparatus for experimental purposes is not surpassed by any in the country.

Your committee are of the opinion that it is not for the interest of the city to grant permission to another company to dig up its streets in order to try the experiment whether cheaper or better gas can be made from some other material than coal.

It is for the interest of every gas company to make its gas as cheaply as possible; and all experiments for this purpose may be safely left to the companies already established.

If the experiment succeeds, the new process or the new material is sure to be adopted by the watchful and intelligent managers of gas companies.

If it fails, no great harm will have been done. But if new works have been built and new mains have been laid in the streets to try an experiment which proves to be unsuccessful, the community is at once subjected to a heavy loss in addition to the inconvenience and ultimate loss which have been found to follow invariably from the acts of competing gas companies; no one has been benefited except the contractor for building the works.

Your committee, for the reasons herein set forth, recommend that the petitioners be granted leave to withdraw.

Committee on Lamps.

Laid on the table and ordered printed, on motion of Alderman Thompson.

LAND FORFEITED.

On motion of Alderman O'Brien, the order to declare forfeited certain land on Washington square, sold to F. F. Raymond, was taken from the table.

Alderman O'Brien—I have merely to add that Mr. Raymond has already paid $3180 in instalments, and $989.91 in interest. The amount due is $7406. He has also placed upon the land an iron building that cost about $1500. He proposes to surrender all that he has paid to the city if the city will take the land out of his hands. As I stated at the last meeting, he represents that he is too poor to hold the property. I understood him to say that he owns about a hundred thousand dollars in real estate in the city of Boston which is mortgaged for about seventy-five thousand dollars; and he says that if it was sold today it would not bring the value of the mortgages that are upon the property. If, however, any Alderman of the Board has any doubt as to the responsibility of Mr. Raymond, I have no objection to giving the city the benefit of the doubt; but I am satisfied that the result of it will be that the city will have to take possession of this property, if in doing so they break Mr. Raymond up. In relation to another matter, of which the Alderman from Charlestown spoke of at the last meeting, he said—

"I can only relate my own experience. Some two or three years ago, at the time this estate was purchased of the city, I purchased an estate there on ten annual instalments. I sold it within a few months after I purchased it, and the party who purchased it paid one of the instalments. Some months ago I was notified that no more instalments had been paid, and it had been a year since it left my hands. I don't think, under those circumstances, that I should be held responsible, when the parties are abundantly able to pay the second and third instalments."

The estate that the Alderman referred to, I did not know but that the members of the Board had been led to believe, had come before the Committee on Public Lands. That was not the case. Francis Thompson sold to Cressy & Hieyer, dated April 25, 1874, real estate in the city amounting to $6883.66. On this instalments have been paid amounting to $6845.63; interest has been paid amounting to $1841.65; and on that piece of property there is nothing due until April, 1878. So far as that property is concerned the Alderman from Charlestown of course will rest in peace.

Alderman Thompson—Nevertheless, what I stated in regard to the transaction is strictly true. The instalments had not been paid for a long time, and I was called upon by Mr. Hall, the Superintendent of Public Lands, and in return I called upon him several times, urging upon him the importance of his making those collections. If there is any doubt about the matter, we can send for Mr. Hall, and he can relate his experience in regard to that transaction. It is a fact, I think, that one instalment remained unpaid for a year. Cressy & Noyes were the parties that bought.

Alderman O'Brien—This is official information from the Collector's Department.

The order was passed. Sent down.

Adjourned, on motion of Alderman O'Brien.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,

DECEMBER 6, 1877.

Regular meeting at 7 o'clock P. M., Benjamin Pope, President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

Petitions were referred in concurrence.

References to Committee on Finance—1. A request of Park Commissioners for an appropriation of $3000 to carry on the work. 2. A report and order for establishment of one Industrial School, and that $15,000 be appropriated therefor. Concurred.

Reference to Committee on Streets of a report of Street Commissioners that the cost of opening Sterling street to Tremont street, as shown on an accompanying plan, is estimated at $62,500. Concurred.

Reports of leave to withdraw on petitions, viz., 1. Joachim Guerrini, for tax on an estate on Prince street to be refunded; 2. C. C. Brown et al., for abatement of tax on estate 8 Bowdoin street; 3. Mrs. John McDonough, to be paid for personal injuries from a fall in Bowdoin square. Severally accepted in concurrence.

Reports, no action necessary on petitions, viz., 1. Michael Donovan, for restoration of title of estate sold for non-payment of taxes; 2. Nathan Matthews, for remission of a tax on property not in his possession. Severally accepted in concurrence.

Orders to declare forfeited a lot of land on Washington square of F. F. Raymond and to cancel bond. Read twice, and passed in concurrence.

Report and order to cancel bond of and issue new agreement to Henry R. Plimpton for land on Dover and Albany streets, as therein set forth. Order read twice and passed in concurrence.

Order to remit tax for 1877 on two forfeited lots of land on West Castle and Albion streets. Ordered to a second reading.

Order to employ temporary clerks on account of extra registration of voters. Ordered to a second reading.

Mr. Sampson of Ward 17—In connection with that order, I wish to state that there was an order passed here some weeks ago authorizing the Registrars of Voters to employ assistant registrars in the several wards, the expense to be charged to Incidental Expenses, which was illegal, as there are ample funds in the appropriations for the registration of voters, and I wish to offer the following order to rescind a portion of that order.

There being no objection, the President entertained the motion, and Mr. Sampson offered the following:

Ordered, That so much of the order in relation to the registration of voters, approved Nov. 21, 1877, as provides that the expense ($2000) shall be charged to the appropriation for Incidental Expenses and Miscellaneous Claims be and the same hereby is rescinded, and it is herein provided that said expense be charged to the appropriation for Registration of Voters and Election Expenses.

The order was passed to a second reading.

Report and order to transcribe, print, bind and distribute the "Charlestown Book of Possessions," at a cost not to exceed $1000. Order passed to a second reading.

Report and order for an additional expenditure of $1000 for a tablet for Christ Church, Salem street. Passed to a second reading.

Order to allow $352.50 for making a phonographic report of the public hearings in the investigation of the management of Common, etc. Read twice under a suspension of the rule, on motion of Mr. Ruffin of Ward 9, and passed in concurrence.

Order to pay city laborers on Wednesday, Nov. 28, instead of on Nov. 30.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10 said he did not understand the order, which proposed to do something on a date which had passed. He did not know, but perhaps it might be intended to ratify something that had been done.

The President said the order was dated Nov. 26th, and probably it was intended to offer the order at that time.

Mr. McGaragle said the laborers had probably got their pay before this, and he moved that the order be indefinitely postponed. The President said the order had been passed by the other branch in season to be of effect, but its final passage had been delayed by the recess of the Council.

Mr. Richardson said that it was absurd to pass an order to do something at a time which had passed.

The order was indefinitely postponed in non-concurrence.

Order to pay the bills of John P. Baruard of $19, and W. P. Peirce $6, for carriage hire, as therein set forth.

Mr. Crocker of Ward 9 said it was not a matter of much consequence at this time; but he wished to call attention to the rule requiring the names of persons who used carriages to be appended to the bills before the same shall be approved by the City Council.

The President said he was informed that the bills in question had the names of the parties appended to them in accordance with the rule.

Mr. Crocker read the rule, and contended that it required that the names of the parties should come before the City Council before the bill is approved. However, he did not intend to press the objection at this time; but he believed that the rules should be strictly followed.

Mr. Spenceley of Ward 19 said that if a man could not get a bill for carriage hire before the City Government within three months, he should be made to wait three months longer, and he moved to lay on the table, which motion prevailed.

INVESTIGATION OF COMMON AND PUBLIC GROUNDS.

Mr. Ruffin of Ward 9 said he noticed by the orders that there were several debatable matters, and as they might have a long discussion he moved to suspend the rule, that he might introduce the report of the Joint Special Committee to Investigate the Management of the Department of Common and Public Grounds.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13 supposed the report to be submitted would create some discussion, as much perhaps as any of the matters down in the orders. He had intended, at the proper time, to move the postponement of the order in relation to the widening of Commercial street, and he understood that the friends of the Stony Brook improvement intended to do the same. There would be no debate on those subjects. Other matters had been on hand for the past few weeks which should be attended to.

Mr. Ruffin said the committee did not expect to have any debate on the report of the special committee; but there are some suggestions which they wished to have referred to the proper committees, and the other matters in the report could lie upon the table until members have had time to discuss the report.

Mr. Howes of Ward 18 trusted that the rule would be suspended in order that the committee could make their report, for certainly a few of the members had waited long enough to hear what was the judgment of the committee. He should object to any discussion of the report to-night, and would move to lay it upon the table as soon as it is presented.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13 said that he would withdraw his objection, with the understanding that the report should be laid upon the table as soon as the report is presented.

The rule was suspended.

Mr. Ruffin submitted the following report, which, on his motion, was laid upon the table:

The report (City Doc. 87) begins with a list of the public grounds of the city, with the area, location, etc., of each appended. It then continues—

The Committee on Common and Public Grounds have the care and custody of these; under the direction and control of the Committee on Common and Public Grounds, the Superintendent of Common and Public Grounds has the care and superintendence of the same; they have the entire direction and care, and all improvements or alterations, or repairs, which have been made in the above-named places, have been made by them or by their authority. The Common has been the pride of the citizens of Boston for many years, and is now, and justly, too; its pleasing variety of hill and dale, its gradual and easy rise from Boylston street to the hill crowned by the State House, its greensward, and, best of all, its grand old trees, make it a fitting adornment to our city. Situated as it is, in the very heart of the city, it is unlike the public parks of most other cities in this respect—it is easily and quickly reached; and in the summer season the fatigued and overheated ed citizens, and that large number of persons who find it inconvenient or impossible to leave the city, can quit the hot pavements of our streets, and heated brick walls, and in a few minutes enjoy here the pure air, green grass and trees, and nearly all the usual sights and benefits that the country affords. But while this accessibility is a pleasure and a benefit to the citizens, it fails to be an advantage to the appearance of the Common or to the trees or the grass; on the contrary, it is a positive disadvantage. Pedestrians going from one section of the city to the other, for the purpose of business or pleasure, or as in many cases, to reach the railway depots, find it convenient to "cross the Common," and the paths and malls have become to all intents and purposes public highways, at certain hours of the day and evening, as crowded as Tremont row or Court street. The consequence of this is, the earth in these much-travelled paths and malls has become hardened to the extent of making it almost impervious to water, and the trees which fringe and shade these malls, whose roots run under them, get little moisture and nourishment through this hard-packed soil when a rainfall comes, the water running quickly off into the gutters and sewers. The effect of this is obvious—the trees do not thrive; in some instances they die; the asphalt which was put down in some of the paths and malls to save them has made the matter worse.

The Public Garden, from an ash heap within the memory of men now living, has become one of the most attractive spots in the country. Some travelled persons (witnesses before us) declare it to be the prettiest public garden on either side of the Atlantic; others affirm it to be not pretty, but insignificant and unworthy. It is a question of taste and opinion. From the whole testimony, it appears to answer the present purposes of the city and meet the wants of the average citizen. It has few or no expensive plants and shrubs and tropical flowers; but to replant it with the higher grade variety of evergreens and shrubs, alluded to by the last-mentioned class of persons, would cost a great deal of money,—more than can be afforded at the present time. It is estimated that to replant the Public Garden properly, with different and finer flowers and plants, would cost not less than $50,000, and that it would require $30,000 per annum to keep and maintain it. Under the present system it costs now in the neighborhood of $20,000 per annum to carry it on. Whether the results obtained from this outlay are adequate was not made very clear by the evidence. The only comparison as to cost made was between the Public Garden and private estates. It is plain that this could be no true test.

Private estates in the country do not get the wear and tear which the Public Garden is subjected to; their walks and grass can be kept in order cheaper. Besides, the flowers used in the Public Garden are bought; those used in private estates were raised in greenhouses on the spot; and this brings us to the consideration of the question, whether it would be wise for the city to build a greenhouse. We are compelled to say, from the evidence, it would not be wise. In the first place, the city has no proper place to build three greenhouses,—it was shown that it would require three to raise 30,000 plants, the quantity used by the city,—and, secondly and more important, the kind and variety of plants used on the Public Garden are not worth being housed and cared for during the fall and winter months. It would be cheaper to give away or destroy the flowers after the first of November than to take them up and put them away in greenhouses.

The few expensive plants bought by the sub-committee on Common and Public Grounds (the rhododendrons and azaleas) were bought, in the usual course of business, from respectable business persons, and at no unreasonable price; the other cheaper variety of flowers used in the Garden were bought also by a sub-committee, and the price does not seem to have been exorbitant. The sub-committee purchase all the flowers for the city; they do it in their best judgment and discretion.

The rhododendrons might have been and ought to be, if they are to be used hereafter, imported directly by the city. It would be considerably cheaper. The contract made by the sub-committee with Galvin Brothers was a verbal one, and rather loose in its character. There was no advertisement made for bidders, although the committee did make inquiries among florists in the city as to prices. Nothing has been shown that the prices paid were not reasonable and fair; but it does seem that there should have been greater scrutiny exercised by the committee in examining the flowers delivered to the city as to their quantity and quality. There was error on the part of the sub-committee in these respects.

The grading and improvements made around the Soldiers' Monument will be an ornament to the city; but no such extensive work and expenditure of money were contemplated by the Committee on Common and Public Grounds. The vote passed Aug. 28, 1877, at the meeting of the committee, from the evidence, we must admit, was passed as we find it recorded in the clerk's book, from memoranda made at the time—"that the Superintendent be authorized to have the necessary grading done near the grounds of the Army and Navy Monument." But, from the conversation and general discussion among the committee when the vote was passed, it would appear that no member had in his mind an expenditure larger than $2500; and the impression seems to have prevailed among the majority of the committee that it would cost no more than $400 or $500. We are clearly of the opinion that, if the committee had understood that any such an amount would be spent as was spent, they would not have passed the vote.

It does not appear, however, that the Committee on the Army and Navy Monument, who made the request for this grading spoken of, or the Committee on Common and Public Grounds, had any very clear conception of the extent of the grading required, or the amount of money necessary to do it. It was during the latter part of August, and the Army and Navy Monument Committee were getting ready for the celebration on the 17th of September.

The necessity of more grading and work seems to have opened up as this work progressed and the day of celebration approached; the Superintendent, under the vote passed, felt authorized to do that which in his judgment was necessary to be done. It is in evidence that what was done was very well done, and, sooner or later, would have to be done. In our opinion, the committee erred in not seeing to it that no more money was expended than they intended should be expended. It did appear that some of the committee remonstrated when they learned the condition of things, but it seems that it was either too late—the 15th of September—or fruitless.

The city pays fifty cents per load for loam to be used in its public grounds, and a large number of loads are used annually; street sweepings, after they have lain one or two years, are said to be the best loam. From Jan. 1, 1877, to Oct. 26, 1877, it appears from the Superintendent of Health's statement [Mr. George W. Forristall] that we have gratuitously given away 36,511 loads of sweepings; this is done, and gladly done, because we have no place to deposit this large quantity. It turns out in the course of things, however, that a part of these very sweepings, when it has become suitable, is sometimes brought back by the city to be used on our Public Garden and public grounds. It is true the Superintendent of Health saves the best of these sweepings and sells them to the farmers; but the city ought not to be buyer of an article which she already has or can easily have.

The manner in which laborers are procured to work on the Common and Public Garden (through the "influence" or by the recommendation of members of the City Council) is an unqualified nuisance and wrong; it has grown up under our system of government, but it is bad in every particular—bad for the Alderman or Common Councilman who is put to the inconvenience of begging or demanding the situation sought for; bad for the laborer who gets and holds his situation only through the favor of the Alderman or Common Councilman; and bad for the city, who has to pay for the services of a person sometimes ill qualified for the work, to be changed in a few weeks for another still less qualified. Let it be abolished! The city needs in this department a permanent body of men, trained to the work.

The time will come, doubtless, when the Common and Public Garden will be under the custody and care of the Park Commissioners, and that time may not be very distant. When the extensive system of parks now contemplated shall be laid out and put into actual operation, it will be very much more convenient to have all the public pleasure grounds under the direction of one board of officers; at present the committee are not prepared to say that this change should be made, inasmuch as the present Park Commission (unpaid as the members are) was organized mainly for the purpose of securing land and laying out parks not now in existence, and estimating and determining land damages sustained by persons whose property has been taken for this purpose, and it was not contemplated, at the time of the formation of the commission, that they should have the burden of the care of the Common and Public Grounds placed upon their shoulders. A more substantial reason, however, is found in this—in the opinion of the committee, under chapter 185, statutes of 1875, and the city charter, section 39, the commission have no legal right to the custody and care of the Common; nor can the City Council give them the right until the Legislature gives them the power.

The Committee on Common and Public Grounds, in their report submitted in the Common Council, Oct. 18, 1877, say that—

“The appropriation asked for by the committee early in the year was $70,700. This was reduced by the City Council, on the recommendation of the Committee on Auditor’s Estimates, to $65,100.

“No estimate, of course, was made by the committee, when asking for their appropriation, for work on the Army and Navy Monument grounds, as it was uncertain at that time when the monument would be completed.”

“Appropriation.....	$65,100.00
Expenses up to Oct. 15.....	62,924.27
Balance unexpended.....	$2,175.73

“The committee estimate that, in addition to the balance unexpended, there will be required the sum of $15,000, divided as follows:

“For material used in grading and putting in order the monument grounds.....	$6,000.00
Teaming, tools, bulbs, etc.....	1,500.00
Labor and general expenses.....	7,500.00
	$15,000.00”

From the above it appears that the Committee on Common and Public Grounds have expended more money than the City Council appropriated for that department for this year. This was a serious mistake. The committee had no legal nor moral right to do it, and from any standpoint it was clearly and inexcusably wrong. The joint rules of the City Council require that—

“Whenever an expenditure is required for an object, or a purpose, not contemplated at the time the appropriation was made, the committee, board or officer having charge thereof shall furnish to the City Council a detailed statement in print of the expenditures already made, and the necessity for an additional appropriation; and no contract shall be made, nor expenditure authorized, in either case, unless provision for the same shall be made by special transfer from some of the appropriations contained in the general appropriation bill, or by loan.”

We have already adverted to the probable manner in which the Committee on Common and Public Grounds were led into the commission of this mistake; but it was no less a mistake, and a grave one, to say the least; the blunder was in passing the limitless vote they did, “that the Superintendent be authorized to have the necessary grading done near the grounds of the Army and Navy Monument.” Under this authorization it is fortunate that the deficiency in the appropriation is as small as it is. The only manner in which the expenditure of money could have been controlled under this vote, and kept within the bounds of the intention of the committee, was by a personal oversight, on the part of the committee, of the work being done.

If it be answered that this was impossible, or asking too much of the committee, the reply is, then, that they should not have passed such a vote. With the limited information which the committee possessed as to the amount of grading required, they may have thought it their duty to pass the vote; but, having passed it, they should have taken the precaution to protect the city’s interest by seeing to it that the amount expended did not exceed their intentions; and, when it became apparent that it would require a very much larger amount of money to complete the grading around the monument than was originally contemplated, the committee should have immediately reported the fact to the City Council, and asked for an additional appropriation.

At the request of the committee, the City Engineer made a survey of the work done around the Soldiers’ Monument, with a view of finding out the amount of material used in filling and grading. We append his report:

OFFICE OF CITY ENGINEER, )
CITY HALL, BOSTON, Nov. 20, 1877. }

Estimate of amount of filling around Soldiers’ Monument, on Boston Common, as measured in place, eight hundred and thirty-five (835) cubic yards of stone; twenty-six hundred (2600) cubic yards of loam.

JOS. P. DAVIS,
City Engineer.

To Alderman Hugh O’Brien, Chairman of Investigating Committee, etc.

The above-mentioned survey of the work done around the Soldiers’ Monument was made by the City Engineer about the middle of November, two months, or more, after the earth and gravel had been deposited there. In submitting this report the City Engineer, in a conversation, stated to the committee that when loose earth had lain any length of time, from rain and other causes, there would be a shrinkage of thirty-three per cent. He also said that there were found very many stones, large as a man’s head, at the bottom of the road-bed, and that gravel and stone-chips would get into the interstices between these large stones to an extent that would cause a shrinkage of fifteen per cent. Mr. Owen Nawn, contractor, who furnished loam, stone chips, and gravel, used around the Soldiers’ Monument, testified that he delivered 5635 loads of loam, and 950 loads of stone chips and gravel; also, that his carts measured twenty cubic feet, and that he received fifty cents per load for loam, and $1.15 per load for stone chips and gravel, and for each load of gravel or loam delivered on the grounds about the monument he received a ticket.

George Coyle, according to his bill against the city, delivered 414 loads of loam, at fifty cents per load, and Martin Hayes, we find, delivered 494 loads of loam, at fifty cents per load. This, Mr. Galvin says, was all the material used around the monument for filling and grading. The following is submitted:

835 cubic yards of stone, equal to 22,545 cubic feet.
950 loads of stone, at 20 cubic feet per load, equal to.....19,000 “ “

Difference equal to..... 3,545 “ “
Equal to 177 loads.

835 cubic yards plus 15 per cent., equal to.....26,926 cubic feet.
650 loads at 20 cubic feet per load, equal to.....19,000 “ “

6,926 “ “
Equal to 346 loads.

Or 346 loads increase of stone, etc.
2,600 cubic yards soil, equal to...70,200 cubic feet.
Add 1/3 for shrinkage.....23,400 “ “

93,600 “ “
6,543 loads soil, at 20 cubic feet per load, equal to...130,860 “ “

37,260 “ “
Equal to 1,863 loads.

Or 1863 loads decrease of loam.

It appears, from the foregoing figures, that there is a difference between the City Engineer’s estimate and the tickets, in favor of the city, of 1863 loads of loam, and a difference in favor of the tickets of 346 loads of stone chips and gravel. Expressed in a money value, this difference is $533.60 in favor of the city; that is, if the above calculation is correct, the city has paid, or will have to pay, $533.60 for an article not delivered. In this connection it ought to be stated that the City Engineer also said that any survey that might be made would not be absolutely correct; that there is a wide margin, either way, for error; and we ought, also, to add that there is a prevailing impression that tip-carts do not hold twenty cubic feet.

The manner of conducting business in the meetings of the Committee on Common and Public Grounds was irregular; there was lack of parliamentary precision and decorum. This is to be condemned.

For some time the keeping of Franklin square, Blackstone square, Union park and Lowell square has been given out on contract, and the cost has been moderate. The committee would recommend that this practice be continued, and that hereafter a still greater number of the public squares be included in the contract work.

The committee are of the opinion that too many men have been employed in the Department of Common and Public Grounds. They recommend, for the future, a reduction of the force.

In relation to the elm trees in Chester square, the committee believe that it is impossible to make them grow in that locality, because of the unfavorable character of the soil and the proximity of the poplar trees, with their thick and far-reaching network of roots.

The committee recommend the passage of the following ordinance, amendment to the joint rules, and resolution to amend the ordinance on parks, page 590, Statutes and Ordinances, by adding the following:

Be it ordained, etc., When trees, plants, shrubs, flowers or evergreens are required to be used on the Common and public grounds, exceeding in value $500, the Committee on Common and Public Grounds shall advertise in two or more newspapers, during the autumn preceding the spring that they may be required, for sealed proposals for furnishing such trees, plants, shrubs, flowers or evergreens, describing, as particularly as may be, the quantity and quality, and the times and places of delivery. Such proposals shall be opened at the meeting of the Committee on Common and Public Grounds, and the contract shall be awarded to the lowest bidder.

Rule 5 of Joint Rules and Orders of the City Council is hereby amended by adding the following:

"And at all meetings of committees, the records of the previous meeting shall be read," so that it shall read, "The Joint Standing Committee shall cause the records of their proceedings to be kept in books provided for that purpose, and at all meetings of committees the records of the previous meeting shall be read."

Resolved, That a proper performance of the city work requires that the Superintendent of Common and Public Grounds should hire the laborers employed in his department, free from the interference or suggestion of members of the City Council. Respectfully submitted.

COMMERCIAL-STREET WIDENING AND STONY BROOK IMPROVEMENT.

The amended order for an appropriation of eight hundred thousand dollars for the widening of Commercial street was considered under unfinished business.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13 moved that the further consideration of the subject be specially assigned to next Thursday evening at eight o'clock.

Mr. Pratt of Ward 21 inquired for what reason this order has been specially assigned night after night for several weeks past, and at this time, when there is a prospect of its going over for some time to come. There are but three or four meetings in which anything can be done this year, and he hoped with the large amount of business on the table it would be acted upon and not wait until the last moments of the year, when it would have to be hurried through.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—It is easy to see that the attendance is somewhat light, and I don't think the members are quite in the mood for discussing this matter tonight. But for one, I generally talk out what I mean, and it was said in the Transcript a little while ago that this government was going on spending thousands of dollars, and using that as an argument against the reelection of Mr. Prince; and in order that they cannot have that to say of this branch, a majority of the members of which are Republicans, in going on and spending this money for the widening of Commercial street, I think it had better lie over until next Thursday, after the election.

Mr. Pratt—I am sorry the gentleman has been frightened at the articles in the Transcript, but I think it is time for the question to be taken up and decided. I am not anxious to have the question debated this evening, but it looks a little mysterious for the gentleman from Ward 13 to have this matter specially assigned week after week, and when the time comes to which it has been specially assigned he moves a further assignment. It looks particularly mysterious when there is another matter of importance before us which should be adopted this year, and it is apparently kept along awaiting for Commercial street to be acted upon, and in the mind of the gentleman from Ward 13 there appears to be some connection between Commercial street and Stony Brook, which I fail to comprehend; and as the gentleman has announced, apparently with authority, that the Stony Brook matter was to be postponed, I thought I would ask this explanation. I hope some of these important matters upon our programme will be acted upon and not kept along and be crowded through without proper debate at the end of the year. Even if the Commercial-street matter is not passed and will have to go over to another year, I hope it will not force other important matters to lie over, as has been intimated.

Mr. Flynn—I only want to say that as a friend of Commercial street and Stony Brook, I would not advise the friends of Commercial street or Stony Brook to force either matter tonight, because if they do they will be defeated. That is the reason I asked for the assignment.

The order in regard to Commercial street was specially assigned for consideration on next Thursday evening at eight o'clock.

The order for a loan for the improvement of Stony Brook and for a joint special committee to take charge of the work, was laid on the table, on motion of Mr. Coe of Ward 23.

REFRESHMENT BILLS.

The preamble and order for copies to be submitted in print of all bills for refreshment and carriage hire incurred from Jan. 1, 1877, to the present time, was considered under unfinished business, the question being on ordering the yeas and nays on solving the doubt on the question of including all such bills up to Jan. 1 next, which the President had declared rejected.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—It appears to me that we have gone far enough in this matter this year, and I don't believe that any member of the Council cares to go any farther, and I move that the order be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. Pratt of Ward 21—I don't know why the matter should be indefinitely postponed. It is true, as the gentleman has said, that a great deal has been said about the refreshment bills this year; it is true that extravagant statements have been made outside in regard to the amount of junketing alleged to have been done by the members of the present City Council; and where there is so much smoke there evidently must be some fire at the bottom of it, and the public thinks there is some reason for it. Although I should doubt the expediency of passing the order without some amendment, yet I hope this matter will not be indefinitely postponed without some action by the City Council. It has been stated by a member of the City Council that the expenses for refreshment and carriage hire have been steadily on the decrease for the past ten years, and figures from the Auditor's office have been produced for the purpose of showing that fact. Those figures were taken from the fiscal years, and they show that from 1869-70, which appears to be the most extravagant year in the history of riding and drinking by the City Council, there has been a constant decrease in such expenditures until this year. The figures produced for 1876-77 include about two months of the present calendar year; therefore, so far as they affect the present City Council favorably or adversely, they mislead. Now, I do not oppose the indefinite postponement of this order for the purpose of parading before the public any unseemly details; but because I think the matter can be better disposed of than by an indefinite postponement. I have taken the pains to examine into the accounts for this year, to see whether this City Council has eaten and drunk and ridden less, and while I find that it has not been the most extravagant City Council, I do find that such expenses are about one-third more than they were for either of the three preceding years. I obtained from the Auditor's office the expenditures for 1875-76 and 1877 from September to March inclusive, in the calendar years, which do not include the amounts paid for the Board of Aldermen and the entertainment of the city's guests, or the special appropriations for the entertainment of other guests, which I shall mention in detail.

Mr. Pratt read the following statement, though omitting some of the details, saying that he would have them all reported:

Bills for Refreshment and Carriage Hire.

Expenditures for refreshments and carriage hire of the City Governments of 1875, 1876 and 1877 for the drafts from March to September, inclusive, in each year.

This does not include amounts paid for board or entertainment of the city's guests.

Prepared at the request of Councilman Charles E. Pratt.

Auditor's Office, Oct. 25, 1877.

Mr. Pratt continued—These statements do not include the excursions down the harbor this year, or the expense of the Army and Navy Monument Committee, or the expense of the entertainment at the Hotel Brunswick, which was more than a "simple repast," and cost the city more than $4200.00. I simply produced them for the purpose of showing, in an accurate manner, what the true state of the question is this year, namely, that the expenses for refreshment and carriage hire, taking the calendar months, are largely in excess of the four preceding years, and more than one-third greater than either of the three preceding years. I hope this order will not be indefinitely postponed, but that some gentlemen will have an opportunity of discussing it; and as I did not have the opportunity to be present when the gentleman from Ward 3 offered the order, and of hearing his statement, I should like to hear something more in regard to it before having it banished from us.

The President—The motion to indefinitely postpone is not in order at this time, the question being on ordering the yeas and nays on solving the doubt.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—Then I would move that the whole matter be laid upon the table.

Mr. Crocker of Ward 9—Would not that motion be out of order at the present time?

The President—The Chair thinks it would not be in order at the present time.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—I would ask whether, other business having intervened, a motion to lay upon the table is not in order?

The President—The Chair thinks not.

Mr. Flynn—Then may I ask when would be the proper time to make such a motion?

The President—After the disposal of the yeas and nays.

Mr. McGaragle of Ward 8—Suppose the Council ordered the yeas and nays, would n't it be in order to lay it on the table?

The President—Not until the Council has disposed of the original motion for the amendment.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—Now I will make a motion to adjourn. I do this for the purpose of testing this question.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—I hope that motion will not be—

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—I call the gentleman to order.

The motion to adjourn was put, and the President was in doubt.

Mr. Thompson called for the yeas and nays, which were ordered on solving the doubt. The roll was called with the following result:

Yeas—Messrs. Burke, Cannon, Dee, J. J. Flynn, Hiscock, Kelley (Ward 6), Kelley (Ward 3), Kidney, McClusky, O'Donnell, Roach—11.

Nays—Messrs. Barnard, Barry, Beeching, Blanchard, Blodgett, Brintnall, Brown, Clarke, Coe, Crocker, Danforth, Day, Doberty, Duggan, Felt, D. A. Flynn, Fraser, Ham, Hibbard, Howes, Jackson, McDonald, McGaragle, Morrill, Mowry, Nugent, Pearl, Perham, O. H. Pierce, Pope, Pratt, Reed, J. B. Richardson, M. W. Richardson, Roberts, Ruffin, Sampson, Smardon, Spenceley, Stone, Thompson, Thorndike, Upham, Vose, Warren, E. R. Webster, G. B. Webster, Wilbur, Wolcott—49.

Absent or not voting—Messrs. Cox, Cross, Fagan, Fernald, Loughlin, Mullane, O'Connor, J. H. Pierce, Shepard, Sibley, Souther.

The motion to adjourn was lost.

The yeas and nays were ordered on solving the doubt on the original amendment to include all bills between Jan. 1, 1877, and Jan. 1, 1878.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—Will a motion to lay on the table be in order now?

The President—No, sir; the question was upon ordering the yeas to solve the doubt, the Chair having decided the amendment rejected.

Mr. Flynn—Does the Chair rule that the motion to lay on the table is not in order?

The President—The gentleman rose in his place and doubted the vote on the amendment, and the Chair wishes to solve that doubt.

Mr. Flynn—My point now is whether I can make a motion to lay upon the table.

The President—The Chair thinks not.

Mr. Richardson—It strikes me that pending the solving of the doubt the motion to lay upon the table was not in order; but the solving of the doubt has been disposed of, and now it seems to me that the motion of the gentleman from Ward 13 is in order.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9 read rule 63 to show that no motion or debate of any kind was in order until after the doubt had been solved.

The question on the amendment was put; on the first trial a quorum did not vote.

Mr. McGaragle of Ward 8 moved that the roll be called to ascertain if a quorum was present.

The Council refused to order a call of the roll.

The amendment was lost by a division—8 for, 48 against.

On motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 13, the preamble and order were laid upon the table.

Near the close of the session, on motion of Mr. Barnard of Ward 24, the preamble and order were taken from the table and indefinitely postponed.

SALARIES FOR MEMBERS OF CITY GOVERNMENT.

Orders to ask the General Court for acts providing that the Aldermen shall be elected for not less than three years, devote their whole time to the city, perform the duties of commissioners, and be paid a salary; and that the members of the Common Council shall be elected for like time, and also be paid a salary. Rejected.

Also, an ordinance to provide for the payment of members of the City Council, for expenses incurred by them in the performance of their official duties. (Printed City Doc. No. 94.)

On motion of Mr. Thompson of Ward 9 the ordinance was specially assigned for consideration at half-past eight o'clock next Thursday evening.

SMALLPOX HOSPITAL.

Mr. Sampson of Ward 17 moved to reconsider the vote of reference to a special committee of the report and order for an expenditure of an additional sum of $6500 in the erection of a new smallpox hospital, etc.; $2256.36 to be transferred from the appropriation for Board of Health, and the balance to be charged to appropriation for Smallpox Hospital.

Mr. Sampson—My reason for moving the reconsideration is that the amount asked for is absolutely required to finish the present building. When this matter was before the Finance Committee the only parties who can be investigated were investigated there, and the Finance Committee made a report reflecting upon the Board of Health as strongly as any investigating committee can; and as the facts are well known, it is entirely unnecessary for any investigating committee to be appointed. The Board of Health have not exceeded their appropriation. It will require six thousand dollars more to finish the building, and in order that the Council may understand the question I would ask the President to read the report of the Finance Committee.

The President read the report recommending a transfer for the additional appropriation, and styling the action of the Board of Health in exceeding their appropriation as highly reprehensible.

Mr. Sampson—I suppose no one will doubt but that the Board of Health are to blame in this matter; but there is no need of an investigation. We have a smallpox hospital there nearly completed, and the city is under contract with contractors to complete that work, and it will cost some money to suspend that work, for the city will of course be liable for damages. Everybody can see that. Every one who was here three years ago knows the facts relating to the establishment of the smallpox hospital. The institution was formerly located at the Marcella-street building, now occupied as a truant school, and an order was introduced to establish a smallpox hospital at an expense of twenty-nine thousand dollars. That order was preliminary to another one offered here for an appropriation of twenty-five thousand dollars. The appropriation was made, but was not used until the present year. The Board of Health were not able to find a suitable lot of land until last summer. They have now purchased a lot in the rear of Canterbury street, and have gone on and constructed a building in a plain and simple manner. The land cost $9000, and the cost of the building was estimated by the City Architect to be $14,000. At the time the matter was submitted to him last July, he told the Board of Health that it would take him some six weeks to make his plans and specifications, and probably it would require two weeks longer to advertise and get proposals for the contract. The board were very desirous of getting the building done before cold weather set in, to avoid sending patients to Gallop's Island in the winter season. They urged the Architect to bring in his plans earlier, but he told them it would be impossible with the work he had on hand; and he advised them to go ahead and get in the foundation for the cellar, and they did so, and since then everything has been and will be done by contract. There seems to be no occasion for further delay. Smallpox patients are now sent to Gallop's Island, and with the rigors of winter upon us it seems to me it would be a hardship to send them there during the winter. I hope the reconsideration will prevail, and that the money asked for will be appropriated.

Mr. Pratt of Ward 21—Since this matter was last before the Council I have taken the pains to go out to Canterbury street and examine the site of the building and the building itself, and also to look over the accounts of the Board of Health in relation to it; and the investigation has been such as to satisfy my mind that the Board of Health have not exceeded their appropriation, and that they have not exceeded any fair expenditures that might have been made for the purpose for which the building is intended. I must differ with the gentleman from Ward 17 in respect to the amount of censure due to the Board of Health. I find that the nature of the contracts made is such that they do not involve any further liability from what has already been incurred, and that they have funds in hand to meet all the bills which have been contracted for. I find the circumstances to be about this: A long time ago—I need not state again what the gentleman from Ward 17 has so well explained—there was an appropriation of \$29,000 for the purpose of establishing a smallpox hospital; and in 1875 the City Council instructed the Board of Health to use \$25,000 of that in building a hospital in some place where they could locate it. They had, therefore, to begin with, an appropriation of \$25,000. As the gentleman stated, they have gone ahead and expended of that amount \$9000 for  $4\frac{1}{4}$  acres of land, and \$830 for extending the water pipes to the premises, which left \$15,170 for grading the land, digging the cellar, for clearing off the scrub forest standing on most of the land, fencing the lot, and erecting suitable buildings for a hospital and stable, which seems to me to be not a very large sum with which to do that. When every bill is paid, the expenditures up to the present time will not exceed \$24,600; that statement is given to me officially, and the larger part of it confirmed by reference to the book—that is to say, \$23,600 have already been used of the amount they had to start with—and there are other bills to come in which will bring it up to about \$24,600. Beyond that no liability has been incurred, and the contracts made are not such as to render the city liable for any sum on account of them. I shall not go into the details of the contracts unless requested. Now, the City Council had appropriated \$29,000 as the sum deemed sufficient for establishing a smallpox hospital; and \$25,000 were given to the Board of Health for that purpose, and they now ask for the balance of that sum and \$2300 more. Now, sir, hospitals do not spring up out of the ground. This hospital is 150 feet in length, and is calculated to accommodate seventy-five patients; and in cases of great emergency a great many more. It has been built upon the plainest plan, in a good location, is isolated from other dwellings, has good drainage and exposure to the sun; all the surroundings are adapted for convalescents, and nothing has been put upon it for luxury. It has been built in a substantial manner, with a good stable for the ambulances that may be required in cases of epidemic. The land has only been graded sufficiently to furnish a driveway for the teams. There is a plain, picket fence; [to Mr. Felt] the house has no lightning rods, and everything about the building is aimed to make it appropriate for the purposes to which it is to be dedicated. Under that state of facts, I do not see why we should stop the work. The Board of Health have discharged all the laborers not necessary to take care of the premises; they have incurred no liability that will involve the city beyond the appropriation; they have erected a building that will be a credit to the city, and in case the smallpox should break out in cold weather, as it is liable to do at any time, it will furnish a place where patients can be carried. When the smallpox was here before, Mr. Justice Colt was taken with it, and without mincing matters, he requested to be carried to the hospital. Members of the City Council may have to be carried there. The exposure incident to taking patients to Gallop's Island is dangerous, and a hospital on the main land is needed. Under the existing facts, I think any man who looks at the matter impartially will say that this ought not to be referred to any special investigating committee, but that the additional money ought to be cheerfully granted.

Mr. Wilbur of Ward 20—Since this matter has been before the City Council I have taken some pains to go out to this building. I found that it covered nearly 7000 feet of land, and was plainly and substantially built, and I don't know that I can say anything more than what has already been said, except to corroborate what has been stated. A great many things which might have been added, but which would have increased the expense, have been left off, and so far as the cost is concerned it has seemed to me to reflect credit upon either the committee in charge of the erection of the work, or the architect; and I must say I was very much surprised when I examined the building. I cannot see where any money has been misspent; on the contrary I think it has been judiciously spent, and I cannot see any necessity for an investigation. All the bills are open for examination, and any judge of such work would say it is a substantial, plain and appropriate building; that its location and surroundings are a credit to the management of those who have so far carried it through. I hope there will be no delay; and it seems to me this additional appropriation should be added, so that they can go on, and have the building ready for occupancy as soon as possible.

Mr. Stone of Ward 3—I don't know that anybody doubts that the building is substantially built; the only question was whether the work should be done by the day. The architect testified that the original estimate was for $14,000 for the building, and the land costing $9000, left $1000 for the stable, which was ample. They ask for $6300 more. Now, why was all this work done by the day which should have been done by contract. A few weeks ago a committee asked for an additional appropriation, and there has been an investigation, to which no one objected.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—I would call the gentleman's attention to the fact that the Committee on Common exceeded their appropriation before coming to the City Council for additional money.

Mr. Stone—And because this is a commission which is a pet hobby of some gentlemen we must keep our hands off. I believe in having this investigated, and if everything is all right it will do no harm to the Board of Health. They have gone on till they exceeded their appropriation of $25,000. The same gentleman who testified before the committee testified last spring that $350,000 would complete the high school, including the heating apparatus; and the other day he said he did n't think the building could be completed with that. I would like to ask the gentleman from Ward 21 if the carpenter work was done by the day?

Mr. Pratt—The gentleman from Ward 17 stated the circumstances under which the work on this hospital was begun. First, plans were asked for, and it was found that some time would be required to complete them, and it was found necessary to expedite business in order to complete the hospital before cold weather, and the Board of Health unanimously concluded it was better to go ahead and complete it by the day, and avoid a delay of six or eight weeks. The work has been done by the day under the oversight and superintendence of the Board of Health, who employ Mr. Weatherspoon to overlook the work and buy materials where he can make arrangements; and an arrangement was made with ex-Alderman Sayward to do the masonry. Mr. Sayward has no contract except to set men to work and keep them there until the job is done. He has engaged to keep the men there to do the work, and he is to charge the regular market rates for their labor: he has done so, and has no other percentage than the usual percentage on the wages on his men.

Mr. McGaragle of Ward 8—The gentleman mentions ex-Alderman Sayward as in charge of the carpenter work. I understand that he is a mason.

Mr. Sampson—I have a communication from the City Architect saying that the exterior walls and digging the cellar were done by Mr. Sayward by the day, and that all the interior work is done by contract.

Mr. Pratt—I inadvertently made a change in the names. Mr. Weatherspoon had charge of the wood work and Mr. Sayward of the mason work. I don't think there is any special contract work.

Mr. Sampson—I only know what I have read in this communication from the City Architect. He says—

"The work was commenced by the day instead of by contract, in order to save the delay that would be caused in preparing plans and specifications, and for advertising (saving about six weeks), this was considered important. The plastering, the painting and glazing and the plumbing were estimated upon and contracted for. Also all of the work for the interior finishing of the main building is to be contracted for."

Mr. McGaragle—Unfortunately for me I know something about building smallpox hospitals, and when the gentleman intimates that they do not grow up like mushrooms, I call to mind one built on Swett street in 1872 covering a good deal more land than the present one, which was commenced and completed in five days. Be that as it may, I don't propose to oppose this appropriation, for I think it is better to go on and finish the work. But I don't approve of the system of doing the work by the Board of Health. They have never advertised for proposals and given the work out by contract. If I understand it correctly, this hospital will cost from seven to ten thousand dollars more than was estimated for. I have not seen the buildings, but I am very sure I would be glad to take the contract for a good deal less than the price stated as required to finish it. The two smallpox hospitals built in 1872, and destroyed by fire, were 140 feet long by thirty wide, resting on pile foundations, were two stories high, pitch roof, well shingled, with a large number of windows on both sides and ends, with ventilation underneath—very large and substantially built structures, and with the laundry, smoking and other rooms, cost the city but $14,200.

Mr. Pratt—Was that to be a permanent building, finished suitably for winter year in and year out?

Mr. McGaragle—One was intended to be a permanent building, but was destroyed by fire. The other was a single-story building, suitable for an emergency, and cost $9000. As I understand, they have been paying masons $3.75 a day. It may be very well. There is no man I should be more willing to trust to do the work satisfactorily to all concerned than ex-Alderman Sayward. If that gentleman has done the mason work I guess the city wont suffer.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—We can reconsider this vote and pass the appropriation, and then appoint a committee on investigation. Facts enough have been stated to show that there is a strong difference of opinion between the members of the City Government. My own idea is that the duties of the City Council should be purely critical. Let all the departments see that the City Council will frequently examine their accounts and be jealous of their privileges, and I think it will tend to bring about economy in the management of the details of the city business. I know nothing about the facts of this case, and from the statements made I cannot see that there is evidence of anything wrong in the action of the Board of Health. Yet the Finance Committee think that they did wrong, and are deserving of censure; and the gentleman who made the motion for an investigation brings in the action for another individual as a reason for the investigation.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 11—I am not opposed to the appointment of investigating committees in any case where they can be of any good; but I must say that in this case I can see no cause for an investigating committee. When this matter came before the Finance Committee, they constituted themselves an investigating committee and sent for the architect and Board of Health. From the information derived from those who came before them, and from other sources, the Finance Committee thought they were fully justified in granting the appropriation, although the building has cost somewhat more than was first estimated, the details of which have been presented by other members, and it is not necessary for me to do so. In view of all the facts before the Council, I don't think an investigating committee will develop any new light or facts, and I do not see any cause for the appointment of such a committee.

Mr. Coe of Ward 23—There are two or three things in regard to this matter that we should bear in mind. The gentleman from Ward 21 has spoken of an appropriation of $29,000 which the Board of Health were to have for the erection of this building. There is danger of the Council being misled, because that was a balance of an old appropriation, out of which the City Government allowed them $25,000; and so far as the Board of Health are concerned, they did not know but that $25,000 would be all that they would have; in fact, the member of the Board of Health who came before the Finance Committee did not know that there was an appropriation of $29,000. The Board of Health went to work with an appropriation of $25,000; they bought land at an expense of $9000, leaving $16,000, which was all they were to have, so far as they knew; and yet they laid out work for a building costing forty per cent. more money than they had to operate with. I contend that they had no right to go ahead in this way; that the report of the Finance Committee is correct, and that it was reprehensible for the Board of Health to do so. It seems to me the idea of the gentleman from Ward 9 is right. I shall vote to reconsider, and pass the order, and then vote for an investigating committee. If I was a member of the Board of Health I should favor it, for if they are not to blame, the investigation will be doing them a kindness. The gentleman from Ward 21 has spoken of the Board of Health as not exceeding their appropriation. As I understand it, the Department of Common and Squares had not exceeded their appropriation. They had spent all their money and asked for more; we allowed them the money and appointed the investigating committee. I don't see why the whole truth should not come out in the case before us.

Mr. Pratt—The Committee on Common had incurred liabilities which required us to pass orders for money in addition to what they had. The Board of Health have not incurred liabilities that will have to be met hereafter and require us to put an appropriation at their disposal to do so. But I wish to answer in a few words what the gentleman from Ward 23 has suggested, which very much depresses the tone of his censure when properly understood. We are not asked to make a new appropriation. The board have had in their hands certain funds for the preservation of the public health; they had specially set apart $25,000 for a smallpox hospital; they had in their hands a balance of $4000 more than that which had been originally set apart for the purpose of erecting a smallpox hospital, and they ask for that. In other words, the City Council of 1875 tried to get up a smallpox hospital for less than the amount appropriated. Now the Board come and say that was not enough; but you ought to give us the whole appropriation, namely, $29,000. The Board of Health have in their hands sufficient funds to transfer $6300 for this purpose, and the question is not on making a new appropriation. I do not object to an investigating committee. I think I should vote for one if anybody desires it. I think it is well to investigate where there is any serious charge against any department of the City Government. As has been suggested by two or three gentlemen, I think it would be well to reconsider the reference, pass the order, and allow the building to be completed; and then investigate the matter. Since I made my statement before, one or two facts have been called to my recollection in regard to the work. The carpenter work, under the direction of Mr. Weatherspoon, has been done by the day; the carpenters have been employed at $1.75 a day, which I think is a small enough sum. I understand that the materials have been bought at the lowest possible rate in the market, and the only interest Mr. Weatherspoon has is his $5 a day for superintendence. The gentleman from Ward 8 has given a sufficient guarantee for Mr. Sayward. The expense of bringing the water pipes a long distance was $830, and should be taken out of these figures, because it is simply transferring the money from one pocket of the city to another. I am still of the opinion that the Board of Health is not entitled to any censure in the matter, and I have formed that opinion by an actual inspection of the site of the buildings and of the accounts. If any gentlemen have different opinions, I hope the committee will be appointed.

Mr. Mowry of Ward 11—It seems to me it would be politic to reconsider this matter for the purpose of passing the appropriations. I think the Board of Health are to be commended for ceasing operations and asking for an appropriation before finishing this smallpox hospital. It seems to me that the additional appropriation is needed, because some changes were made in the plans, and on account of the large expense of introducing the water pipes. With all these facts, it seems politic to pass the appropriation, and I move the previous question.

The President said the motion was not necessary, the time for discussion on the reconsideration having expired.

The reconsideration prevailed and the question came on the passage of the order appointing the investigating committee.

Mr. Clarke of Ward 22—In arguing this matter, gentlemen have lost sight of the power of the Board of Health. By the act of the Legislature, on page 385, the city of Boston is "authorized to erect, under the direction of the Board of Health and Inspector of Buildings, any wooden building within the city"; and on the next page it says that when diseases dangerous to the public health break out at any time, the Board of Health shall immediately provide such a hospital for the sick and afflicted as they judge best for the accommodation of the inhabitants. The city is authorized to erect the building, and the Board of Health are to direct where it shall be erected; and therefore I don't see that they have exceeded the powers that the statute gives them. If they have erected a suitable building for the purpose, we are bound to pay the expense, no matter what it may cost. Further than that, in case any infectious diseases should break out in Boston at this time, they have a right to take any dwelling house for a hospital in any portion of the city. Consequently, it is their duty to provide this hospital, and it seems to me this building should be finished before the weather gets more inclement than it is, because, under the present state of things, they will be obliged to take patients down to Gallop's Island, which would be dangerous in winter, or else they would be obliged to put the city to the expense of seizing some private house.

Mr. Barry of Ward 22—There is one fact to which I wish to call attention. I don't know exactly what the powers of the Board of Health are, but I know that if the rumor is true that they have paid $3.75 a day for masons it is $1.50 a day more than the market rate. I hope the appropriation will be made to complete this building, as it has got so far along; but I trust that the investigation will take place. I hope it will be understood if men can come to the city and get work to do at their own prices.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—The gentleman from Ward 22 [Mr. Clarke] has raised the point that the Board of Health have the right to force the city to erect such a building. I apprehend that a proper reading of the law will show that that is not the case. That power is to be exercised only in case of a sudden breaking out of the disease. This is a case where they are acting as the agent of the city to carry out an appropriation made by the City Council. The city made them the agent, and they have no right to exceed the appropriation. To use a common expression, they should have cut their coat according to the cloth; but they have endeavored to cut an English walking suit out of the cloth for a coat. I think that either the Board of Health or their official adviser is to blame. I suggest an amendment, that the appropriation be made, and then a special committee be appointed to investigate the course taken by the Board of Health in erecting this building. I prefer that Mr. Stone should put the amendment in shape, and for the purpose of allowing him to do so I will give him the floor.

Mr. Stone—I move as a substitute that the special committee consist of five members of this branch with such as the Aldermen may join.

Mr. Crocker of Ward 9—The question now is upon referring it to a special committee to report back. I think the better way is to reject the motion to refer, pass the appropriation, and then I should be willing to have the rule suspended to allow a motion for an investigating committee.

Mr. Thompson—I hope the gentleman from Ward 3 will withdraw the motion to refer, allow us to vote directly upon the appropriation, and then renew the motion for an investigation.

Mr. Stone—If there is no objection, I withdraw the motion, so that the vote may be taken on the appropriation, although I see no occasion for passing the appropriation, as the architect told the Board of Health to go ahead and he would shoulder the responsibility. If he wants to shoulder the responsibility, he ought to provide the means.

The order for the transfer was ordered to a second reading and laid over under the rules.

On motion of Mr. Stone, the rule was suspended and he moved to appoint a special committee of five, with such as the Aldermen may join, to make an investigation.

On motion of Mr. Howes of Ward 18, the motion was amended so as to require them to report within two weeks, and as amended, passed.

The President added Messrs. McGaragle of Ward 8 and Spenceley of Ward 19 to the original committee, which consisted of Messrs. Stone of Ward 3, Reed of Ward 17, and Barnard of Ward 24. Sent up.

On motion of Mr. Sampson, the rule was suspended and the order for the transfer was passed in concurrence—yeas 62, nays 1; Mr. Stone of Ward 3 voting nay.

AUDITOR'S EXHIBIT.

The Auditor's Exhibit for Dec. 1 was received. Sent down.

Total appropriations, $14,000,405.72; expended, $8,482,032.51.

PETITION REFERRED.

Petition of T. O. Nichols for compensation for damage to a wagon by defect in Putnam street. Referred to Committee on Claims. Sent up.

EMPLOYES ON FIRE BOAT.

Mr. Spenceley of Ward 19 submitted a report from the Joint Committee on Fire Department on the order in relation to the pay and rations of the crew of the fire boat, recommending the passage of the following as a substitute for the original order:

Ordered, That the pay of the officers and men employed in the service of the Fire Department be and it is hereby increased the sum of $100 each per annum, said increase to take effect from the beginning of the present year.

Mr. Spenceley—At the beginning of the year a reduction was not only made in the pay of the men, but the rations allowed them were taken from them. Last year they were allowed $105 a month for rations on board the fire boat, equal to $1260 a year. Last year the captain of the fire boat received $1368.75, and he has been reduced to $1250. The mate was paid $1186.25, and was reduced to $1000. The engineman was reduced from $1368.75 to $1200, and the assistant engineman from $1186.25 to $1100, making a reduction in their pay of $560, and a reduction in pay and rations of $1820. The committee went over this matter thoroughly, and they unanimously reported that the pay should be increased for the year. The men have to take most of their meals on the boat, and the only vacation they have is one day off in the month, the same as the men on the land force have. The cut-down is $1800, and we propose to raise them $1700.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10—This order is to increase the salaries from the commencement of the year. On another order, involving the same principle, I had occasion to submit it would be an extremely unwise and impolitic measure, in fact nothing more than a salary grab on a small scale. If established in one department, the precedent must be followed, to be consistent, if consistency is one of the jewels in the diadem of the gentleman from that ward. There must be other reasons stated before I can vote for this order. The question of salaries was investigated at length early in the year; the salaries were fixed, and the men accepted the offices at those salaries. They were not obliged to take the offices; if they could make more money or find more agreeable service, they were at liberty to go elsewhere. The principle involved in a measure of this kind is bad, and will lead to most disastrous consequences if carried out.

Mr. Spenceley—I only wish this City Council had the right to establish the pay of lawyers as they do firemen. I don't think the gentleman has looked at this matter fairly and squarely. The order was put in early in the year [May 21], and has been lying in the committee. If it had been acted upon then it would not have gone back so far. But now it is so long, it is said to be a bad precedent to establish. In New York, where there is a boat doing the same duty that this one does, they have thirteen men where we have seven. The captain receives $1500, the foreman (which we do not have) $1300; pilot, $1200; engineman, $1300; assistant engineman, $1200; engineer, $1200; and fireman, $1200. The New York men have three hours a day to themselves, and one day in each week, and the Boston men have to answer more boxes than they do in New York.

Mr. Howes—What time do the men on the fire boat have?

Mr. Spenceley—One day in fourteen, I understand.

Mr. Howes—Is the gentleman sure of that? I understand from good authority that it is different. Whether the gentleman knows it to be a fact, or whether he is assuming that to be the case.

Mr. Spenceley—The commissioners put them on the same footing as the land department, only they do not allow them three hours a day.

Mr. Howes—I thought that was about as much as the gentleman knew about it. The men have twenty-two hours a week, instead of one day in fourteen. I think the order a good one, that might be passed with propriety, except that it should take effect from its passage. If the order has been long before the committee it is the fault of the committee, and gentlemen on the committee should have taken some account of it. I move to amend so that it shall take effect on its passage.

Mr. McGaragle of Ward 18—I hope the amendment will not prevail. I don't think the fireman should suffer from the negligence of the committee. Early in the year I introduced an order in regard to a uniform for the commissioners, but nothing has been heard from it. The firemen certainly earn and they will receive even with the additional $100. It is clearly the fault of the committee that they are suffering.

Mr. Spenceley—The committee have been waiting for the Ordinance Committee on that matter. We cannot report a uniform until we have an ordinance. I have asked them to report several times. In this matter, I want the gentleman from Ward 18 to understand that it is not the fault of the Chairman on the part of the Council. I cannot call meetings of the committee, or keep them together when they meet.

Mr. Burke of Ward 2—I had the honor to offer the original order. As a member of the Committee on Fire Department it came to my knowledge that the reduction was to be made. I opposed it in the committee. I consider it a greater reduction, in proportion to salary paid, than has been made in any other department. I am confident the Retrenchment Committee, after investigating the case, would never have made any such reduction. I stated to the chairman of the commission that some reduction should be made, but I thought this one too large. I know that men employed in the same work by private corporations get more pay, and have only nine or ten hours' duty a day; many receive $125 a month and are found. The engineer of the J. P. Bradlee gets $120 a month and is found; the engineers on the East Boston ferries get the same; and these men have a great deal less duty than those on the fire boat do. My reason for offering the order was to have justice done to the men.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10—The duties of a fireman are referred to as hard, but if these positions were vacant tomorrow would there not be ten applicants for every position?

Mr. Burke—That same question was put to me, and I told Mr. Chamberlin that I believed men quite as competent to take his position would do so at a much less salary than he receives. I don't think it is a fair question.

Mr. Thompson—That is not my object. Because the gentleman from Ward 18 favors the order is not conclusive reason for passing it. On one side we have the opinion of the commissioners, and on the other that of the committee. I am inclined to defer to the decision of the committee, but I want time to consider it.

The President—The order will lie over.

Mr. Thompson withdrew the motion to table.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9 moved to lay on the table, in order to give time to consider the subject.

Mr. Howes—I hope that motion will not prevail. I favor paying the men from the passage of the order, and it might as well pass now as at any other time. If we go on postponing action it will look as if we are trying to keep the men out of their pay for a week or ten days at least.

Mr. Howes's amendment was adopted by a division—24 for, 20 against.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10 called attention to the recommendation of the Retrenchment Committee, that the fire boat be abolished. He had as keen a sense of justice as any one, but the interests of the city were to be consulted as well as those of the firemen. Such an appropriation would be a charity; it is not the fulfilment of a contract.

Mr. Thompson made a comparison of the salaries paid similar officers on the J. P. Bradlee, saying that unless it was shown that the service was greater he would vote against the order.

Mr. Howes said the city fixed the pay and prescribed the duty. The Retrenchment Committee recommended the abolition of the boat because many boxes responded to by the fire boat are responded to by wheel vehicles. So long as the boat remains it responds to the alarms, and waiting for the alarms is a part of the work of the men on the boat. The men do not take their positions by contract; they are appointed for life or good behavior. The captain of the Bradlee makes two trips to the island each day, and takes his meals and spends his evenings at home; the fire-boat men are on board all night, whether needed or not. They are in anticipation of work. It may be that they are doing nothing; but a distinguished poet has said that they also stand and work who stand and wait.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10 begged leave to correct the gentleman. The poet said—

"They also serve who only Stand and wait—"

Mr. Howes—Serve then. The men are doing the same work and getting smaller pay than others.

Mr. Burke said the men on the Bradlee had several hours every day. Living on the fire boat is not so agreeable as in the engine houses, with no room to stand up. The land employes take their meals at home; the fire-boat men do not, and cannot board so cheaply. It is customary to pay such men so much a month and found, and General Rockwell established the fireboat on that basis.

Mr. Thompson drew a comparison between the salaries paid these men and the salaries paid in the navy for the same work, and he contended that the salaries paid bordered on extravagance.

Mr. Spenceley contended that the men on the fireboat did much more duty than the others referred to. He advocated this as purely a matter of justice.

Mr. McGaragle moved to adjourn. Lost.

On motion of Mr. Beeching, the main question was ordered.

The order was declared passed to a second reading.

Mr. Thompson doubted the vote and called for the yeas and nays, which were not ordered.

The order was passed to a second reading—23 for, 9 against—and laid over.

COMPENSATION.

Mr. Spenceley submitted a report from the Committee on Fire Department with an order—That there be allowed and paid, under the provisions of section 5, chapter 262 of the acts of the year 1850, to Charles Brooks, formerly a member of the Fire Department, as indemnity for corporal injuries sustained in the discharge of his duty, the sum of $300; to be charged to the appropriation for Fire Department. Ordered to a second reading.

BRIGHTON HIGH SCHOOL.

Mr. Spenceley submitted a report from the Committee on Public Buildings, that they have arranged for the removal of the ledge in front of the Brighton High School building, with the Paving Committee, for the stone it will furnish; but they have not enough means to provide for further grading, and on account of the lateness of the season they recommend its reference to the next City Government. Accepted and referred accordingly. Sent up.

CLAIMS.

Mr. Sampson submitted a report of leave to withdraw from Committee on Claims on petition of Ellen G. Fraser to be compensated for personal injuries on Whitney street. Accepted. Sent up.

SOUP FOR THE POOR.

Mr. Fraser of Ward 6 offered an order—That the Board of Aldermen be, and they are hereby authorized to provide soup for the worthy poor during the winter months, at an expense not to exceed $4800.

Mr. Sampson said no provision was made for paying the money.

On motion of Mr. Fraser the order was referred to the Finance Committee. Sent up.

WEST ROXBURY BRANCH LIBRARY.

Mr. Brown of Ward 23 offered an order—That the Trustees of the Public Library be authorized to cause to be printed an account of the proceedings at the dedication of the Jamaica Plain Branch Library on Dec. 5, 1877; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Printing.

On motion of Mr. Crocker the order was referred to the Committee on Printing. Sent up.

ROLL CALL.

Mr. Fraser moved to suspend the rule so that the order for a tablet on Christ Church might be passed, and Mr. Thompson asked if a quorum was present.

On motion of Mr. Crocker the roll was called, with the following result:

CONDITION OF SCHOOLHOUSES.

Mr. Coe of Ward 23 offered an order—That the Inspector of Buildings be requested to report to the City Council whether or not the public schoolhouses in this city are provided with sufficient facilities for egress in case of fire or accident, and also whether the heating apparatus in said buildings is properly protected.

Mr. Coe—I offer the order for the purpose of saying a few words with reference to our schoolhouses. It will be remembered that the School Committee have sent one or two communications here with reference to the change in the heating apparatus of the Brimmer School. Those orders have been indefinitely postponed, and I notice that the School Committee have appointed a committee of investigation. I wish to say a word in reference to the reason the change was made. Some time in June, I think, the Committee on Public Instruction went to East Boston to inspect the Adams Schoolhouse, to which our attention had been called by the School Committee. They were accompanied by the Superintendent of Public Buildings, the Inspector of Buildings, and the City Architect. They examined the building, and an order was passed by the City Council for what was necessary to be done. While over there our attention was called to the Brimmer Schoolhouse; they told us that something needed to be done to that building, and the committee went there and examined it. They found a schoolhouse, four stories in height, with rooms for the accommodation of something more than 800 children; they found narrow staircases, 3½ feet in width, on which were hooks for the children to hang their clothing on in winter. They also examined the heating apparatus, and, being reinforced by the judgment of the experts, they decided that the furnaces were not in good condition for the safety of the children; and therefore an order was introduced by the Committee on Public Instruction, and passed, for the change to be made by the Committee on Public Buildings. I suppose that the City Council technically violated the law. I was not cognizant of the provisions of the law at that time, which are, that—

"Whenever, in the judgment of the School Committee, a new building or an addition to or alteration of a building is needed for school purposes, of an estimated cost of over one thousand dollars, they shall make a statement in writing to the City Council of the necessity of the proposed building, addition or alteration; and no contract for the purchase or lease of land, or for the erection, purchase or lease of any building, or for any addition to or alteration of any building for school purposes, shall be authorized by the City Council until such statement has been made, nor until the locality and plans for the same have been approved by the School Committee, or by a sub-committee thereof, duly authorized to approve the same."

I presume this provision of the law escaped the attention of the Committees on Public Instruction and Public Buildings. But it seems to me that the School Board make altogether too much of a handle of this, especially as the fact is that when the furnaces were taken out, the wood was found to be so badly charred that, in the opinion of experts, a fire would have taken place had they remained there this winter. I wish to call the attention of the Council particularly to this point. It seems to me that the School Committee are carrying this matter too far. If they are responsible for the condition of the schoolhouses, certainly they are censurable for permitting the furnaces to remain in that condition. Now, we can imagine what the state of affairs would be in case of a fire in that schoolhouse, with those narrow staircases, made still narrower by the hooks loaded with the clothing of the children. In case of a panic, those clothes would have been knocked off the hooks, and it would be impossible for the children to go down stairs without falling. I introduced this order because I think the attention of the City Council should be called to the schoolhouses, although I would not cause any alarm in the public mind. The committee visited another schoolhouse, and found the same hooks and narrow staircases, storm doors not two feet in width, and four stairways exposed to fire. Now, in reference to the care of these schoolhouses, the janitors should be persons of experience in such matters. We found the Adams Schoolhouse in charge of a janitor entirely unfit for the position. The lower part of the building was in an exceedingly filthy condition; near the furnace doors the plastering had fallen from the laths, and in the openings were stuffed newspapers for kindling the fires. Those janitors should be looked after. The School Committee employ them, and if they employ janitors who are unfit for their places they should be held responsible for them. There was a fire in the Webster Schoolhouse lately, and I understand that when the janitor went away, he left the furnace doors closed, and it got so hot that the building was set on fire. I think it would be well to refer this matter to the Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings, who can ascertain what facts in relation to the subject are on file in the Inspector's office.

Mr. Wolcott of Ward 11—As a member of the Committee on Public Instruction, I concur very heartily in everything that the gentleman on my right has said. The committee spent the greater part of one day visiting two or three schoolhouses which the Inspector of Buildings pronounced more faulty and dangerous than the others. The gentleman has described some of the defects we discovered. I have heard it said that when the old heating apparatus in the Brimmer Schoolhouse was removed, the woodwork was found to be in such a condition that it could be crumbled in the hand. The Inspector freely stated that, in his opinion, the schoolhouses were very faulty in their original construction and present condition; and as the responsibility in case of a fire would certainly rest to a great extent upon the committee of which the gentleman from Ward 23 and myself are members, I should be glad to have an investigation made, as thorough as possible. I also wish to say a word in regard to the reception of the vote of the School Committee asking by what authority this change was made in the heating apparatus. Although it was at first somewhat curtly worded, perhaps, I for one do not feel that it was intended in any improper spirit. I apprehend that the committee did technically commit a breach of the law in recommending an extensive change in the City Council without first submitting the subject to the School Committee for their approval. That regulation seems to me to be a very proper one, as great confusion might be caused by the City Council making large repairs which should first have the approval of the School Committee. In this case the change made was not only judicious, but absolutely necessary. However, the query in regard to it was proper enough, I think, and certainly the committee will be careful in the future to give no cause for such complaints. I hope the order will pass, as I think the Committee on Public Instruction have reason to fear that other schoolhouses, if not so bad as this, are at least in a condition which calls for a careful inspection and some changes.

Mr. Spenceley moved to adjourn. Lost.

The order was passed. Sent up.

PARKS.

Mr. Mowry of Ward 11 moved to take from the table the order to consider the expediency of placing the Department of Common, etc., in charge of the Park Commissioners.

Mr. Ham thought it hardly fair to take it up while the mover [Mr. Pierce of Ward 24] was absent.

Mr. Mowry said he merely wanted to move its reference to the Special Committee on Parks.

Adjourned on motion of Mr. Fraser of Ward 6.

SMALLPOX HOSPITAL.

An order came up for a special committee (Messrs. Stone, Reed, Fernald, McGaragle and Spenceley to be joined) to examine and report why the expenditure for the smallpox hospital exceeded the appropriation therefor.

The order was passed in concurrence.

Alderman Viles—While I do not believe there is any need of any investigation,—for I believe that everything is square and above board in that department,—still I am in favor of having the committee appointed, and I think the commissioner's rather court the investigation if anything.

The Mayor appointed Aldermen Fitzgerald, O'Brien and Viles on said committee.

Alderman Fitzgerald—I have been on so many mousing committees that I think I have done my share of that business. I should much prefer that somebody else would be appointed, because I think I have been on my share of investigating committees. I have served a good apprenticeship at investigating, and I hope somebody else will be appointed on this one.

Alderman O'Brien—The Aldermen will find on their desks a volume of two hundred and fifty-odd pages of an investigation on which I have been for some weeks past, which has occupied a great deal of my time, and if your Honor could make it convenient to appoint some other Alderman upon this committee I should hope you will do so.

Alderman Viles—Your honor will also notice that I was on the committee to investigate the Committee on Common and Squares, and as I am also very closely connected with the Health Department, I should like to be excused.

Alderman Clark—I move a reconsideration of the vote concurring with the Common Council in the passage of the order appointing the Investigating Committee. I do not believe the Board of Health need investigating in the least. I believe they have used their best judgment in the erection of this building for a smallpox hospital, and I believe it was in evidence before the Common Council that they had not exceeded their appropriation. There was a balance of $29,000 left from an old appropriation for a smallpox hospital, and they had authority to spend $25,000 of that amount. They have purchased the land, and up to the time of coming and asking for an additional appropriation they had nearly got the building completed. I believe they have spent the money in the most judicious manner, and that there is nothing to investigate. We have had one investigating committee and I am utterly surprised that the report does not censure some one more than it does. It has been rather an expensive job, and this one will cost something. I hope, for the credit of the retiring City Government, we shall not have another investigation, as it will amount to nothing, and I hope the reconsideration will prevail.

Alderman Thompson—I hope the motion to reconsider will not prevail. It seems to me that there is sufficient reason for the concurrence of this branch if the other branch deem the matter of sufficient importance to appoint an investigating committee. It is well known that in the minds of the press of Boston this board is a corrupt body, and it seems to me that nothing would strike more at this feeling than for us to vote against this investigation. If there is nothing wrong it will do the Board of Health no harm, and if there is anything wrong it will be shown. I hope this Board will not attempt to shut off an investigation when a majority of the other branch desire one.

Alderman O'Brien—I don't believe in investigations as a general thing. I don't believe in investigating men who come here and give their time day after day and year after year to the city of Boston, without one cent of remuneration. I don't believe in the character of such investigations as this one on Common and squares, because it was to investigate men who come here and give their time and attention to the work of the city of Boston for nothing; and that investigation has been held to show them up as far as possible to the contempt of the citizens of Boston. My heart was not in that investigation, because I did not believe in it; but when I was in it I was determined to state the truth about it. But this is a different matter altogether. Here is a paid commission, men who receive large salaries; it is a new spirit that is intended to be introduced into the City Government, and they are also overstepping the limits which the City Council have permitted them to move in. I remember that in 1875 this very Board of Health came before the Board of Aldermen and asked for an additional appropriation to the $25,000 that they already had to draw upon to build a smallpox hospital; but this Board, by a very decided vote, said that they would not give them one dollar more; that they must confine the building of that hospital within the limit of the appropriation of $25,000. After coming before the City Council and asking for an additional appropriation for more money, and being refused, they went beyond the appropriation. I think, with the Alderman from Charlestown, that they should be investigated. If there is any blame attached to any one, let it be known. Let the public know that the paid boards of the City Government are just as liable to overstep the limits of their appropriation as the members of a committee who come here and do their work gratuitously. I hope the investigation will go on, although, after expressing myself very freely, year after year, about the Board of Health, I hope I shall not be one of the Investigating Committee.

Alderman Viles—While I agree with the Alderman from the Eleventh Ward that there is no need of an investigation, I hope it will go on, for the Board of Health court it. I hope the committee will be appointed, for I know there is nothing wrong in that department.

Alderman Clark—I hope the Investigating Committee will not be appointed. If it had been to investigate a committee of this branch I should have advocated it. I advocated a committee to investigate the Department of Common and Squares. I believe the Board of Health did what was for the best interests of the city when they pushed this matter forward in the best possible manner. It seems to be reflecting upon one of the commissions, for which there is no occasion, and therefore I am opposed to it. All the explanation that was necessary the Committee on Finance obtained before the additional appropriation was granted. They had one of the Board of Health before them, and the City Architect, and obtained all the information necessary to be obtained for them to recommend the passage of the order for an additional appropriation. I fail to remember the time when the Board of Health came before the City Council and asked for an additional appropriation in addition to the unexpended amount which was in the treasury for them to expend. I think the Alderman must be mistaken. This unexpended balance has been in the treasury for some time. I think he must be mistaken in saying that they asked for an additional appropriation.

Alderman O'Brien—If the Alderman will refer to the records of 1875, he will find that the Board of Health, if I remember rightly, asked for an additional appropriation of $10,000 to their $25,000, and the Board of Aldermen at that time were very decidedly opposed to it. They believed that this smallpox hospital could be built within the limits of $25,000; some of them even thought that $10,000 was as large a sum as ought to be expended on a hospital of that kind; and the Board positively declined to give them a cent in addition to the $25,000 that they had been allowed.

The reconsideration was lost, and the Mayor appointed Aldermen Fitzgerald, Thompson and Viles as the committee on the part of the Board.

CONDITION OF SCHOOLHOUSES.

An order came up for the Inspector of Buildings to report on facilities of egress from the several school buildings of this city.

Alderman Fitzgerald—I hope the Board will pause before they pass such an order as this. It will be creating an unnecessary panic among the parents of the children attending the several schools. This matter was thoroughly gone into by the late Inspector of Buildings, and his report on all the schoolhouses is now in the office of that department. He has made a report to the Committee on Public Buildings, and in accordance with the report which he has made, the Committee on Public Buildings and the Committee on Public Instruction have been making improvements in the several schoolhouses, with a desire to conform to the recommendations of the Inspector of Buildings. I do not see the necessity of parading in a report to the City Council all the defects in the facilities for egress and ingress in the public schoolhouses. If any order should be adopted at all, it should be one requesting the Inspector of Buildings to report to the Committee on Public Buildings the schoolhouses which he considers defective, and that will accomplish all that the offerer of the order intended. I hope the order will not pass in its present form, and I move that it be laid upon the table.

The order was laid upon the table.

BONDS APPROVED.

Alderman Gibson presented the bond of Charles H. Dennie, City Treasurer, for $150,000; being presented duly certified, it was approved by the Board.

The bonds of James Bragdon and two others, constables, being presented duly certified, were approved.

FIRE COMMISSIONERS.

The report of the Fire Commissioners of the number and character of the fires and alarms for November was received. Sent down.

APPROPRIATION FOR PUBLIC PARKS.

Alderman Clark submitted a report from the Finance Committee, on the request of the Park Commissioners, recommending the passage of an order—That the Auditor of Accounts be and he hereby is authorized to transfer from the Reserved Fund to the appropriation for Park Department the sum of $3000. Read twice and passed—yeas 12, nays 0. Sent down.

LOCATION ACCEPTED.

A communication was received from the South Boston Railroad, accepting the fifteenth location granted by this Board. Placed on file.

SOCIAL LAW LIBRARY.

Alderman Wilder submitted a report from the Committee on County Accounts, on petition of proprietors of the Social Law Library, recommending the passage of an order—that there be allowed and paid to the proprietors of the Social Law Library, under the provisions of section 10, chapter 33 of the General Statutes, and chapter 215 of the acts of 1863, the sum of $1000.

On motion of Alderman Wilder, the order took its second reading and was put upon its passage.

Alderman Thompson—I should like to hear some reason for the passage of the order.

Alderman Wilder—They are entitled to that sum under the provisions of the statute cited, and it is a matter in which we have no choice about except to conform to the law and pay them that money.

The order was passed.

INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL.

Alderman Clark submitted a report from the Finance Committee on the report of the Joint Special Committee, favoring the passage of an order for the establishment of an industrial school at an expense of $15,000—that if the City Council decide to pass the aforesaid order, then the following order, providing the means, should be passed with it:

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be and he hereby is authorized to transfer from the Reserved Fund the sum of $15,000, to constitute a special appropriation, to be styled Industrial School.

Alderman Clark—It is important that the order take its second reading at the present time if it is the desire of the committee to have it go to the other branch of the City Council. The Alderman from Ward 21 is in his seat and can explain it if it is necessary.

On motion of Alderman Clark the order took its second reading and was put upon its passage.

Alderman Fitzgerald—The order which was reported and referred to the Finance Committee came up originally on a petition from Rev. E. E.

Hale, Mr. Ruggles and Wendell Phillips, and a great many other persons interested in industrial education. It came before the City Council and was referred to a special committee of which I was chairman. Five or six of those gentlemen came before the committee—among them Mr. Clapp and Mr. Ruggles, Dr. Ellis and some two or three others, and a lady from the South End, representing a philanthropic lady in New York who has devoted several thousand dollars toward promoting the industrial school system. Under an act of the Legislature, passed some years ago, any city or town in this Commonwealth was allowed, if they deem it expedient, to establish an industrial school, which is to be under the control of the School Board; the teachers and those in the school were to be appointed by the School Board, and the details of the management of the school were to be under them. The City Council were simply to pass upon the expediency of establishing such a school; after they pass the order and appropriate the money the details of the whole matter will be under the School Board. Mr. Ruggles, one of the principal petitioners, states that he has in his possession a large workshop which he uses for his own purposes. He has acquired a large fortune by investing, and he maintains this shop simply for the purpose of keeping himself occupied. He hires two or three men to whom he pays large salaries. He has taken keen interest in industrial education. The point with him and those persons who have favored the passage of an order of this kind is this—that our schools lack one great element, the lack of which is apparent to all who visit them. It is this: While we educate the head, while we cram our children with geometry, history and geography, we don't teach them what to do with their hands. The head is educated, and not the hands. Persons who take an interest in education are beginning to see that not only the head but the hands must be educated. The faculties of the youth should be peculiarly developed, so that the particular trade or calling for which they are fitted by nature may be brought out by study. A boy leaves a school today, and it is simply an accident what trade he takes. He takes the trade of a plumber because there is a vacancy in the plumber's shop; and he may take to the trade of a carpenter for the same reason. The object of these gentlemen is that when boys obtain a certain period in life they shall have an opportunity to visit this place, which is called a developing shop, and see the work and the tools and appliances, so that their peculiar tastes shall be developed in that way. The Legislature passed this act some four or five years ago. Our committee were unanimous that such an order as this should pass. Everybody sees the necessity of doing something in the near future to develop the hands as well as the head. We send out educated women as well as men, but they are absolutely incapable of using their hands and gaining a livelihood; and the point with the gentlemen who take an interest in this system of education is that our school system is utterly at fault in this respect. If we give authority to the School Board to establish this school, it will rest with the School Board to determine what shall be done towards getting an educational shop. Mr. Ruggles has offered all his tools and models, and his own services, in carrying out this work. His tools are worth $10,000, and the school will have the benefit of his personal supervision. He has devoted a great deal of thoughtful time during his life to the consideration of this subject. This is the sum and substance of it. This matter ought to have the thoughtful reflection of the Board of Aldermen, and I believe that $15,000 cannot be devoted to a better purpose than to at least make an experiment in this direction.

Alderman Thompson—I cannot quite understand how $15,000 is going to establish a mechanic's school that will be of any efficiency. Now, it seems to me that in times like these, rather than encourage the School Board in incurring additional expenses, we should rather induce them to reduce expenses, if possible. This is an experiment; and, as I said before, I don't see that $15,000 is going to accomplish much. If it is the intention of the Alderman who offered this order to make this experiment successful, and if the city is going to educate all the children in the different branches of mechanics, it seems to me that the city of Boston will have quite as much as it can do in attending to that. I think this is a matter that should be acted upon after due deliberation, and for my own part I should like further time to consider it. It is not that this appropriation of $15,000 is so much; but it is what it will lead to. I move that the order be laid upon the table.

Alderman Fitzgerald—If the Alderman will not object, I would ask that it be specially assigned for next Monday, and not laid on the table. We ought to dispose of it. If anything is to be done it ought to be done on next Monday—not later than that. I have no desire that it should pass without thorough investigation on the part of the Aldermen.

On motion of Alderman Fitzgerald the matter was specially assigned for next Monday at half-past four o'clock.

PROJECTING SIGNS.

Alderman Robinson submitted reports from the Committee on Police recommending that leave be granted S. A. Cole & Co. to project a lantern at 25 School street; Perry & Richardson, to project a lantern at 11 Howard street; and Mary Ann Scanlan, to project a druggist's mortar at the corner of D and Sixth streets. Accepted. Sent down.

LAND AND STREET DAMAGES, ETC.

Alderman Clark submitted the following from the Committee on Streets on the part of the Board:

Ordered, That the Mayor be and he is hereby authorized to execute a release to Patrick Mulrey of the title of the city to a parcel of land situated at the corner of Harrison avenue and Warren place, in that part of Boston formerly Roxbury, acquired under a deed from Frederick U. Tracy, Collector, dated Oct. 10, 1874, and recorded with Suffolk Deeds, libro 1240, folio 102, in consideration of six hundred and ninety-four and sixteen one-hundredths (694 16/100) dollars, and that the Collector be authorized to deliver said deed to said Mulrey, upon payment by him of the sum of one hundred forty-six and thirty-two one-hundredths (146 32/100) dollars, in addition to the sum of five hundred and forty-seven and eighty-four one-hundredths (547 84/100) dollars paid on the 9th day of October, 1876, and also upon his procuring and surrendering to the city the deed of release made by the city to Margaret Mulrey his wife, on said day, together with a release, surrender and disclaimer of all title acquired by said release to Margaret Mulrey. Read twice and passed. Sent down.

SEWERS.

Alderman Viles, from the Committee on Sewers, submitted an order—That the sum of one hundred and fifty dollars be abated from the assessment levied upon James Baker for a sewer in Bird street. Read twice and passed.

SWETT STREET.

Alderman Thompson moved to reconsider the vote by which was passed the order to pay Rufus Estabrook $1167 for grade damages on Johnson street, in the Swett-street district.

The reconsideration prevailed, and Alderman Thompson offered the following amendment to the order:

"Provided, That no payment shall be made to said Estabrook under authority of this order until the betterment assessed upon this same estate—in the name of Emery Bermis—for the laying out of Swett street, with all dues thereon, is paid into the city treasury."

Alderman Robinson—I should like to know the reason for amending the order. I hope the Alderman will explain.

Alderman Thompson—The reason is that it is for the best interest of the city that this amendment should be attached to the order. My authority for that statement is the Board of Street Commissioners. It seems to me that this matter should be settled at the same time, and there can be no harm in it.

Alderman Robinson—Do I understand that this is a request of the Street Commissioners?

Alderman Thompson—It is by the recommendation of the Street Commissioners.

The amendment was adopted and the order was passed as amended.

ELECTION RETURNS.

Alderman Viles offered an order—That a committee of three Aldermen be appointed to examine the returns of votes cast in the several wards tomorrow for municipal officers. Read twice and passed, and Aldermen Viles, Slade and Clark were appointed said committee. Alderman Clark requested to be excused, as he expected to leave the city to be absent for a week. The Mayor appointed Alderman Breck in place of Alderman Clark.

STREET LAMPS.

On motion of Alderman Thompson the report of leave to withdraw on the petition of R. M. C. Graham and others, for leave to lay gas mains in the streets of the city, was taken from the table and specially assigned for next Monday afternoon at five o'clock.

TIME FOR EMPLOYEES TO VOTE.

Alderman Slade offered an order—That the employes of the Paving Department be allowed from 7 to 10 A. M. to vote at the coming municipal election.

A motion to reconsider, by Alderman Fitzgerald, hoping it would not prevail, was lost.

ROXBURY CANAL.

On motion of Alderman Viles the report and order for a loan of $392,000 for the filling of Roxbury Canal, and the order to take the land for said improvement, and to appoint a committee to take charge of the same, were taken from the table, the question being on the passage of the order for the loan.

Alderman Viles—The committee have no new light upon this subject. We think it is pretty generally understood, and the reason why I moved to take it from the table is that it is necessary that it should pass this Board in order to reach the other branch in season to be passed before the end of this year. In regard to the committee going to people and asking what they will take for their land, they will say that they have no land to sell. The Supreme Court is to appoint three commissioners to adjust and award the damages. The report is before the Board of Aldermen; it gives all the particulars and details without my going over a multitude of figures. The Alderman from the Eighteenth Ward, who resides in that vicinity, at my request has looked into the matter and searched the records, and I think he can give us some information that we are not acquainted with.

Alderman Wilder—It is true that I live in the neighborhood of this proposed improvement, and at the request of the committee I have taken some pains to inform myself in regard to the matter. The labor which I have done in that direction has been more in the examination of the records to ascertain, as near as they can give the information, what are the rights of the city of Boston and other parties in regard to the filling up of the Roxbury Canal and the abatement of the nuisance. I can best explain the result by reference to the records. I go back to 1784, and find from the Roxbury Town Records, volume 2, page 340, that Aaron Blaney petitions for a license to dig a small canal, to bring up a small fishing boat, by purchase or otherwise. The next is in 1786, Roxbury Town Records, volume 2, page 408, John Pope's survey of the nearly obliterated part of the line or creek dividing the town of Boston and Roxbury. Nothing further till 1795, Oct. 5; the Roxbury Canal proprietors appoint a committee to contract with some person or persons to open the creek and land below the Town Landing (which is at present Morse & Remick's wharf) to the bottom of the proposed canal through the flats to Fort Point Channel. Again, on the 26th of February, 1796, act incorporating the Roxbury Canal proprietors was passed. On April 5, 1796, a new contract for digging the canal through the flats to Fort Point Channel was made, which was continued until August, 1801, summer and winter, when, on examination by a committee, they reported that the work was not completed in the manner agreed upon. One Patrick Welch then contracted to finish the canal through the flats to Fort Point Channel at five dollars per scow load, and one quart of West India rum was allowed to the five dollars for each load. Mr. Welch continued to work on this contract for a time and found it a bad bargain, even with the liquid added to the fee, and gave it up. Another contract was made afterward at seven dollars with Seth Lawrence, and after he gave it up, which was after a few months, laborers were employed by the day by the town of Roxbury to finish the digging of the canal, which was carried on for over six years, summer and winter, this work being done entirely by the town of Roxbury. The canal proved to be a failure financially, and on the 12th of June, 1818, a committee was appointed to either repair the old banks of the upper canal or fill across the canal at Lamb's Dam (Northampton street) as the committee thought best for the interests of all concerned. In the next year, 1819, the committee, on the 4th of October, reported and it was decided to fill up the canal by taking so much of the island marsh and a strip of marsh fifty feet wide and fifty feet from the east line of Northampton street extended to within five feet of Hill's Dam, as is necessary for that purpose, which was done. In 1822, it would seem that the strip of marsh, fifty feet wide, above mentioned, really belonged to the town of Boston, as I find on file in the City Clerk's office an agreement between the Roxbury Canal proprietors and the Selectmen of the town of Boston, dated Aug. 31, 1822, to submit to the decision of Augustus Peabody and Shuman Leland as to which of the parties were the rightful owners of this strip of land or marsh. The arbitrators, Messrs. Peabody and Leland, made their award Sept. 30 following, awarding to the town of Boston all that part of the canal lying west of Pope's new boundary line, as shown on his plan of 1786, or about two hundred and fifty feet of the extreme upper end of the canal as it now exists (i. e.), commence at the end nearest Harrison avenue and measure two hundred and fifty feet towards Albany street; and you will then see what the arbitrators awarded to the town of Boston in 1822, and I believe that the city of Boston to-day still holds all the rights granted to it by that award, for there has been no real adverse occupation of the soil then awarded. No one can gain a fee in an open highway common to all, and I maintain that the Roxbury Canal was and is to this day neither more nor less than a highway common to all who may choose to use it. In City Document 63 of 1858, on page five, I find the following:

"In addition to the evidence of Mr. Davis, given in the note of Mayor Sleeper [of Roxbury] to Mr. Bonney, there are documents on file in the office of the Superintendent of Sewers in this city [Boston] which go to prove that the ditch was originally a creek or canal, and that when the adjoining territory was set off from Roxbury [1850] and annexed to Boston, the city of Boston acquired all the rights held by the city of Roxbury in the portion set off to Boston. (See Mr. Sleeper's note on page 6 of this Doc.) In 1867, by the act approved June 1, 1867, Roxbury was annexed to the city of Boston. (See City Docs. 73 and 104 of that year.)

By the annexation act, the city of Boston acquired, among other public property belonging to Roxbury, land or marsh bordering on the Roxbury Canal and Albany street, and by deeds dated March 23, 1872, and recorded in the Registry of Deeds, lib. 1098, fol. 300@301, conveyed to Morse & Remick, and by deed of same date. This deed contains, as do all the deeds that have been given by any parties to Boston, the following reservation, namely:

"The right to fill up the canal at any time without any claim for damages by the grantees, their heirs or assignees."

Mr. Mayor, I am entirely in favor of the passage of this order. I don't believe that the sum named in that order will be necessary, because I am satisfied that the City Solicitor will find that so far as the filling up the canal is concerned, there are no damages to be extinguished. It is necessary that we should seize the land as the order requires, and as to the appropriation of $392,000, if we find that we don't need so much we shall not use it. But as regards the damages, so far as the filling is concerned, I think it will be decided that we are not liable for filling the canal. I submit the search of these records I have made for the benefit of the committee. I am satisfied that we must acquire the land by taking, by reason of the uncertainty as to the title. Nothing but the courts can determine that. I have myself conversed with several owners of the land; they say to me as they did to the committee that they are not prepared to name any price; in fact, one large owner tells me he don't know where his lines are and don't know what lines he has. It will be necessary for the court to fix his lines. I don't know that I have any further information to give, except to say that I hope the order will pass.

Alderman Fitzgerald—I agree thoroughly with the gentleman who has just spoken, that this place is a nuisance which should be abated. No member of the Board of Aldermen will dissent from that. Where I disagree with the Alderman is in the amount to be appropriated. Now, it seems to me, that if what the Alderman says he true—and he seems to have devoted a great deal of time to searching the records of this canal—if what he says be correct, the city of Boston can shut that canal up under the provisions of the contract made between the town of Roxbury and those persons; the city of Boston, which has inherited all the rights of the town of Roxbury in that canal, will not be liable for any damages. Now, while I am willing to vote for any appropriation which is necessary, or for any amount of money which is necessary to abate that nuisance, I am not willing to vote for a large amount of money which is probably—and which, according to the gentleman here—not necessary to abate this nuisance. I think the city of Boston has got a very bad bill for the abatement of this nuisance. It obliges us to take not only certain parts around the canal, but all the lands upon it. We can take it or buy it under the act. I think this act is not such a one as the city of Boston ought to get. But if what the Alderman says is true, the act is not necessary. If the act was necessary, the persons who applied for it were completely ignorant of the rights and privileges which the city had to close up this canal without damages resulting to them from the closing up of the canal. This is a new question, and new light has been thrown upon this whole subject. I don't know whether the committee knew anything about the document which Alderman Wilder has read; but if what he says is true; in relation to the position of the city toward Roxbury Canal, we are appropriating $305,000 more than is necessary to abate this nuisance. In view of what he has said, I think the Board should hesitate before we pass the order for so large a sum to abate this nuisance, when only seventy-five or eighty thousand dollars are necessary to do it. The argument is that if we don't want the money, we need n't use it. I think the proper course for this Board of Aldermen to take is just what any of us would do under the same circumstances in his own private business; if we were going to build a drain or a house; we would find out the probable cost. If this will cost only $75,000, I see no propriety in passing an order for $305,000. There is no need of it. I should hope that the Committee on Sewers would take this order and report to us what would be necessary. I should be in favor of abating this nuisance; but I should not be in favor of appropriating four times what would be necessary to do it. That seems to be the condition of this case, if the facts reported by the Alderman be correct, as I have no doubt they are. I hope the document will be placed in the hands of the committee on this subject, and that they will be able to report to this Board next Monday the exact relations of the city of Boston to this canal.

Alderman Wilder—It will be quite impossible for the Committee on Claims to settle the old conflicting claims, if there are any. They cannot fix the bounds of the lands, or ascertain whether the facts which I have transcribed from the records do settle the question positively that the city of Boston owns the Roxbury Canal, and has the right to fill it up. I myself am perfectly satisfied that such will be found to be the fact.

Alderman Fitzgerald—Do you mean to say that the fee of the land is in the city of Boston?

Alderman Wilder—I mean to say that the fee of the canal is in the city of Boston; that the reservations in all the conveyances insure to the city of Boston the right to run its scows in there and fill it up tomorrow, without trespassing upon the rights of anybody, so far as the canal is concerned. The conclusion I have arrived at is that the canal is simply a public highway, in which nobody but the public have acquired any right. I believe that such will be the decision. I venture to show these facts to the committee that they may have the benefit of my week's labor in the matter; and I announced them in the Board of Aldermen more to insure the passage of the order than for any other purpose, because it has been said that we are acting blindly in passing the order. All concur in the belief that it is an unmitigated nuisance, spreading destruction and desolation over a large area of property. The people in my section of the city believe that we have been very dilatory in not taking hold of it, and they are indulging the hope that something will be done, and that another hot summer will not be upon them before something is done. I felt that the Alderman on my right would vote for the order much more cheerfully if I could give him some more information to show that the appropriation will not only be sufficient, but more than is needed. It is possible that some parties bordering on the canal may have some rights that the city should buy; but I believe that if the principle is once settled that the city of Boston owns the canal itself, no litigation will be required to settle the questions that will arise in regard to the margins of the canal. There are various questions to be settled by this matter. Some people may have riparian rights bordering upon the canal, but I don't believe that the postponement of this matter for one week will do the least good. I hope the Alderman on my right, and all the other Aldermen, will be ready to vote to accept the committee's report and pass the order, for the city will be protected in all its rights; and no more money will be expended by taking action now than by deferring it longer. The statements I make are simply transcripts from the records, but I am very glad to bring them before the Board. The City Solicitor or those whose business it is to do so, will either verify what I have said—which I believe to be the facts—or show that I have made some mistake. For myself I don't believe I have.

Alderman Robinson—Will the Alderman be kind enough to read the first part, to show where the town of Roxbury got their rights?

Alderman Wilder—In 1784 was the time. Roxbury Town Records, volume 2, page 340. Aaron Blaney petitions for a license to dig a small canal to bring up a small fishing boat, by purchase or otherwise, and that petition was granted by the town of Roxbury.

Alderman Fitzgerald—The more the Alderman speaks about this matter the more I am convinced that this Board ought not to pass the order in its present shape. He says nothing will be lost by a week's delay. Why, sir, the order we pass takes a certain amount of land under the statute; takes it into the possession of the city; when it is taken we are obliged to pay for it, whether we have the right to fill up the canal or not. The Alderman says it is a highway. I shall disagree with him in that it is a highway, which the city of Boston has the right to fill up when it pleases, without any right on the part of any persons who own any property on either side being impaired, or without their having the right to come to us and demand damages. Suppose that the Alderman was wisely convinced, under the same plea of public necessity, that what is called a public highway needed to be repaired; do you suppose that any member of this Board would vote to buy all the surrounding land on either side and pay the owners for the privilege of doing what we have the right to do? That is the condition of the Roxbury Canal, if the Alderman's position is correct. I am as ready and willing to abate this nuisance as any other member of this Board or the City Government; but my anxiety to do that will not lead me to involve the city of Boston in an expenditure of two or three hundred thousand dollars for which there is no necessity; and that is the state of affairs with regard to the canal, if the Alderman's statement is correct. I am willing to abate the nuisance, and to buy and fill all the land on either side that we are obliged to have; but if we are not obliged to fill the land on either side, I shall not vote to do it. The Alderman seems to be the only one in this Board who has any definite knowledge about the ownership of the canal, which is to the effect that the Legislature has given us no more rights than we had before. If what he says be correct, the members or the City Government have been completely ignorant of the rights which the city possessed, and there was no need of going to the Legislature for this act. The act was not such a one as the city asked for, or ought to have, if the position of Alderman Wilder be correct. The Committee on Health did not know anything about this apparently. I have heard nothing about it before, and for one I should be anxious to go right in this matter; that we should do this at as little expense as we can. There is no need of incurring $250,000 more expense than is necessary. We shall need all the money which we can scrape together in the next few years for necessary improvements. When we have incurred $1,700,000 more debt the city of Boston must stop for four or five years. I should vote heartily for the abatement of this nuisance, but I hope this Board will not pass this order to borrow $390,000 when $75,000 or $90,000 is all that will be necessary for this work—I mean, if the position of the Alderman is correct.

Alderman Wilder—I wish to correct the Aldermen. I mean to say that the city owns all that portion of the canal that Roxbury ever owned. About 250 feet is all of the original canal to which I claim ownership for the city, according to the document which I have here. The order reported by the committee covers 1000 feet. There is a reason for some portion of the appropriation.

Alderman Viles—The Alderman from Ward 21 wishes this to be referred back to the committee to report in a week. Now, it is impossible for any committee to report upon this in a week, and especially election week. It is a question for the City Solicitor, and I doubt if we could get an opinion from him in three months. I have no objection to referring it to the City Solicitor, but I warrant we shall not get an opinion this year.

Alderman Wilder—I fail to see the slightest logic in the argument of my friend against passing this order. If all the rights we need can be acquired for a less sum than the appropriation, I cannot see that the appropriation in any way increases the city debt if it is not used.

Alderman Robinson—In listening to the statement of my friend, Alderman Wilder, although no lawyer, I could not for myself see how the title to that canal, or little ditch, came to the town of Roxbury. Some years ago, when money was a little more plentiful than now, I had a desire to change the road back of the house where I live. I got the consent of the abutters and procured a bond of about all the land. I went to a conveyancer, Mr. E. S. Rand, and he told me it was necessary to get the fee of the road, because when that road was taken for purposes other than for what it was laid out, it reverted back to the abutters. I then abandoned the whole thing. I see by the paper the Alderman has read that some person had a petition to dig a little ditch in 1784, which was only a right, as it seems to me, to run a little gutter. Since then wharves have been built upon it, and I cannot see where the Alderman gets authority for saying that that property belonged to the town of Roxbury, although the town gave permission at that time.

Alderman Burnham—I have listened with interest to the record of territory in this Roxbury Canal, which has been presented by the Alderman from Ward 18, and also to the remarks of the Alderman from Ward 21. I was not aware until this time that the committee were in any particular muddle about this matter, or that there was in this report any uncertainty, as has been said, about the cost of this improvement, which arose from ignorance. I believe that the record as presented should rather be an inducement to us to pass the order than as an argument against passing it at the present time. The act provides for filling this nuisance, and for the appointment by the Supreme Court of three commissioners, who shall assess and award the value of the land at the time of taking, and the amount of damage; also for an appeal from the decision of the commissioners to a trial by jury. If the city owns a given number of feet in this territory, as seems to be settled by the record, there can be no question about it so far as that goes. But, as I said, there is some uncertainty about the matter; an indefiniteness about the lines, which should prevent our action at the present time or makes it difficult for us to proceed. The act requires the most exact survey of the land taken; but here is a question of ownership up and down this canal side lines, which, in taking the land, cannot be defined by anybody. One man claims a certain portion, and another another portion. Here is a record showing that the city owns a certain portion. The committee have been over the whole matter, and have found so much difficulty in settling the matter that they finally came to the conclusion, in consultation with the City Solicitor and Engineer, and other sources from which they could gain any information, that there was no other way but to take the lands and provide for these matters to be settled by the courts afterwards. If the city owns it there is nothing to be paid for even by an appeal to the Supreme Court, or by a trial by jury; and instead of being an argument against the passing of the order, it would seem to me to be an argument in favor of passing it now. If, as the Alderman has shown, it is not going to cost so much, because the city has a title to the dock, it is a stronger argument in favor of it. The illustration upon which the Alderman from Ward 21 has made a specious argument, calling it a highway, should not mislead us. We all know that in filling the canal we have no right to obliterate the water rights on both sides. Here is a nuisance that calls for mitigation, and does not the Alderman see that it would be impossible for the committee to say just what the cost will be? Supposing even we did own the fee. Does he not see that the city cannot fill only its own canal—for to do this would require stone walls on either side which it would be impossible to build. The committee were driven to the conclusion that there is no other way than to seize the land bounded by the lines given in the order, and then leave the question of fees to be settled afterward. There is no other way to do it. We might talk about and refer it back to the committee; but that won't settle it. It is a question of ownership to be settled by the courts. It has had full and free discussion on all points, and I hope the order will pass tonight.

Alderman O'Brien—I believe that this is a nuisance which must and will be abated; but I think the position of the Alderman from Ward 21 is a very strong one. If the city own this canal and can leave it an open nuisance as it is now, or fill it up, as it pleases, I think it is a very important question for this Board to consider. According to the estimates the filling of the canal will cost $26,400. If we possess the right to go to work and fill up the canal at an expense of $26,400, it will be far more economical than to take the land on each side. If there is any doubt about it, why not insist upon the City Solicitor giving his opinion in relation to it? Let us first know whether we have this right. Although I am in favor of filling this canal, I don't think it is important to decide it tonight, or a week or two weeks hence. If we have the right to abate the nuisance at an expense of $26,400, I think it would be far better for the city to wait three or four weeks and ascertain that fact, rather than purchase the lands and commit ourselves to lawsuits. Haste in this matter will be very injudicious. After what I have heard tonight, I think we should wait another week; meantime let us have the opinion of the City Solicitor on the question whether we have the right to fill up that canal. I believe the Solicitor can give us his opinion in a week. If an Alderman, not pretending to be a lawyer, can obtain these facts in a week, I think the City Solicitor, with all the force at his command, can also give us his opinion on the facts. I hope the matter will be postponed for another week.

Alderman Wilder—There is no fact in this statement that was not known to Mr. Caret; and there is no doubt in the minds of the gentlemen I have consulted that the fee of 250 feet in that canal belongs to the city of Boston. Boston became possessed of it by the annexation of Roxbury. The committee ask for an appropriation to fill up 1000 feet. I brought this matter before the committee, who received it with pleasure, and thought that, when the facts became known that we had to pay for filling only 750 feet instead of 1000, the order would be passed without a dissenting voice.

Alderman Burnham—One fact the Aldermen should bear in mind: there are no side lines which we can use. One of the wharf owners said he did not know where his lines were. The only way is to seize the territory and control it.

Alderman Gibson—It seems to me that more is to be spent in this than there is any occasion for. I see there are $50,000 for a sewer, for which I see no reason while we are to have the intercepting system. I do not see why this is a nuisance. Providence and Baltimore drain through a public street, and they have no nuisance. I don't believe there is a great nuisance there, and I don't see any occasion for hurrying this matter until we know who owns the property. I should not want to go into the thing blindly and not know what the parties own and how much it will cost. It comes on the tail end of a City Government, and if passed, will serve as an excuse for saying that we are extravagant. If the intercepting sewer comes along it will save this $50,000. I hope it will lie over a week.

Alderman Burnham—I must say that the Alderman is laboring under a mistake. Do I understand the Alderman to say that the Roxbury Canal is not a nuisance? I thought the day had gone by for any one to say that. It is a nuisance that can be no longer endured. In answer to his statement that it should remain until the intercepting sewer is built, I would say to the Alderman that the intercepting sewer will not provide for the surface water. It is intended to provide for the house sewage, but none of the sewage can go into the canal, because the act plainly specifies that hereafter no sewage shall flow into it; consequently this $5000 must be spent to provide surface sewerage for the territory. When we have taken the house sewage away, that expense must still be had, for notwithstanding the intercepting sewer, there is a certain number of acres of surface to be provided for. Thence the necessity for this sewerage in Albany street.

Alderman Clark—This canal is a nuisance at the south part of the city, and I had proposed to let the Alderman from the Eighteenth Ward take care of the matter in behalf of his constituents. It has been a nuisance for many years, and I am only surprised that the people of the South End should have let it remain. For the past four years I have done the best I could to prevent the Committee on Paving from taking the sewage from this canal and sprinkling the streets with it, which they have done for the last four years to my knowledge, although they claim that the hose, by some arrangement, runs down to deep water in Boston Harbor, and the water drawn up does not come in contact with the sewage. Everybody who has had occasion to pass over that bridge from April to November knows about this nuisance. It is simply a receptacle for the mass of sewage which comes down from Roxbury through Albany street. You may dredge it one hundred feet deep and the nuisance will remain, and no dredging will get rid of it. It breeds pestilence and disease in that section of the city, and this is the only way to get rid of it. It was dredged out this year, and two or three years ago; and still the nuisance remains, and will remain there until the entire sewage matter is taken out of it. The act allows the city to purchase the surrounding land, and the city will have 200,000 feet of land to sell after the filling is done, and the net expense will be comparatively small, the city getting a large proportion of the outlay back. Instead of passing it over to a new City Government to investigate and report at the end of the year, I believe it is our duty to pass it. The health of patients at the City Hospital needs it. I believe it was in evidence that deaths had been hastened at the City Hospital by this nuisance.

Alderman Viles—It was.

Alderman Clark—If that is a fact, although it is expensive, I believe it is our duty to abate it. The city has a large property there and has spent a large amount in trying to heal the sick by placing a hospital upon the borders of this vile stream that endangers the health of every person put into this hospital.

Alderman Burnham—They did it by putting it upon the receptacle of the sewage of 2755 houses, besides many stables.

Alderman Clark—It is a reservoir of sewage matter. I cannot see where we run into any danger by passing the order, as the act provides for a commission to assess the value of the land taken, and the amount of the damages. They will examine into the title of the land, and if the city has rights in this canal they will say what they are, and if the city has the right to fill up the canal without paying damages to the abutters they will so report. It is the best act that could be obtained from the Legislature. The abutters opposed it with able counsel. The city tried to get an act to fill up the canal and pay for the land necessary; but it could not be obtained last year and could not be obtained next year. Under this act the rights of the city and the abutters will be equally protected. I am ready to vote for the order. I desire to vote upon this question, for I believe it is an act of justice, and as I do not expect to be here at the next meeting I desire to go upon record on this question. As for the intercepting sewer I do not expect to see that in a condition to take away this sewage for three or four years at least.

Alderman Burnham—Three years.

Alderman Clark—I don't believe we have a right to allow this nuisance to remain and endanger the health of a large part of the city.

Alderman Viles—The Alderman from East Boston, who is a member of the Sewer Committee, knows that people came to the committee asking, in the name of humanity, that it be dredged. It was dredged two years ago, but we could not get near the wharves without endangering the piles, and the sewage settles under the wharves, where it cannot be reached.

Alderman Gibson—The Alderman on my right has painted a dreadful picture of the sewers. Here is a tract of 100 feet long by 50 feet wide, and physicians say it is killing people. Why, in the section where I live there are sixty acres where the sewers all empty; but the Alderman does not look over there. I don't believe one person has died from the effects of this nuisance in the canal. Judging from the remarks I have heard, I don't believe the Aldermen are better posted than the members of the next Board will be.

Alderman Clark—I supposed that East Boston was surrounded by nothing but deep water, the best in the world for large shipping. The territory he refers to belongs to the East Boston Land Company, who will not do anything until there is an advance in real estate. I doubt if the Alderman has been to the Roxbury Canal for some time.

Alderman O'Brien—I indorse every word the Alderman from the Back Bay has said, and I am aware that property owners at the South End have been before the Committee on Claims stating that their houses were untenable, and asking for an abatement of taxes. It was shown by testimony at the recent investigation; that the gases from the canal prevent trees from growing in Chester square, and even killed them. If this is forced tonight I shall vote for the order, as I would not block the final settlement of this question; but I should like a postponement for another week, and I make that motion.

Alderman Slade believed they had all the information they could get, and favored action.

Alderman Thompson alluded to the unavoidable absence of Alderman Fitzgerald, who had been called away on business, and thought it should be postponed for a week to allow him to investigate. He favored the order, if no better plan could be proposed.

Alderman O'Brien withdrew the motion to postpone.

Alderman Gibson desired a postponement to allow time to settle the ownership of the land.

Alderman Robinson renewed the motion to lay over one week, which was lost—4 for, 7 against.

The order for the loan was passed—yeas 9, nays 2.

Yeas—Aldermen Breck, Burnham, Clark, Dunbar, O'Brien, Slade, Thompson, Viles, Wilder—9.

Nays—Aldermen Gibson, Robinson—2.

Absent—Alderman Fitzgerald.

The order to take the land was passed.

A motion to reconsider, by Alderman Wilder, hoping it would not prevail, was lost.

Sent down.

MILL POND FLATS.

Alderman Thompson offered an order—That the Committee on Health be, and they are hereby, instructed to report on the 17th instant an order for relief upon the petition of the citizens of the Fourth Ward for the abatement of the nuisance in said ward.

Alderman Clark in the chair.

Alderman Thompson said they had been waiting patiently for this report, for the people there are suffering a great deal more injury in their property than the people are on the Roxbury Canal. He desired some recommendation for something to be done.

Alderman Viles said the committee gave the parties a hearing, and all the petitioners wanted was for the city to say the place was a nuisance, and they so reported.

Alderman Thompson asked why they did not report some plan, as in the case of the Roxbury Canal.

Alderman Viles said they reported all they were asked to report.

Alderman Wilder thought it would be impossible to report in a week, and Alderman Burnham said that the owners had refused to do anything until the City Government had decided that it was a nuisance, which had been done.

Alderman Viles said an order had been reported and passed for the Board of Health to abate the nuisance, which was substantially what the petitioners asked for.

On motion of Alderman O'Brien, the order was referred to the Board of Health. Sent down.

Adjourned on motion of Alderman O'Brien.

[In the report of the last meeting of this Board, in the order to allow certain bills of John P. Barnard and W. P. Fierce for hacks used by the City Government, the types made the amounts $1900 and $600, when they should have been $19 and $6.]

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,

DECEMBER 13, 1877.

Regular meeting at 7½ o'clock P. M., Benjamin Pope, President, in the chair.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

Reports of city officers were placed on file, and petitions referred in concurrence.

Reports of city officers. Placed on file.

Reference to Board of Health of an order for a report to be made on the petition for abatement of Mill Pond nuisance, Ward 4. Concurred.

Report of leave to withdraw on petition of Sophia W. French to be paid for personal injuries from a sled. Accepted in concurrence.

Report that no further action is necessary on petition of Trustees of Public Library for leave to expend certain unused balances of appropriations. Accepted in concurrence.

Order to issue a deed of release to Patrick Mulrey, as in said order set forth, for a parcel of land corner of Harrison avenue and Warren place. Read twice and passed in concurrence.

Report and order for a transfer of $3000 from Reserved Fund to appropriation for Park Department. Ordered to a second reading.

ROXBURY CANAL.

A report and order came down for a loan of $392,000 for Roxbury Canal Improvement, all moneys received to be applied for redemption, etc., of said loan. Also an order to take a certain parcel of land therein described for the purpose of said improvement of Roxbury Canal. (City Doc. No. 92, 1877.)

The order for the loan was ordered to a second reading and laid over.

The order to take the land and provide for the improvement having been read once at a previous meeting, was read a second time and put upon its passage.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—As the order making the appropriation has to lie over, I move that this order lie upon the table until the order for the appropriation comes up.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10—I can only say in addition that I hope that will be done. This Council will hardly pass upon this subject without some discussion or debate. I hope no gentleman will vote for or against this order without going personally to take a view of the premises. Anybody who has read the report of the debate in the other branch of the Government at the last session cannot fail to see the importance of getting the facts in regard to the title to this property, and in regard to the measures which have been suggested for the abatement of the nuisance. That a nuisance exists there which should be abated nobody denies; but it is a grave question whether it is necessary to spend anywhere the amount of money named in this order. I understand that the law which the city applied for last year was, in the first place, for an act authorizing the city to fill up this canal, and simply pay the damages without taking the large district of land and paying for it, for which we now propose to raise a large sum of money by borrowing it and issuing bonds, and then for the city to take the chance of disposing of the land by and by when the land, if ever, should come into the market. In view of the facts stated by the Alderman from Ward 18, at the last meeting of the Board of Aldermen—where it was confessed by several members of that branch that they did not know the facts about the title to the canal and the land about it until that time, and I am certain I did not—that are of the greatest importance, I hope it will lie over for one week.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—I hope the matter will lie over one week in order that members of the Council—particularly the last gentleman—may post themselves more thoroughly as to the act passed by the last Legislature, particularly upon the point which he raises, that the act only contemplated the filling up of the canal. As a member of the committee I have no desire to press the matter tonight, and I don't think the chairman or any other member has. I hope it may lie over.

The order was laid on the table.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Order to remit tax for 1877 on two forfeited lots of land on West Castle and Albion streets. Passed in concurrence.

Order to employ temporary clerks on account of extra registration of voters. Passed in concurrence.

Order to charge to appropriation for Registration of Voters and Election Expenses the expense, $2000, for extra registration. Passed. Sent up.

Order to transcribe, print, bind and distribute the Charlestown Book of Possessions, at a cost not to exceed $1000. Passed in concurrence.

Order to allow $300 to Charles Brooks, on account of corporal injuries received when a fireman. Passed. Sent up.

HISTORICAL SITES.

The order to place a tablet upon Christ Church, at a cost of $1000, was considered under unfinished business, the question being on its passage.

Mr. Wolcott of Ward 11—I should like to ask for some further information in regard to the amount asked for. I do not question the propriety of marking such sites; in fact I fully concur in the propriety and advisability of marking historical sites in a suitable way. The amount looks excessive to me, without proper knowledge. I should suppose that a proper stone tablet could be put in for $500.

Mr. Ham of Ward 14—At the time the original order was introduced, the appropriation asked for was $2000; but a question was raised whether a tablet should be placed on Christ Church, and finally the appropriation was cut down to $1200, which has already been expended for the monuments already erected on Dorchester Heights and in Roxbury. The committee gave a hearing, and decided, upon the testimony and the evidence that was offered, that Christ Church was the proper place; and they also examined the church to decide what the probable cost would be. A staging must be erected at considerable expense, and the tablet will be placed high in the church; and the lowest for which the committee think that it could be done properly and satisfactorily would be $1000.

Mr. Mowry of Ward 11—I should like to ask what the work will consist of, what will be placed upon the tablet and wherein the expense will be.

Mr. Ham—The inscription on the tablet will be similar to those on the monuments already erected; that is, this is to mark the place where the lanterns were hung to give notice to the minutemen when the troops moved in the Revolution.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10—There is still another question. I should like to ask of the committee whether there has been any public hearing at which historians, scholars or any other persons interested in such subjects were invited to bring in evidence as to whether the lanterns which are generally called Paul Revere's signals were hung from that church, or from the North Church. I ask this question because I understand there has been a diversity of opinion among men who are learned in this matter, and a very great doubt; and some gentlemen who have examined it with a great deal of care have given it as their opinion that this is not the church. Many of us can see that a mistake in that matter would cause chagrin and disgrace to us, and entirely defeat the very good and worthy object which it is intended to accomplish, and, so far as historical facts are concerned, make confusion worse confounded. I hold in my hand a letter which I found on my desk this afternoon, which was written by a gentleman whom I know, and whose opinion is entitled to confidence; and as a part of my remarks, I should like to read it, in order to show one phase of this question.

“Mr. Richardson—It is proposed that the city of Boston expend $1000 for a tablet for Christ Church. What inscription is to be placed thereon I know not, but I have been told that probably it would be something like this: ‘From the steeple of this church was shown the lantern which gave warning of the march to Lexington.’ Fifty dollars would be a large expenditure for a modest tablet, such as ought to satisfy the advocates of any tablet. But why should the city spend anything for this purpose? I am told that our best historians not only have grave doubts about the matter of the signals—commonly called ‘Paul Revere's Signals’—but they are agreed that they were not displayed from Christ Church. Hon. Richard Frothingham and Mr. J. Wingate Thornton may be named as students of our local history who say this. In favor of Christ Church there is no historic evidence whatever, and opposed to Christ Church there is abundant evidence. Under this state of belief, why should the city make itself ridiculous by putting up any tablet?"

I only asked this question and said what I have, that we may not make a mistake here which would make us ridiculous. It seems to me this question is capable of proof; and if this committee have not had public hearings to which historians and scholars have been invited, and unless such gentlemen have given their evidence and this committee are satisfied about it, before we take a step to put up a tablet of that sort, and attempt to make history, I hope we shall arrive at the truth about it.

Mr. Felt of Ward 18—I know nothing about this matter, but it is my impression that the committee gave a hearing, that a careful inquiry was made, and that they came to the conclusion that Christ Church was the church. Now in regard to the suggestion in the letter to my friend from Ward 10, that $50 ought to cover the expense of such a tablet, my opinion is that it would not cover the cost of the staging. I suppose the committee reported $1000 as the outside estimate, though I know nothing about it.

Mr. Fraser of Ward 6—As a member of the Committee on Historical Monuments, I don't know whether Christ Church is the church or not, and no other man that breathes does know. The doubt was raised when this matter was before the Council the last time. The committee had two or three meetings, and at two of them many of the great historians of Boston—Mr. Frothingham, Mr. Drake and others—were present. Mr. Frothingham believed that the church now known as Christ Church was not known as the North Church previous to 1775, and he believed that the lanterns were hung out from the church that now stands in North square. But the trustees of Christ Church proved to the satisfaction of the committee that in 1768 a pastor who accepted a call to the church accepted it as the North Church, and that part of Mr. Frothingham's evidence fell to the ground, because it was known as the North previous to 1775. Another eminent historian claimed that they were not hung from that church, but from the new North Church on Hanover street, where the present Methodist Episcopal church stands. The committee gave those gentlemen every opportunity to explain their different ideas, and in answer to a direct question Mr. Frothingham said he did not know, and had not in his possession any facts to prove that it was not Christ Church. Another strong circumstance connected with it is that two men lay claim to being descendants of the man who hung those lanterns, and those men agree that it was Christ Church, or what was known as the North Church previous to 1775. Not one bit of evidence was brought before the committee to prove that it was not Christ Church. It is only supposition. There is not a historian in Boston today that can locate the ferry to Charlestown in that day. They make it on their plans, but they don't know that that is the spot. I admit that no man living can tell where those signals were hung. No man knows today, except by tradition and history, that George Washington was on earth; and every tradition and history we had pointed to Christ Church. The natural son of the man supposed to have hung out those lanterns had it from his sisters and his relatives that Christ Church was the place. I don't know whether five hundred dollars is too much for the tablet or not, but I have no doubt Christ Church is the church where those lanterns were hung.

Mr. Pratt of Ward 21—We are very well aware that this is a vexed historical question, and are ready to think just now that we are trying to perform a solemn act for the future, which will be a guide for thousands, yes, for fifty thousand, years to come. The city of Boston is trying to solve an historical fact just now, and thousands of years from now an order of this City Council, based upon evidence taken in our time will be looked upon as a warrant for saying where those lanterns were hung up. I think we shall do well to refer this matter back to the committee with instructions to report in print the evidence upon which they base their opinion, and also that they report the manner in which they propose to mark the spot, and upon what part of the building—to give us details enough to know what is to be done, and why. I make this suggestion because I think that such a report of the committee placed upon the files of this City Government will be a valuable historical document; and, without enlarging upon the idea, I think the gentlemen of the Council will comprehend sufficiently the reasons for pressing this motion. I therefore move, in accordance with my suggestion, that the report be referred back to the committee with instructions to report in print the evidence upon which they base their conclusion that Christ Church was the church upon which the lanterns were hung; also a description of the tablet they propose to erect, and the part of the church upon which they propose to erect it, and an estimate of the expense of doing so.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—I hope that motion will not prevail. I don't think any one here will deny the fact that the lanterns were hung out from some church in the town, and also the fact that Christ Church is the only church now standing that stood in that part of the city at the time the lanterns were hung out; and if we are to be so very particular about getting the exact spot we will not have any historical monument at all. If the same spirit had actuated those who located the historical monuments abroad, Europe would not be so rich in historical associations as it now is. I believe in having some place marked, and in saying that that is the place where the lanterns were hung out for Paul Revere. I believe in having some monument of this kind. This motion to refer means that it will go over to next year and be put into the hands of another committee, and that nothing will be done. Historical students are something like the Kilkenny cats; so long as there is anything to fight about they will fight. I don't know who the gentleman is who writes this letter; he may have a great interest in Boston; but if he has made up his mind on this question, no evidence that we can now gather will change it. The committee had two hearings, and I remember the impression I had when I walked into one of those hearings one afternoon and saw several gentlemen with white cravats who seemed deeply interested in settling something. A thousand dollars for putting up such a tablet strikes me as rather large; but if it is not all spent the remainder will go into the balances of unexpended appropriations. I think we had better pass the order to-night.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10—I think we should do great harm to ourselves and posterity, and defeat the object we had in view if we make a mistake. Now it seems to me that this matter is capable of proof and determination. I don't know when these meetings were held, and have no recollection of any public hearings on the subject; but I think that is what ought to have been or ought to be held in a matter of this sort. The reason I asked the question is because I did not know whether the attention of historians and others had been called to this question. I am glad to hear the remarks of the gentleman on the committee. I have no feeling upon this question one way or the other, as I never was in one of those churches. But, I say, if we are going to set up a landmark and make history, let us have it right, if possible; and if it is necessary to wait three months to have it right, that is a matter of no consequence. In regard to the cost, I think that is of minor importance, and care very little about it; but the fact of having this monument upon the right place is of the utmost importance. We not only defeat the object of it, as I said, but we make ourselves, the place and the time ridiculous for a long time to come, if we don't get it right. I believe the fact can be demonstrated by historians. I cannot agree with the suggestion of my friend from Ward 9 that it is of little account whether the tablet is placed on the exact spot where the lanterns were hung or not. If that was not the church, I should be chagrined to find out that I had been instrumental in putting a tablet there, although it is the only church that was standing in that part of the city where the lanterns when hung out. If the church where the tablets were hung is gone, let us have no tablets. Don't let us hang out a lie to go down to coming generations. What I should like would be to refer it back to the committee, who should give notice of a public hearing to gentlemen who are known to be interested in these affairs, and, if possible, we should determine the truth. If we cannot determine the truth about it, I should be in great doubt about putting up a tablet. I don't want to lie about it. If we cannot find out the truth about it, I should be in favor of referring it to the next City Government. I hope it will be referred back to the committee to give a public hearing, to see if this question of the locality of the hanging out of those signals cannot be shown to the satisfaction of intelligent men.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—The gentleman from Ward 10 misconstrues the idea which I attempted to put forward. What I meant to say was this, that there has been a dispute between historians for a long time with regard to the identity of the spot where these lights were hung out; this question has been before a committee of this City Government, and after, at least, two public hearings, they have made up their minds that this is the church from whence the lights were hung out; and whether, upon that evidence, it is n't feasible for us to decide now that we will mark this church as a monument for all time to come. My first remarks were rather in reply to the gentleman from Ward 21, who was remarking upon the solemnity of the step we are about to take, and I did n't feel that it was quite so solemn a matter, or that it was to be a judicial proceeding which was to be felt by millions yet unborn; but that it was proper for us to erect some monument to keep alive the memory of an historical event which certainly took place, and which, so far as we can judge now, was performed at this particular locality.

Mr. Spenceley of Ward 19—It seems to me that the gentleman from Ward 10 is correct in this matter, and that we should n't put a tablet on Christ Church, and say this is the church; and every time we went by to have a feeling of doubt in our minds whether it is the church, would n't be just the thing. The gentleman from Ward 9 intimates that we had as well put it there as anywhere, which reminds me of a story I read the other day: A man was fishing on the wharf, one day, and said, "Fish, I wish you would bite that hook; it is fish or nothing at my house today." It seems to me we ought to find out surely whether this was the church or not. It is a matter of history that the lanterns were hung out somewhere; but whether that was the church, or whether it was on some other church, we had better find out before we put a tablet there.

Mr. Pratt—I think we shall all go a little further than the gentleman from Ward 9, and say that before we put the tablet up we want to know that this is the spot and why it is, not only for the benefit of millions yet unborn, but for thousands yet living. You and I cannot go up to the Historical Society's rooms and look over all the histories and pamphlets and letters written by learned men who have studied this question, and wade through all the facts and theories, any more than can the large number of men who will pass by the church and see the tablet. A great many people are bothered by this question, which is quite a vexed question among historians. We want to fix not only the fact that this was the church, but we want the proof and the reasons for the fact on file here. It would be an interesting memorial to have even the evidence upon which the committee came to their conclusion. I have no doubt the gentleman who has spoken for the committee has spoken the truth, and that they came to a wise conclusion. But all I know is that a committee of the City Government has looked into it some, and come to the conclusion that that was the spot. If a man should ask me why that tablet was put up there in 1877, when I was a member of the City Government, I should say I don't know, but that some members of the City Government got together and came to the conclusion that that was the spot. I want to be able to state that that was a fact. The gentleman from Ward 9 stated that the motion meant the carrying of the matter over to next year. That certainly cannot be true. If they have not preserved their memoranda, they can call another meeting; and I should say a fortnight was ample time to call the committee together and pre-evidence and make up such a document. The report can be made and the order passed this year, and we can have the pleasure of ordering it to be done, whether it is completed or not. But I do think, as a matter of common sense, that we should appreciate the force of the remark that, for the benefit of those people who have a doubt, the committee ought to consult these savans and learned men and compare their testimony, for it would be a great satisfaction to them to have some document to refer to which would have the weight of official sanction, and which would set forth the facts upon which that tradition rests; and we shall all know where the spot was and why it was the spot; and although gentlemen may smile at the suggestion that it may be a matter of evidence for thousands of years to come, I do not hesitate to repeat it. The history of long-past events rests largely upon official records, and the city of Boston has taken this matter in hand and proposes to set up a monument and make a record which will be handed down as long as Boston stands; and the official act of the city of Boston fixing that fact will be looked at by every coming historian and every writer of a Fourth-of-July oration, and they will want to see the facts upon which the judgment of the committee was based. It would be a rare chance for immortality for the committee, and I should think they would be the first to favor it.

Mr. Fraser—I hope this will not be referred back to the committee, for I believe they have given it about as careful attention as they possibly could. The committee had no money to employ a shorthand reporter, and I am very sorry that the opinions and reasons and historical facts given before the committee are not in such shape that they could be given to this Council. Mr. Frothingham, Mr. Lewis, Mr. Drake, Rev. Henry Burroughs, Dr. Ellis and many others were before the committee. The committee were in no hurry; they gave them all the time they required. If the wardens and vestry of Christ Church were not perfectly satisfied by their own records that that was the place, no money or honor could induce them to allow it to be placed there. If there was the semblance of a doubt that that was not the place, they would n't have it there; consequently they will allow it to be placed there. It is a well-known fact that when those lanterns were put up, people were not in the habit of making memorandums, as they might fall into the hands of some one and make it uncomfortable for them. The records of the church are incomplete for a few years after that time; but every circumstance connected with it satisfies them that that is the place. Mr. Drake, the historian, is satisfied beyond a doubt, in his own mind, that that was the place. He says that one of the strongest circumstances is, that while it is claimed that two men hung up the lanterns, their descendants both agree that that is the place. Mr. Frothingham claimed that it was the church in North square, and Mr. Lewis claimed it was the church in Hanover street, and no two gentlemen who appeared before the committee agreed upon the same place. The great point seemed to be that it was the North Church, and it was proof to the minds of the committee that a minister accepting a call to a church would be very apt to know the name of the church; and in 1768 a minister did accept a call to Christ Church, calling it the North Church. I should be happy to have it go back to the committee again if there was anything that they could do. The committee sent to every man to come and give his historical intelligence; they devoted two whole days to it, and after they were through Mr. Frothingham said he had no knowledge or facts to prove that that was not the church. No man living can stand up and say that that is not the church, because no man has seen it; but there is a tradition in the family of Paul Revere. A letter was read from the last living relative of Paul Revere, stating that it was a tradition handed down in his family that that was the church. The names of the Revere family appear upon the books where they have been baptized in that church. I hope it will not be referred back to the committee, but that the Council will dispose of it.

Mr. Howes of Ward 18—I believe it is a matter of fact that there are only two townships in the State of New Jersey that do not contain a headquarters of Washington; and it seems to me that this question is something like that. It is not only doubtful that Paul Revere hung the lanterns out at this church, but it is doubtful whether he hung the lanterns at all. That is a matter of opinion; and it is also a matter of opinion whether it may be wise for the City Government to go on erecting monuments, if they are not going to succeed better than they have done. Any one who will go to South Boston and see the monument erected to the memory of the gallant Washington for driving the British troops from Boston, will come to the conclusion that that is the only one the city should erect. That was very expensive; the whole thing is an abortion and fraud; it don't amount to anything at all, and is a disgrace to the place where it is erected. If the city is going on erecting such monuments, I think it is a waste of money.

Mr. Beeching of Ward 1—I think we have had all the facts we can possibly obtain upon this subject, and I move the previous question.

The affirmative of the question was taken.

Mr. Pratt asked if ordering the main question would cut off the motion to recommit, and the President said it would.

Mr. Pratt asked Mr. Beeching to withdraw the motion.

Mr. Beeching said that was his object, as he thought $1000 enough to spend.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13 raised the point that no debate was in order, and the President ruled the point well taken.

Mr. Flynn called for the special assignment, which was taken up, viz.: Order for loan for widening Commercial street.

After the disposal of the Commercial-street matter, the discussion on the order in regard to the tablet on Christ Christ was resumed.

Mr. Beeching withdrew the call for the previous question.

A motion to lay on the table, by Mr. Crocker of Ward 9, was lost.

The order was recommitted to the committee, by a division—30 for, 23 against. Sent up.

COMMERCIAL STREET.

On motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 13, the Council took up the special assignment for 8 P. M., viz.: Order for a loan of $800,000 for widening, grading and repaving Commercial street, between Eastern avenue and Charles River Bridge, and for paying damages occasioned thereby. The question was upon the passage of the order.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—Before the final vote is taken upon that order I wish to clearly define my position upon it. I believe that a judicious expenditure of money might be made upon Commercial street, and that it is desirable that it should be so expended; but I believe that it is not proper for us to appropriate the large sum of money asked for in this order without some limitation as to its expenditure. The proper course is for the Street Commissioners to decide upon and submit to us a plan, so that we can say whether we will appropriate the money for that particular purpose. We are asked to appropriate $800,000 for what? For the widening on the land or water side? We don't know. If it is to be widened on the land side, I should oppose it bitterly, because I believe it would be an extravagant expenditure of the city's money. Furthermore, I do not believe this sum would be sufficient, because, while it might pay for the land taken to widen the street, in my opinion it would not be sufficient to pay for the grade damages. Gentlemen here must be familiar with the condition of the hill, and must know to widen this street on the land side would probably necessitate the removal of Copp's Hill, and an entire change of grade of the side streets, coming from the hill into Commercial street. The houses on the side streets will be practically ruined, and all the property adjoining the street on the land side would have to be taken and paid for by the city. And the total expense would be unjustifiably great as compared with the benefit desired. Then, as to the probability of our getting back anything from betterments, I wish to call attention to the fact that the Street Commissioners would not dare to lay out that street under the betterment act, as the result would be to have all the property thrown upon the city. People who own it would be only too glad to surrender it and take the chance of getting back their money from the city. Therefore, I hope the Council will vote down the order for the loan.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10—I don't feel that I can ask the Council for any indulgence after the time used by me in discussing this question. In addition to what I said then, I wish to state that I agree with the gentleman from Ward —. All the arguments in favor of widening the street at all are in favor of widening it upon the water side. What I did not speak of the other evening was the indefiniteness and uncertainty in and about this order. I do not feel like voting away large or small sums of money, unless I know something about how they are to be expended. To vote a million or eight hundred thousand dollars for this object without knowing whether it is to be laid out upon one side, where a part of it can be recovered in betterments, or partly upon the other side, or without some plan to guide us, it seems to me would be voting too much at random, and too loosely for any man who has an appreciation of his duties in regard to the expenditure of moneys intrusted to him. I am willing to say, as I stated before, that I think money might be judiciously expended in the improvement of this street; but I cannot vote for the order as it now stands.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—I am sorry that the gentleman has not informed himself upon this matter. He has certainly had time enough to do it. He says he does not know how he is going to know on which side this street is to be widened, and that the commissioners have not laid it out upon one side or the other. During the last six months the gentleman has had an opportunity to inform himself upon this matter. He has also been invited to go down upon that street and see the necessity for widening it; whether he has done that or not I don't know. I think it out of place for him to argue that this appropriation is wrong, for I think the members of the Council are as competent to decide that as he is, for they have had an opportunity for the last two or three months to consult the interests of the city and the public generally in this matter.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10—Can the gentleman from Ward 13 tell me upon which side the commissioners propose to widen it?

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—On both; on both. If the gentleman had studied it, he would have learned that fact; but it appears he is ignorant now as he was when it was first proposed to the Council.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10—Then if the commissioners propose to widen the street and cut off the buildings upon both sides, it is a most extravagant and ridiculous measure. I take him at his word and say, suppose they intend to widen it upon both sides from one end of the street to—

Mr. Flynn—No, sir, but where it will be for the best interest of the city.

Mr. Richardson—And to be determined by whom?

Mr. Flynn—By the Street Commissioners.

Mr. Richardson—Have they determined it?

Mr. Flynn—I think they have partially. They have submitted the plan to the Council, and if he had studied it, instead of coming here and opposing it without studying anything about it, perhaps it would be more for the interest of himself than for any knowledge which he might give to the Council in this matter.

Mr. Richardson—I claim to have devoted my time to my public duties. I have been upon Commercial street, and I don't want to raise any personal issue with the gentleman in regard to that. The plan submitted here a few weeks ago was made in the office of the Street Commissioners, and brought here at my suggestion; it was not made by the commissioners, but by Mr. Talbot, and is not the plan which the commissioners propose, or did propose, to widen by, and I assert now that there is no plan fixed or determined upon definitely upon which side they will widen it; and the gentleman has the frankness to say that he don't know what the plan is. I say it is a large sum to vote for something that has not been determined upon, and I cannot do it.

Mr. Thompson—In order that there may be no misunderstanding about this, I would state that the Street Commissioners have not made a definite plan, for the reason that they gave in their report to the City Council last February, that they did not feel justified in going ahead and making an accurate survey until the City Council had determined upon the expediency of the appropriation. In fact, there are two or three plans in the office of the Street Commissioners, upon which there is a difference of opinion. The fact is, if we make this appropriation, the subject then goes to the Street Commissioners, who will make accurate surveys, adopt a plan for the widening, and send it to the City Council, and we will have to assent to it by a majority vote. The point I wish to make is this: Whereas, it now requires a two-thirds vote to pass this appropriation, after it is made the Street Commissioners can make any expensive plan they please, and it can be passed here by a majority vote. I should vote for the plan made by Mr. Talbot, which is now upon file; but I object to putting a large sum into the hands of those three gentlemen, without some definite information as to the general plan they will carry out.

Mr. Fraser of Ward 6—This matter having been so well ventilated, I was in hopes it would n't be necessary for me to say anything. The widening of Commercial street was laid out some years ago. I don't know whether this plan was laid out by the Street Commissioners or not; but I do know that when a part of the City Council visited Commercial street. Mr. Talbot went down with us and explained the plan that the commissioners propose to widen it by. They went along the whole line of Commercial street, and at every corner Mr. Talbot himself expressly explained where and how and at what place they intended to widen it. As to the necessity for the widening, I don't believe there is a gentleman here but believes it should be done. The interests of commerce and the future prosperity of Boston demand it. Furthermore, from a sanitary standpoint, it is the greatest improvement needed in Boston for twenty-five years. It is the first time I ever heard that they had not a plan. To widen it on the land side would be better than on the water side. It would do away with a great many buildings that are of no use at present; and, furthermore, I don't believe that four estates on the line would be surrendered at the price they are assessed at.

Mr. Mowry of Ward 11—It seems to me that gentlemen are not meeting this question squarely. We are discussing which plan is the more feasible, when we should consider whether Commercial street should be widened. I do not consider that the necessities of business demand it, or that it is politic, or necessary for public convenience; and I shall squarely vote against it.

Mr. Kelley of Ward 3—I believe it is necessary to widen Commercial street, that it will be for the benefit of the city, and therefore I shall vote for it. Here is a narrow street with a railroad in it within two feet of the curbstone, in the most densely-populated part of the city. The engine puffs steam right into the houses, and the street should be widened as a sanitary matter. Gentlemen consider the expense, but they did n't consider the expense when they voted to buy land for a park at $500* an acre, for which no real-estate agent would pay $3000. This improvement is needed for the commerce of Boston, and I don't see where it is going to cost so much. The street should be widened on both sides. Take it from Lewis wharf, run the line on the land side to Lime alley, and then take it on the water side from the gas house till you come to the bridge, and you have a straight, broad avenue from Charlestown almost out to Boston Highlands. I think it would be for the interest of the city, and as a sanitary matter, to widen it. Take those poor men who go home to dinner from the wharves. They sit in their poor houses, and while at dinner the train comes along and puffs steam and gas into the houses. I should like to know how many members of this Council would put up with it. It should be done for the interests of the city and the safety of the little children. The lives of the children there are in danger if they fall on the sidewalks.

Mr. Clarke of Ward 23—I was quite interested in the arguments of the gentleman last up; but I don't agree with him that that street should be widened for sanitary purposes. I do believe that our commercial and business interests require that the street should be widened. The day we went down with the committee, we had the City Engineer and also some of the Street Commissioners with us, and they pointed out just where it was proposed to widen it; and I was sorry that the whole Council did n't go, instead of a very few. They propose to widen it on the land side for a short distance, and then cross over on to the water side at Lewis wharf, taking in some old rookeries and junk stores, and then taking it on the land side to the hill, where they propose to cross on to the water side and widen to where the gas house now is. I think the Street Commissioners understand what would be the most economical and for the best interest of the city, and consequently I am satisfied to leave it to their judgment and that of the City Engineer; and I hope the order will pass.

The question on the passage of the order was taken by yeas and nays, and was rejected—yeas 40, nays 22—two-thirds being necessary.

STONY BROOK.

On motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 13, the rule was suspended and the order for a special committee to take charge of the improvement of Stony Brook, the estimated cost of improvement not to exceed $133,000 (City Document No. 86); and also an order for a loan of $133,000—all money received for betterments or otherwise to be used for the redemption and cancellation of said loan.

The question was upon the passage of the order.

Mr. Pratt of Ward 21—The reasons for the passage of this order were very fully stated at a preceding meeting by the gentleman from Ward 23 [Mr. Brown], who is chairman of the special committee on this subject, and who made a very convincing argument upon it. I do not propose to go into any extended argument this evening; I simply wish to call the attention of the Council to the fact that the Board of Street Commissioners, the Board of Health repeatedly, the Board of Aldermen, and the special committee appointed this year to take this subject under consideration, have all unanimously, every time, reported in favor of making this improvement; that the question comes before us under those circumstances and is entitled to our favorable consideration. Such unanimous and repeated reports and presentments almost do away with the necessity of making any argument upon the matter whatever. I can only say that not long since, after a very heavy rain, I had occasion to go out to Canterbury street and other places along the line of Stony Brook; and I wished at the time, I have wished since, that the gentlemen comprising this Council, who do not live in that vicinity, could have had an opportunity of seeing the territory drained and flooded by Stony Brook under the circumstances which it presents after a heavy rain. When the bridge recently constructed by the city on Williams street was raised and rendered impassable for persons going to and from the depot every day; when the houses in the vicinity were flooded above the surface, so as to make every cellar a pond; when the whole district is rendered for days and even weeks after such a flood a pestilence and breeder of disease, causing not only inconvenience to residents and depreciation of property,—gentlemen will see that not only pecuniary interests are involved in this case, but that it is a question affecting the health of a large section of the city. But as I said, I do not intend to go into extended remarks upon the subject, but simply to arrest the question long enough to make these few observations.

Mr. Felt of Ward 24—What are the chances for betterments in this case? There is something of this kind in the report, but it is not very satisfactory.

Mr. Pratt—The committee examined into that matter very thoroughly, and consulted with the boards and heads of departments, who had special knowledge upon that subject. They came to the conclusion that the betterments to be recovered under the act for this improvement would nearly or quite wipe out the cost of it. The gentleman from Ward 23 very correctly presented some of the facts bearing upon that question. A large part of the improvement and the principal part of the draining of the channel have been done. Very little additional land will have to be taken, and the only opportunity for any grave action for damages likely to arise is the location of the Belting Company. A subcommittee visited this spot and after various examinations and conferences came to the conclusion that such action might be taken, at small additional expense, so as to entirely avoid the liabilities for damages there. The statute allows betterments to be assessed for the whole amount of the improvement, and the amount of land to be benefited by this improvement is very large, and the betterments would be very considerable. The amount named in the report as the possible expense was understood to be largely in excess of the probable cost of making the improvement, and no account was made of the returns from betterments; but it was returned at a large sum under which the cost would fall.

Mr. Mowry of Ward 11—Is it not the opinion of the Street Commissioners that a small portion of the amount called for will be received from betterments?

Mr. Pratt—I understand it to be the opinion of the Street Commissioners, and every gentleman who has taken special pains to examine into it, that nearly, if not quite, all this expense will be recovered in betterments. I understand that the Street Commissioners have expressed that opinion.

The question upon the passage of the order was taken by yeas and nays, and the order was rejected—yeas 40, nays 20, two-thirds being necessary:

Yeas—Messrs. Barnard, Barry, Blanchard, Brown, Clarke, Coe, Crocker, Cross, Day, Dee, Duggan, Felt, D. A. Flynn, J. J. Flynn, Hibbard, Howes, Morrill, Mowry, Mullane, Nugent, Pearl, Perham, O. H. Pierce, Pope, Pratt, J. B. Richardson, M. W. Richardson, Roberts, Sampson, Sibley, Smardon, Spenceley, Stone, Thompson, Upham, Vose, Warren, E. R. Webster, G. B. Webster, Wolcott—40.

Nays—Messrs. Brintnall, Burke, Cannon, Doherty, Fagan, Fernald, Fraser, Ham, Jackson, Kelley (Ward 3), Kelley (Ward 6), Kidney, McClusky, McDonald, McGaragle, O'Connor, O'Donnell, Roach, Ruffin, Thorndike—20.

Absent or not voting—Beeching, Blodgett, Cox, Danforth, Loughlin, J. H. Pierce, Reed, Shepard, Souther, Wilbur.

INVESTIGATION OF COMMON AND PUBLIC GROUNDS.

Mr. Ruffin of Ward 9 moved to suspend the rule so as to take from the table the report on the investigation of the Department of Common and Public Grounds.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13 said there were several important measures on the calendar, and he thought they should be disposed of first.

The Council refused to suspend the rule.
[For further action see later in the report.]

PAY OF EMPLOYEES ON FIRE BOAT.

The order to increase the pay of the officers and men of the fire boat, $100 each per annum from the date of the passage of this order, was considered under unfinished business.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9 stated that since the last meeting he had visited the fire boat and examined with some care whether there is any reason for increasing the pay of the men. The amount is not large, yet the principle involved is of importance, as the firemen on shore might ask for an increase if this is passed. The men on the boat receive a pay corresponding with that of the men on shore; the latter are on duty twenty-one hours a day, and have three hours at meals, but have to answer alarms during the off hours, and they also perform patrol duty. They have hard duty and are kept busy at the engine houses. The men on the boat have no patrol duty, there is no mechanical work for them, and they do not have the three hours a day off that the land men do. The men on land have to live within a mile of the engine house, which is often inconvenient, and have to answer alarms while at meals. To make up for the difference in time allowed the land men, the men on the boat have one day off in each week, whereas the land men have only one day in fifteen. In that respect they are nearly equals. The men on the boat have to purchase their own rations, but the city furnishes the fuel and hires the steward. The present Assistant Engineer on the fire boat had a choice between going with steamer 25 or the fire boat, and chose the latter. The greater part of the duty on the fire boat is waiting, and while they are waiting they have nothing to do. The service is confining and disagreeable, and they should have a fair salary. Mr. Thompson read from a statement made by Mr. Winsor, the agent of most of the tug boats in the harbor, to the effect that engineers on such boats are paid $65 to $100 per month, and have no assistants; deck hands, $40; stoker, $40; steward, $45; captain, $100 to $110. The tug boats that go down the harbor looking for business board the men; those that do not go down the harbor looking for business do not board them. The pilots on the East Boston ferries get $1080 a year, engineers $1020, firemen $780, deck hands $744. The captain and pilot on the police boat get $1260; engineer, $1200. The deck hands on the fire boat are competent to do fire duty and one of them acts as steward. Looking at all the advantages and disadvantages of the two positions, he could not see any necessity for making the change and giving them an allowance for rations, although he thought the men on the fire boat good and efficient.

Mr. Spenceley said the men on land were relieved by patrol duty and work in the repair shops, and the disagreeable duty and confinement on the fire-boat was a good argument for more pay. It is because of the privileges they do not have that they ought to be paid more for their services. The men must all be at their post and remain there. They have been allowed rations for two or three years past, and is it right to cut them off and decrease their salaries besides? This is unanimately recommended by the committee. He moved to amend so that the order should take effect from the date it was originally introduced.

The President ruled the amendment out of order unless the amendment, to have the order take effect on its passage, was reconsidered, and Mr. Spenceley moved to reconsider that vote.

Mr. Burke of Ward 2 said the figures given by Mr. Thompson were as good as he would give. It was fair to presume that a good engineer on an ocean steamer will get $125 a month and found. He corrected an error in the report of his remarks at the last meeting, which said that engineers of the Bradlee and on the ferries had $125 a month; what he said was, they received that before they came into the employ of the city. Three-fourths of the boats in the harbor feed their men, with the exception of a few who do towing around the wharves, and they are small boats. If good, first-class men outside get $100 and $125 a month and found, for about twelve hours duty, these men should get $100.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10 repeated his previously expressed objection to the principle involved, claiming that it was a contract which the men had entered into with the city. When a salary is fixed and a man enters upon the duties, he accepts the office, which would be sufficient in any court of law to bind him to the contract.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9 raised the point that this whole matter was out of order. The order repeals or annuls the ordinance allowing the fire commissioners to fix the salaries of all employees in the department, and not being in the form of an ordinance is in direct violation of section 14 of the joint rules.

The President ruled the point well taken.

Mr. McGaragle respectfully appealed from the decision, and Mr. Stone raising the point that the appeal was not seconded, it was not entertained.

Mr. Sibley said the City Solicitor had decided that an order does repeal an ordinance.

Mr. Thompson said the answer to that was that if the order passed before the point was raised it took effect; but in this case the order had been ruled out of order.

A motion to adjourn, by Mr. Felt, was lost.

MANAGEMENT OF COMMON AND PUBLIC GROUNDS.

Mr. Thompson moved to take from the table the order to consider the expediency of placing the care of the Common and public grounds in the hands of the park commissioners. He said it was important to have it considered this year.

Mr. Ruffin said that subject was discussed in the report on the investigation, and this order should not be acted on until that report is disposed of. He thought a disposition had been manifested to choke off a consideration of the report.

Mr. Thompson said the committee could confer with the commissioners and ascertain whether they would be willing to take such a responsibility without compensation.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13 said his only object for opposing consideration of the report of the investigating committee was, that other matters which had been pending some time might be disposed of.

The motion to take from the table was lost.

Mr. Ruffin moved to suspend the rule in order to take from the table the report on the investigation of the Common, etc., which prevailed, and the matter was taken up and specially assigned to 8½ P. M. next Thursday.

COMMERCIAL STREET.

Mr. Fraser moved a reconsideration of the vote by which the order for a loan to widen Commercial street was rejected.

Carried by a division—33 for, 13 against.

Mr. Howes moved to assign it to Jan. 3, at 4½ P. M.

Adjourned, on motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 13.

such license, have given a long and careful consideration to the subject, have allowed the petitioner and the remonstrants a hearing; and the committee are unanimously of the opinion that it is inexpedient to grant the prayer of the petitioner, for the reasons stated by the remonstrants, that such museums as proposed are only suitable for the inspection of physicians or for students of medicine and anatomy. That there are connected with the museums of natural history and of the several medical colleges in this city quite extensive collections accessible to students and professors of surgery and medicine. #### NUISANCE IN CHARLESTOWN.

Alderman Viles presented the following:

To the Honorable the City Council of Boston:
Gentlemen—In answer to the order of the City Council, which "instructed the Committee on Health to report an order for relief upon the petition of citizens of the Fourth Ward for the abatement of a nuisance," and referred to the Board of Health, we beg to state that the opinion of the City Council given to the Board of Health upon the question of abating this nuisance reached this Board the second week in October; whereupon soundings and estimates for work, which must precede filling, were procured, and much exertion made to have work commence this season. It was not thought advisable, however, to commence the building of bulkheads and the extension of the sewer this fall, which we were advised could not be finished before cold weather.

The Board of Health proposes to begin the work at the earliest practicable day and forward the work as fast as possible.

Respectfully submitted,
S. H. DURGIN, Chairman.

The Mayor—What action is it the pleasure of the Board to take upon this report?

Alderman Thompson—I don't quite understand the nature of the report. It refers to the building of sewers. What we want is the abatement of the nuisance by filling the flats.

Alderman Viles—That is the report of the Board of Health which was handed to me a few moments ago. They inform me that the sewer will have to be extended and a great many piles driven upon which to extend it; and that it will take some time longer than this fall will allow to complete it. Bulkheads will have to be built out there to do it. They also inform me that the Fitchburg and Eastern railroads will commence this work at the earliest opportunity, but not before spring.

Alderman Thompson—One cause of the difficulty is in consequence of the city of Somerville allowing their sewage to be deposited in this pond at this place, and it seems to me it will also be necessary for the Board of Health to make some arrangement with the Health Committee of Somerville before the nuisance can be fully abated. I don't know whether the Board have considered that or not.

Alderman Viles—When the Committee on Health visited this location last summer the Board of Health called our attention particularly to the sewage which Somerville discharged into this canal. They have the matter under consideration, and will probably notify them to take it out. The report was accepted. Sent down.

HIGHLAND MUNICIPAL COURT BUILDING.

Alderman Fitzgerald submitted the following: The Committee on Public Buildings beg leave to represent that they have before them a claim presented by W. R. Huston for ownership in a strip of land enclosed and occupied within the lot upon which stands the old Washington Schoolhouse, Roxbury street, and now occupied by the Municipal Court, and the City Surveyor's branch office. Your committee have taken measures to ascertain the validity of the claim of said Huston, and are of the opinion that his title to the land in question is a good one; the difference being caused by the city of Roxbury in erecting a bank wall on the rear or southerly line of its land purchased for a schoolhouse encroached upon the land owned by Huston. There is about one hundred and fifty feet of land contained in the lot in question, and the city can purchase the title to the same of Huston for the sum of $200. Your committee would recommend its purchase, as it is much needed by the officers of the court now in the building for the proper protection and care of prisoners upon their arrival and departure from the building. They would recommend the passage of the following order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to purchase of W. R. Huston his right and title in 150 feet of land, more or less, enclosed within the Washington Schoolhouse lot, Roxbury street, at an expense not to exceed the sum of $200; said W. R. Huston to give a deed of the same satisfactory to the City Solicitor, and the expense therefor to be charged to the appropriation for Public Buildings.

Alderman Fitzgerald—The explanation of that is that some years ago a man called Thomas H. Perkins owned some land in Roxbury extending from Washington street to Dudley street. In 1840, or thereabouts, the town of Roxbury bought the northerly portion of the land of Perkins fronting on Washington street. In 1857 the other part of the land fronting on and running into Dudley street was bought of Mr. Huston. The town of Roxbury built a retaining wall on the southerly portion of their land, and on it built a schoolhouse, which has since been changed into the Municipal County Court House for the Roxbury District, and Mr. Huston claims that a portion of that wall is built on land which belongs to him. It is for that land he puts in his claim. He says that the wall is built on his land, and that he, some twelve years ago, put up a board fence, which has since been torn down, as evidence of his protest against its public occupancy, or to show that there is no adverse possession by anybody else. The matter came before us, and Mr. Carret has examined the title, and the surveyor at the Roxbury branch has surveyed this piece of land, and he says he has no doubt at all that this wall is built upon the portion of the land which belongs to Mr. Huston; and the question is whether he is to be paid for this piece of land or not. As to whether he put up this fence as a protestation or not, the evidence is as strong for Mr. Huston as against him. There is no evidence that it was n't put there. He is willing to settle the matter by the sale of this land for a hundred and fifty dollars, and on that we report the order.

On motion of Alderman Fitzgerald, the order took its second reading and was passed. Sent down.

ELECTION RETURNS.

Alderman Viles submitted the following:
The committee appointed to examine the returns of votes cast in the several wards of this city on the 11th inst. for municipal officers, have attended to that duty, and report that said returns appear to be properly made, and the results are correctly recorded in the book kept for that purpose.

Your committee having received petitions, duly signed, for the recount of the ballots cast for Mayor and Aldermen in Wards 12, 15 and 16, have examined the ballots cast for Mayor in said wards, in order to see how they compare with the returns, and the results were as follows:

WARD 12.
Mayor.	Returns.	Recount.

In view of the fact that the difference in the number of votes received for any person elected as an Alderman and the highest number returned for any person who was not chosen were nearly 1000, the committee did not think it worth while, unless this Board should otherwise direct, to expend the time necessary to count all the ballots for Aldermen in these wards, inasmuch as the general result could not possibly be affected thereby. The committee also received petitions for the recount of the original ballots cast for warden and clerk in Ward 20, and for all the ward officers in Wards 15 and 16, and they ask for further time in which to report on these officers. The results of the election, so far as this Board has power to determine them, are as follows:

The persons hereafter named, having a plurality of votes, appear to have been duly elected to their respective offices for the ensuing municipal year:

- Mayor—Henry L. Pierce.
- Aldermen—Charles R. McLean, Solomon B. Stebbins, Thomas B. Harris, Clinton Viles, Thomas J. Whidden, Lucius Slade, Lewis C. Whiton, Samuel C. Perkins, Curtis Guild, George B. Faunce, Charles Hayden, Josiah S. Robinson.
- Street Commissioner—(For 3 years) Isaac S. Burrell.

School Committee—(For 3 years) William H. Learnard, Jr., Lucia M. Peabody, Nahum Chapin, Warren Fletcher, William T. Adams, George H. Plummer, William C. Collar, Abram E. Cutter.

The committee recommend that the City Clerk be directed to notify the foregoing persons of their election to their respective offices.

TREE REMOVED.

Alderman Slade submitted a report from the Committee on Common on the part of the Board, that Catherine Kelleher have leave to remove a tree from 246 Cabot street at her own expense, under the direction of the Superintendent of Public Grounds. Accepted.

NUISANCE ABATED.

Alderman Viles submitted a report on petition of Edward D. Rice et al., for abatement of certain nuisance on Williams farm, that said nuisance having been abated, no further action is required. Accepted and sent down.

INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS.

The Board took up the special assignment for 4½ o'clock P. M., viz., order to transfer from Reserved Fund $15,000 for establishment of an industrial school.

The question was upon the passage of the order.

Alderman Slade—I am sorry to be obliged to differ with my friend opposite who offered this order. This Board have readily taken hold of almost every project that has come before us, among them many reports that have been laid over from year to year and have come upon our shoulders; and it seems to me that we have carried so many of those matters through that we ought not to take hold of this affair at the present time. For my part, I cannot see a great deal of merit in it. If I could I would n't hesitate to vote for it. It is true the sum is not very much, but the chances are that, before we get through with it, it must take a very large sum to make it a success, and I doubt if the people are willing to take hold of it. Therefore I shall be obliged to vote against it. I have given it a great deal of thought and attention. I cannot see what good will come from it. To make it a success there must be workhouses in different sections of the city, which can only be done at great expense. No boy can go into such a shop and handle tools, and it is n't possible for any boy to learn any sort of a trade there. I cannot see any good to come from it; it seems to me it will be a failure, and I am not ready to take hold of it.

Alderman Fitzgerald—I thoroughly agree with the Alderman opposite that this Board of Aldermen have performed their fair share in responding to the various petitions presented to them for the expenditure of money, but don't place this in the same category with the other matters that have come before us. Though I voted against a great many of the others to which he refers, yet I am heartily in favor of something of this kind. In 1872 the Legislature was petitioned for the passage of an act to enable cities and towns in this Commonwealth to establish industrial schools. They had a long and patient hearing before the Legislature, and many persons interested in education came before them. The result was the passage of an act, the substance of which was, that—

“The City Council of any city, and any town, may establish and maintain one or more industrial schools and raise and appropriate the money necessary to render them efficient. Such schools shall be under the superintendence of the Board of School Committee of the city or town wherein they are established, and such board shall employ the teachers, prescribe the arts, trades and occupations to be taught in such schools, and shall have the general control and management thereof; provided, that in no case shall the expense of any such school exceed the appropriation specifically made therefor; and provided that nothing in this act contained shall authorize the School Committee of any city or town to compel any scholar to study any trade, art or occupation without the consent of the parent or guardian of such scholar, and that attendance upon any such school shall not take the place of the attendance upon public schools required by law.”

That act empowered cities and towns in this Commonwealth to establish industrial schools, and gave the executive control of these schools to the various school committees of cities. For years there has been a growing feeling among educators throughout the country that our system of education is defective, in that while it educates the brain or head, it does nothing to bring forth or draw out of the boy or girl the peculiar study in life, or occupation, or trade, or taste, for which that boy or girl is fitted. The establishment of drawing in our public schools is nothing less than the establishment of a peculiar course of industrial education. It was a want which was felt to be in our public schools in the United States. of mechanical drawing, and the application of the sciences to practical purposes. We have drawing schools established in this city at a large expense; the teachers alone cost some fourteen or fifteen thousand dollars in salaries. The industrial teachers cost some fourteen or fifteen thousand dollars a year; and nobody will deny that it is money well expended. We have a professor here to whom we pay a very large salary, and his assistants get a very large salary. This question has been before the School Board for six or seven years. Every year they have a committee appointed upon industrial education, and some of their reports are very interesting. Mr. Philbrick made a special report last year on industrial education. The subject has occupied the attention of all the educators in this country. I remember reading an extract in Mr. Philbrick's report from a letter from Mr. M'Allister of Milwaukee, and also one from Mr. Harris of St. Louis. Mr. M'Allister said that industrial education was a problem which sooner or later must be grappled with. Years ago only people went to school who could afford to go into the professions; Latin came to be taught in the public schools, and by and by commercial people went to school more and more, and the aim and object of the education was to fit a boy for commercial pursuits. Now education has become universal. All, high and low, go to school. Education has become compulsory. No matter how poor a parent may be, he is compelled to send his child to school for a certain time, because the statute wisely considers that without educated people our republic will become a failure. The more the masses go into the schools, the more educators see the necessity of combining the practical with the theoretical. Take our girls—I venture to say that the education given in our high schools tends to make them unhappy during the remainder of their lives. Their aspirations are raised so high that they won't go into certain spheres of life, and the consequence is that they become unfit for the duties of the sphere in which they live and their after lives become misery. It seems to me that is one of the problems that our educators will have to solve, and that is to combine with the education of our girls the means of obtaining a livelihood. And so it is with our boys. We send them to the primary and grammar schools, to the high schools, and after cramming them with all the lore of Greece and Rome, send them out into the world. Some of them don't want to become tradesmen, because their aspirations are higher, and the consequence is that their lives are failures. Hence, the problem that educators are trying to solve is, how to make education practical and useful to the boys and girls, to make them use their hands and eyes. That the head shall direct both the hands and the eyes, in gaining a livelihood, because that, after all, is the aim and object of education; besides making them decent citizens. In that our system of education fails. Our school superintendent says this. He said that something should be done for the class of children who cannot go into the country during the summer, and he asks that industrial schools be established. Statistics show that the great mischief with all our men who run into crime is that they have nothing to do. They have no business, no trade, no profession; and I saw an account some time ago that in seventeen prisons over eight per cent. of those who were sent to the State prison had no particular trade, calling or profession. Those persons who came before the committee were men who are educated in the practical education of youth—Dr. Ellis, Mr. Ruggles, who has devoted his whole life to this business, and one lady who represented another philanthropic lady in New York who has devoted half a million dollars to carrying out this system of industrial education—they ask that some such system be inaugurated here. It is a sad commentary upon our institutions that the only place where there is an industrial school for children is in our prisons. We have something of that kind at Deer Island, and there is one at Lancaster for children that have fallen into crime. Why, this ought to begin in our public schools. Why is it in our prisons? Because those who have the control of our prisons and public institutions see that the chief causes of crime are the lack of any fixed occupation or trade in those who are criminals; they float around and about and have nothing to do, and they are tempted to do something to gain a livelihood, and they steal rather than work, because they have no trade or profession. Those gentlemen have represented something of this kind to us. Mr. Ruggles is willing to give some ten or twelve thousand dollars' worth of materials which he has to the city of Boston, and is willing to give his whole time to the city for the instruction of youth, which is worth a great deal, because, as an inventor, he has amassed a fortune and a competency by this business, and he is willing to devote a great deal of it to the city. It is said that it will cost a great deal. I grant you that it will cost something. I don't want to put it into a school, but I want to see it put beside the school. I have no doubt it will cost something; but I have no doubt the city of Boston will reap more from it. If something of this kind in the shape of industrial education were provided where our boys could go and see the various ways in which trade is performed, where their tastes could be developed, and where they could select for themselves, it would save a large amount to the city of Boston in deterring many from going to our high schools throughout the city where they simply get an education which cannot be applied to any practical purposes, because some of them are too poor to go any further. I have no doubt in that way the city of Boston will be amply compensated. It is simply a question of time when this industrial education will be incorporated as part and parcel of our educational system. It is no objection to this that no city or town in this Commonwealth has adopted it, because I fancy that the city of Boston is not in the habit of copying from other towns as other cities and towns are accustomed to copy from the city of Boston. We have spent $200,000 in drawing, and I say that $15,000 is a small amount to ask with which to try this experiment. The ways and manner in which this shall be done is for the School Board to determine. After the City Council decides that it may be done, the details are left to the School Committee. It is for us to legalize it, and it is for the brains of the School Board to determine how it shall be carried out. We don't require that they shall decide upon the teachers, because we consider that they are amply competent to take care of that. Therefore I shall content myself with showing the necessity for the establishment of something of this kind. The necessity for educating the hand and the eye as well as the head and the brain, and of making education more practical than it has been, is what I shall endeavor to show. The introduction of drawing is one step in that direction. We have introduced botany, chemistry and other studies into the girls' high schools, and that is another step toward making the education of the pupils more practical, so that when they get out of school they can turn it to some practical use, besides making them ladies and gentlemen—for that is not the whole intent of education—but it is to make them intelligent citizens, so that they will be producers of something. That is the reason why educators are trying to find something to make education more practical. I know the great objection is that it will cost an enormous sum of money, and that by and by, instead of fifteen thousand dollars, it will be thirty thousand a year. I am willing to acknowledge that it may cost thirty or fifty thousand dollars a year; but I ask, isn't it better to be given for education in our schools, when children are uncontaminated, and to direct their minds, and hands, and heads to some practical purpose in life, then to allow their hands and eyes to be uneducated, so that they will go out into the world with no object and aim in life, groping around in the dark, and placed in our prisons, where we would then reform them by giving them a trade? Isn't it better to give them a trade when they go to school? The committee were unanimous in reporting this order. Whether this Board will consider it sufficient to go any further than this, is for the Board to determine. The Alderman referred to the orders for immense expenditures which have been passed through this Board, and said it is time for us to stop. I say that the money spent for making more practical the education of the forty thousand children in this city will be well spent, and will not be grudged by the citizens of Boston, because I think the two million dollars spent in education will give the greatest return back to the citizens. I think that no order which has passed the City Council this year will meet with more general approbation than this for the establishment of an industrial school.

Alderman Slade—The Alderman refers to persons going to the State prison and learning a trade. Now it simply amounts to learning to run a machine in the State prison. There is hardly a good squarely-educated mechanic in the city of Boston today, or even in the State of Massachusetts. As we all know, almost everything is done by machinery. You cannot shoe a horse by machinery, but the nails for the shoes are made by machinery. In building a house the doors, blinds and sashes, and a large part of the work is done by machinery, and the man who learns to run a machine to make one part knows nothing about the manufacture of the article. You go to Lynn, where the principal article manufactured is boots and shoes, and you can hardly find a man there who can make a boot or a shoe; but they all can run a machine that makes some part of it. And so it is with almost every mechanical trade. And that is one reason why so many men are out of employment today. Suppose you learn a large part of these boys a trade—the most useful trade there is,—which we know they cannot learn. Now the trade they ought to learn is farming. Learning a trade does not produce anything, but everything has got to come from the ground or the sea. But still we cannot do that in the city of Boston. But I do not believe that the city is willing, Boston is willing, to take the responsibility of the business education off the hands of the parents. It seems to me that it will be opening the door so that parents will be shirking the education of their children. I agree with the Alderman that our high schools are doing our girls a good deal of harm. I don't see what good Latin and Greek are going to do them. I cannot see that the boys and girls who leave school today are any more practical or better fitted for taking care of themselves than they were thirty years ago. I will take any of the boys in the city of Boston that leave school at fifteen years old and take them up into New Hampshire, and the boys there will beat them to death in any study that they have. I believe we are stuffing and cramming them too far. They put a book into a child's hands, and in a year it is thrown away, and by the time he gets through school he has forgotten the books he had the first year, and I ask, How is any child to know the studies he has gone over without having perhaps a month's time before they can call anything to mind? And then they cannot do it very well. I don't like the system of education that is followed now. I think the time will come when they will have to go back thirty years or more and adopt the system they had then. I don't care much about the fifteen thousand dollars if I could see any good to come from it. A boy may go into Mr. Ruggles's shop and see and inquire. Mr. Ruggles is probably one of the greatest inventors we have; and there is not probably one boy in a thousand that will fill his place. You cannot give boys brains of the particular cast that he has. I cannot see what good it is going to do. I cannot see what practical knowledge a boy is going to get by going to Mr. Ruggles's shop and looking at the tools there while he explains them. That is my idea, and I don't feel like adopting this system.

Alderman Robinsou—I heartily agree with the Alderman on my left that this idea of industrial education is something outside of the general education of the youth in our schools. Suppose a boy is brought into a school that wants to learn a watchmaker's trade. What in the name of common sense does the teacher know about it? You have got to employ a watchmaker to teach him the trade; and it will take him five or six years to learn it. Suppose a boy wants to learn a carpenter's trade; what does the teacher know about that trade? It employs a variety of machinery, and you have got to employ a carpenter to teach him the trade. Suppose a boy takes a notion to be a boot and shoe maker; what in the name of common sense does a teacher know about making boots or shoes? We have got to employ a boot and shoe maker to teach him. Suppose he takes a notion to manufacture carpets; what in the name of common sense does the teacher know about manufacturing carpets? That is a trade which is diversified in all its departments; each person knows how his particular kind of business is done, and one person knows very little about the work done by another. It is all done by machinery. I always supposed that what was to be done in our schools was the education of the brain. Now the establishment of a school of design is one thing, but the teaching of a trade for practical use in life is another thing, and it is entirely different. Now what does any young man go to school month after month—studying bookkeeping, as I have done, and knew nothing more about it than I did at first? Now, in my opinion those industrial schools will only prevent boys from becoming good mechanics. They will not be willing to go into all the minute details necessary to learn a trade thoroughly and surely and properly, as they would if they were apprenticed.

Alderman O'Brien in the chair.

Alderman Fitzgerald—It is very evident that the Alderman from Dorchester does not understand the order as reported by the committee. He seems to think that the masters of our schools should be shoemakers and tinkers and cauldstick makers, in addition to being skilled in mathematics and the higher branches of the study of Latin and Greek and the classics. The order does not contemplate that trade shall be taught in our schools today. It contemplates that an industrial school shall be placed side by side of the other public schools as they exist today, and not interwoven with them. It is not that the teachers shall be shoemakers, but that an industrial school shall be established. We will allow the cobbler to stick to his awl in that school as he does elsewhere; he shall not teach mathematics, and neither shall the teacher of mathematics teach cobbling. It is intended to establish schools where a boy shall see the work in operation and have an opportunity to develop his peculiar taste. Today half of our boys go through life and don't know their peculiar vocation, and they keep on until it is too late to retrace their steps. The object of industrial education is to draw out of a boy the peculiar education—or whatever you may call it—for which he is fitted. It may be shoemaking; but the object is to draw out from the child his peculiar talents and give him an opportunity to see and determine for himself that for which he has a peculiar taste. The Alderman opposite speaks of our educational system. Unfortunately we cannot send all our boys to New Hampshire to be educated. It is rather strange that all our educators should be forty years behind the log schoolhouses of New Hampshire. The difference is this, that this system, instead of trying to put into a boy's head nothing but reading, writing, arithmetic and geography, it is trying to impart to them a knowledge of the things around them; and that is really education. It is not simply to be able to tell what islands are south of Hindostan. That is not education. It is not to be able to do a sum in compound interest with a trick at fractions, and many other things, as they did in the old arithmetics. That is not education. Education is the drawing out of a boy's perceptive faculties to distinguish objects around him in earth, air and sea, and to know the objects for which they are made, and not merely to understand abstract questions, or to do long sums such as were given when I was a boy; and I suppose they were still longer when the Alderman was a boy. It is a surface smattering of things; it is but the a, b, c of our education. A girl in our high school, or a boy fresh from Harvard College, can answer questions quicker and better than the ablest professor in our schools; but no one will say they are better educated. Hence, I say, our schools are making greater progress every year, and there is greater progress to be made. The Alderman from Dorchester spoke about the manufacture of carpets; why, England and France had to teach us how to make carpets, but since we have introduced industrial drawing in our public schools we are able to supply men for the work. By and by industrial education will grasp more and more every year, and it is only a question of time when it will go hand in hand with the system of education as it prevails today. Both will go together. I don't imagine that this order is going to pass, as it requires a two-thirds vote, and as one of the gentlemen, a member of the committee, who is in favor of it [Alderman Clark], is absent, I shall ask that it be referred to the next City Government.

Alderman Thompson—I hope this Board will not now begin to refer matters to the next City Government. I think we had better settle all the matters that come before us. I hope we shall take a vote upon this matter rather than refer it to the next City Government.

The motion to refer was lost.

The order for the transfer of $15,000 was rejected—yeas 4, nays 7.

Yeas—Aldermen Dunbar, Fitzgerald, O'Brien, Wilder—4.

Nays—Aldermen Breck, Burnham, Gibsou, Robinson, Slade, Thompson, Viles—7.

Absent—Alderman Clark.

INTERCEPTING SEWERAGE.

Alderman Burnham offered an order—That the City Engineer be authorized to erect a temporary shelter for a steam pump on Berkeley street, between Marlborough and Beacon streets, for the purpose of making investigation in connection with the system of improved sewerage.

On motion of Alderman Burnham the order was read a second time and put upon its passage.

Alderman Thompson asked for some explanation.

Alderman Burnham—It is a very slight matter indeed. In pursuance of the investigations as to the height of the water-flow, and whether it will be affected by the intercepting sewerage, it becomes necessary for a while to pump in certain places, in order to take the gauge of the water in the live, and the probability is that there will be inclement weather, which will prevent it. It will occupy some twenty or thirty days. The statute law forbids the putting up of any structure in the streets, and therefore it becomes necessary to act in this way. It is to put up some temporary shelter during the pursuance of this investigation. The Inspector of Buildings has been consulted, and he sees no objection. The cost will be very trifling—almost nothing.

The order was passed. Sent down.

THE GAS SUPPLY.

The Board took up the special assignment for five o'clock, viz., consideration of report, "leave to withdraw," on petition of R. M. C. Graham for leave to lay down gas pipes in this city. (Doc. 96.)

The question was on the acceptance of the report.

Alderman Robinsou—I have received a communication which, in justice to the gentlemen who have made this proposition, I wish to have read.

The Chair read the following:

NEW YORK, March 2, 1877.

Chas. G. Francklyn, Esq., President of the Municipal Gas Light Company: Dear Sir—Having been informed that parties are circulating reports that the gas furnished by your company is particularly poisonous, and having been requested to express an opinion on this subject, I beg leave to state that the trivial variations in the gases made by different processes is of no importance in regard to health, excepting as to the products of their combustion. In this respect your gas is superior to all others, as it does not contain impurities existing in gas manufactured from bituminous coal. I have the honor to remain,

Your obedient servant,

R. OGDEN DOREMUS, M. D., LL. D.,

Prof. Chemistry and Toxicology, Bellevue Hosp. Med. Coll.

Alderman Fitzgerald—This is a very important report, and I should like to hear from the Committee on Lamps. It involves not only leave to withdraw, but a condemnation of the gas which the petitioners propose to furnish to the city of Boston; and I should like to hear from the chairman of the committee who make the report.

Alderman Thompson—I don't know what particular part of this report, or what question connected with it, the Alderman desires me to be heard upon. I would call his attention to page four, in the document, to the statement of Professor Heury Morton, of the Stevens Institute, who has analyzed this identical article that it is proposed to introduce here. The report is quite lengthy and touches upon almost every subject. I don't know that I can say much more to enlighten the Alderman upon any particular point.

Alderman Fitzgerald—The Alderman and his committee have visited New York on this special subject, and I presume they visited it for the purpose not only of seeing the gas consumed there and manufactured by the petitioners, but also to ascertain the relative cost of the gas furnished there and here. I should like to ask the Alderman about the cost of this process in New York. I have seen the light made by this gas, and it is very brilliant. I think it is used in the Brunswick and Fifth-avenue hotels, and I am not sure but it is also used in Delmonico's. The light is very bright, and I am surprised that the deleterious effects of this gas—which, from the report here, would seem to cause instantaneous death—have not been found out at the Fifth-avenue and Brunswick, two of the most important hotels in the city of New York. Did the committee receive this analysis from Professor Morton, or how did they receive it?

Alderman Thompson—The Committee on Lamps did visit New York to investigate this subject of gas. Before they visited New York they were apprised of the pattern from which this gas was manufactured that was proposed to be introduced here. They ascertained that the city of New York itself was receiving gas nominally at a lower price than the city of Boston was paying, but in reality at a higher price. They also ascertained that consumers in New York were paying $2.50 per thousand feet, while the consumers in Boston were paying $2.25. They also visited the private consumers of this gas, among them the proprietors of the different hotels, and they saw the light, which the Alderman referred to, which this gas made. Nobody can deny but that the light is a very excellent quality. At the time the committee were in New York the large hotels were using this gas. Some particular inducement was given to them to use this gas, as was made to the same hotels some three or four years ago, when another company proposed to come to Boston and introduce petroleum gas. They used petroleum gas, and the gas made by the Citizens' Gas Light Company, until this new company got a location and applied to them for the privilege of introducing it into their hotels. They found that petroleum gas was very smoky, and they desired to make a change. The particular inducement offered to them the committee could not find out, as it was a private agreement between the companies and the proprietors of the hotels. When the committee were in New York, such hotels as the Brunswick, the Buckingham and Delmonico's were using this gas. Within the last six weeks the Brunswick and the Buckingham have gone back to the use of the old-fashioned gas made from coal. And for good and substantial reasons. Now, in regard to the quality of this gas, it is a fact that the inventor introduced this gas into the city of Paris some years ago, and at that time it was analyzed and found to contain a certain amount of carbonic oxide, and for that reason it was prohibited. At the last session of the New Jersey Legislature they passed an act that no gas should be manufactured in that State that contained more than two per cent. of carbonic oxide. Now the Alderman desires to know how this report of Professor Morton came to be here. The committee desired to be thoroughly posted as to the introduction of a gas here which might be dangerous. They desired to obtain from the company the result of a chemical analysis of this gas, and they ascertained that one had been made in June last, which is given here.

Alderman Fitzgerald—How and from whom was it received? It is given here as an official document. I should like to know how it was received, where and from whom.

Alderman Thompson—The committee have seen this report verified by the signature of a notary public in the city of New York. If the gentleman wishes any further information, I would state that the treasurer of the company which I happen to be connected with was about to visit New York, and at my particular request he obtained the report of this particular analysis, and he gave me the notary's certificate of the correctness of the report. There is no question about its being a genuine thing. I would also state that the committee were of the opinion that it was too important a matter for them to recommend to the City Council of Boston the introduction of the gas of another company unless there were good and sufficient reasons why it should be recommended. If this company is to come here and furnish gas to the citizens of Boston of equal quality for a cheaper rate, that was a matter to be considered; but if it was merely for the sake of giving another company an opportunity to come in here and levy contributions upon the old companies, that was also a matter for them to consider. Now it is a fact that the owners of this patent claim that this gas is superior to the coal gas such as we are using here. But there seems to be a great doubt in the minds of most experienced gas engineers in the country. The Manhattan Company, which have the largest and most experienced officers in the country, and certainly one of the most perfect establishments in the country, with the exception of the Boston Gas Company, have informed us in regard to this water gas, that if they considered it cheaper and safer than the gas they were making they would consider that they had a perfect right to make it; but, so far as its cheapness and superiority were concerned, they were yet in doubt. Then, again, the fact should be taken into consideration that it would be impossible to manufacture it without so much use of this poisonous substance—twenty-six to thirty per cent.; whereas in this coal gas the carbonic oxide does not exceed six per cent. These parties have been to other places, and that is also a question for this Board to consider. Some parties endeavored to introduce this gas into the city of Troy. They went to Troy, and the result has been that in a short time the new concern was absorbed in the old one. They went to the city of Trenton, and I have here the Gas-light Journal, which shows that—"The new gas company that has been operating in Trenton for some time, and selling gas made under the direction of Professor Lowe, has not exploded exactly, but the foundation of things seems to have dropped out; and at a recent stormy meeting of the management, enough stock was sold out, at fifty cents on the dollar, to place the company under the control of the old coal-gas company."

That may have undoubtedly been caused by the act of the Legislature prohibiting the manufacture of gas containing so much poisonous matter. This same paper, commenting on this same gas, goes on to say—

"Dollars and cents must determine the success or failure of all these processes ultimately. If they can be made to pay in any way they will probably continue to be used in spite of poison; and those interested will have great difficulty in being convinced of the poisonous and dangerous qualities of the gas. Doubtless those having charge of water gas works may say that it is not worse to be knocked over by water gas than by coal gas; but we feel confident that the men who have suffered from the knocking over would hardly coincide in opinion. In fact we are informed that in this city, within two years, some difficulty has been experienced in keeping men at work in trenches where an escape of water gas existed. This was perhaps ignorant prejudice. Some authorities, considered reliable, speak very distinctly with reference to the nature of carbonic oxide."

Now, it is a notorious fact that when this company were laying pipes, the escape of this carbonic oxide was so strong and of such a nature that the men immediately became insensible and had to be carried away, and were unable to get up for a long time. Then in regard to combustion; another company was introduced into Indianapolis, I think, and in consequence of the mixture of this carbonic oxide with the air an explosion took place and completely demolished the whole establishment. I have gone into a careful consideration of all the propositions made by this company, and I can explain to the Board that the city of Boston is doing a great deal better now than they can do by adopting the propositions of these parties who wish to introduce this gas. It is not necessary to do so, unless the Board desires to go into this hearing; but if they do, I have every proposition marked out here, by which it can be explained. There is one common-sense view which should be taken into consideration, and that is the amount of capital which is employed here and in New York.

"There is invested in the city of New York in gas capital and bonds the sum of $20,750,000, or $20.75 to each inhabitant on the basis of 1,000,000 population. With recent proposed additions, Brooklyn will have invested a capital of $11,845,000, or $23.69 to each inhabitant, estimating the population at half a million. In the large district supplied by the Boston companies, $5,333,000 is invested, or $15.24 to each inhabitant, on the basis of 350,000 population."

Now, it could be easily seen that if more capital is to be introduced here, a higher price must be charged to the consumers outside. But with a gas company the first thing is to interest the corporations and the city authorities, and when they are interested and the company gets a location, if there is any deficiency in the price the private consumers are expected to make it up.

Alderman Robinson—The chairman of the Committee on Lamps has stated that we gave this matter a full, free and mature consideration; and I for one still remain fully impressed with the brilliancy of the gas made by the Municipal Company of New York. We saw it at the different hotels, and there was a steady brilliancy of light that I have not seen in any other gas. Fully impressed with that, we went to the works, and were very politely shown and had explained everything, even to the price which it cost, and I think I can give some general idea of the whole process of manufacturing this gas. Imagine, Mr. Chairman, a steam boiler, six to ten feet in diameter—the size depending upon the proportion of steam you wish to generate. Beside this is a furnace about the same diameter and height, filled with anthracite coal, which is heated to a white heat, and the steam in passing from the boiler passes through this white heat, which superheats the steam, separate the oxide from the gas, and the nitrous oxide passes off—which is that blue flame you sometimes see upon the top of a coal fire in the furnace—and that passes away out of sight. The other portion passes through a cooler and bubbles up and is there passed into a pipe. In another building a short distance off is a boiler with an inside tank, with a space between the inside and outside tank, which is filled with water. The inside tank is filled with naphtha and the water is heated between the two tanks so that the vapors unite with a portion of the water, which, after being superheated, passed into a retort. The naphtha gives the illuminating power. After that the process is pretty much the same as any other company's process. Although more expensive, I do not think it is a better establishment than the Boston Gas Light Company's, which has also the means and facilities for making all the experiments with this gas, if they feel so disposed. But we had to think of that in some measure in regard to the proposition made by Mr. Graham, and had to base our reflections somewhat upon that. If the permission asked for is granted, it would not be "operative until the said petitioners shall have signified their assent to the conditions and their acceptance of the permission, giving good and sufficient security for the faithful performance of the contract, to the satisfaction of the proper officers of the city." This implies that if this City Government shall grant permission to lay pipes, they will not serve the public until the former companies build gas works and take time to introduce it into this city. Again, there is another provision that the said petitioners "shall not be compelled to expend in the laying down of mains a yearly sum exceeding $10,000. Now, ten thousand dollars in laying mains would not furnish a very large portion of the lights of the city. The streets would have to be torn up; and that was a consideration that the committee had to take. So far as we could learn, all the companies were striving to furnish the city of Boston with as good gas as they can. Another matter is that "the gas furnished shall be of the best power of illuminating gas, of an illuminating power of not less than sixteen candles when tested at a distance of more than one mile from the place of manufacture." They also agree to furnish to street lamps for $25 per annum, for lamps burning three feet of gas per hour of sixteen-candle power. If I am correctly informed, the lamps of the city of Boston burn four feet an hour; consequently the same amount of gas at $25 for three feet an hour would amount to $33.33, and there would have to be four lamps where there are now three. Again, they only furnish gas of sixteen-candle power, while the gas furnished by the photometer was of nineteen-candle power; so that, taking sixteen-candle gas at three feet an hour, and the other, nineteen-candle gas, at four feet an hour, and there seems to be no reason why we should go into this matter of changing gas companies. I asked the Mayor of New York and another gentleman in charge of the works, and I could not find out any particular objection to the safety of this gas. That is my belief. But I believe that, when our own citizens have expended millions of dollars, and have pipes all over the city, if any improvement is to be made it should be made by the present companies, which obviates all necessity for any change in the streets, or any question of royalty. If this gas can be furnished for what they represent, and if it is as safe as coal gas, it is as much for the interest of the Boston gas companies to furnish it as any other; and as those companies are composed of intelligent men, I believe they will do it as soon as it can be done. One question about this illuminating power is difficult to settle, whether it will be dangerous in our gas works. Coal costs somewhat more in Boston than in New York; but if they manufacture gas of naphtha in one place it can be done in another, and the only question is, whether it can be done as well here as elsewhere. As far as any loss to the gas companies, by the introduction of this gas, I could not see myself where there was any particular objection to that, after the retorts burn out, for I believe the works for purifying are about the same. The committee don't profess to be chemists or experts, but they take the view of business men whether it would be beneficial to allow another company to establish works when it would be years and years before gas could be made any cheaper. That is one reason why I signed the report.

Alderman Fitzgerald—I am glad we have such an exhaustive account of the various gaslight companies, and of this company especially; but I am very sorry that this committee should depend upon the treasurer of a company in the city of Boston, with which this company is competing, and take his report as the basis of their official decision upon the quality of the gas to be introduced in the city of Boston. Just imagine a judge sitting on the bench to decide between the relative merits of a case between a petitioner and a respondent, and in making up his decision should go to the remonstrant and ask him to give him his opinion of the other man's petition, and make up his decision on that. That is precisely the case with this. A member of this committee who is himself interested in gas, asked the treasurer of his company to give him an analysis of a certain gas, the owner of which petitions to be allowed to use in the city of Boston; the treasurer furnishes the analysis and it is made part and parcel of an official report, showing the condition of this gas. It may be all right; but I submit in all fairness that it is not the way to make an official report upon which to come to an intelligent conclusion as to the quality of this gas. You have Professor Doremus on one side and Professor Morton on the other. It is admitted that the lighting power of this gas is excellent. I saw it in New York at the Brunswick, and took particular notice of it. It is very powerful and lightsome. It is very strange to me if it contains so much of this poisonous substance and is not altogether excluded from such a café as the Brunswick or Delmonico's. I understand it is furnished at a very low price. We pay $375,000 in the city of Boston for gas; but I don't know whether it is at a cheap price or not. Of course gas must be a monopoly more than anything else. Railroads were more like gas companies than anything else in this respect; but the passage of the general railroad law has done away with so much of that monopoly; and now under the corporation laws any gas company can be formed and lay down pipes in the streets after they obtain permission from the Board of Aldermen. I do not intend any reflection upon the Boston Gas-light Company, as the gentleman who is at the head of it is a sufficient guarantee that it is well conducted. If the Alderman had gone further in the able report of the Gas Commissioners, he would have read that it is their opinion that we ought to manufacture our own gas. That is a consideration for the City Government of Boston. With $375,000 paid every year to the gas corporations of Boston, I think it is a question for the city to consider whether it should not supply gas to itself and its citizens. The question will come in about the stockholders who invested their money in it when nobody else would. What I object to in this report is not that they deny the right to lay pipes in the city of Boston, and think that perhaps such a course would lead in a very short time to a movement for the city to manufacture its own gas, but they also report that this gas is so dangerous to life, and poisonous, that that would utterly preclude its consideration altogether. In order to give a fair statement of the condition of this gas, the chemical analysis of it should be in a more official and disinterested way than in coming to the committee from the treasurer of a company who is himself one of the opponents of the introduction of this gas in the city.

Alderman Thompson—The Alderman criticises my action in ascertaining information upon a matter intrusted to me. He must consider that, being connected with gas people, if I want any information in regard to its manufacture, I naturally go to gas people. I would not go to mechanics or lawyers for such information, but where I thought I could get the most correct information. I had seen in a pamphlet that this process had been discarded in France, where this invention was made. When the committee were in New York they asked this corporation to give them a copy of an analysis that they had, but could get none. What were they going to do? They were not authorized to employ a professor to analyze this gas, and they did not think it was necessary, if they could get the information. On inquiry they found that one had been made, and in order to get it the most natural thing in the world was for them to go to the gas authorities. I say that is perfectly justifiable, and I am sure no member of this Board can object to getting it from a party that is disinterested, as the Charles-town Gas Company would not come in competition with this company. The result of the examination was brought to me with a certificate sworn to before a notary public of New York, that I might know that it was genuine. Why don't the Alderman state that he doubts its genuineness? This report has been before the Board two weeks, and if there had been any doubt about this report of Professor Morton it could have been ascertained. Now in regard to the recommendations of the Gas Commissioners; it is a very intelligent report; the commissioners went through this subject very thoroughly, and they say—

In regard to the admission of another gas company into Boston to compete with the Boston Gas Light Company, we are firmly of the opinion that no such competition should be permitted, unless the competing company be owned and managed by the city of Boston itself; and this opinion has been formed from a study of numerous cases of unsuccessful competition in supplying gas to cities in both the United States and Europe. By unsuccessful we mean, that the competition has not succeeded in permanently lowering the price of gas to the citizens. It has invariably resulted in a compromise as to price or district, except in the case of Detroit, where the battle is still raging. In New York the city is divided between the New York, Manhattan and Metropolitan companies, each supplying a separate district, and the New York Mutual Company is allowed to lay its pipes anywhere in the city and compete with the other three. The result of this is that the citizens are obliged to pay twenty-five cents more per 1000 cubic feet than in Boston; whereas, the price should, if anything, be lower than in Boston. The citizens are in each district, therefore, obliged to pay the interest on two capitals instead of one. The same is true of Brooklyn, N. Y., where there are six companies,—the Brooklyn, Citizens', Nassau, Metropolitan, People's and Williamsburg. Here the compromise has been effected by dividing the district, and raising the price to fifty cents per 1000 cubic feet more than is paid in Boston.

There is only one city in the Union that manufactures gas, Philadelphia, and in the report of their expenses I was struck with an item of $2700 for matches, when undoubtedly the money was spent for other things, perhaps for several thousand drinks about election time. I don't think it is for the interest of Boston to establish gas works, for I don't think they can manufacture it as cheaply as private corporations can. The reason the commissioners recommended the city to petition the Legislature for authority to establish gas works was because the Boston Gas Company were not under the control of the Legislature; but that company have relinquished all such advantage they ever had over the new companies, and since then one of the commissioners told me he would not now recommend the city to manufacture its own gas.

Alderman Fitzgerald read from the commissioners' report to show that the Philadelphia experiment had been financially successful, and reiterated his previously expressed objections to the reflections of the committee upon the petitioners.

The report was accepted.

A motion to reconsider, by Alderman Thompson, hoping it would not prevail, was lost.

Adjourned, on motion of Alderman Wilder.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

Petitions, etc., were referred in concurrence.

Report (leave to withdraw) on the petition of John Corcoran for conveyance of land corner of Fellows street and Colony place.

Report (no further action required) on petition of E. D. Rice et al, for abatement of a nuisance on Williams Farm, Roxbury.

Report that it is proposed to begin the work of abating the Mill Pond nuisance at the earliest practicable time, and prosecute the same as fast as possible.

Report and order to remit a tax assessed upon Isaac L. Rich for 1876—$50.80. Order passed to a second reading.

Order to release title to estate 111 Warrenton street to devisees under will of John Donahoe, by sale of said estate for collection of a betterment assessment, on payment of $1300. Read twice and passed in concurrence.

Report and order to receive for 1878, upon a lease given to Thomas W. Carter, $2000, on the terms and conditions therein set forth.

Mr. McGaragle asked for an explanation, and Mr. Crocker replied that the gentleman was found to be unable to pay his rent and that the Committee on Public Lands thought it desirable for the interest of the city to reduce the rent.

Mr. McGaragle called attention to an order early in the year, reducing the rent of the same party, and thought that if they kept on, the city would soon have to pay him a bonus for occupying the property.

Mr. Clarke of Ward 22 explained that this party had a lease of the wharf for five years or more at about $3800. Wharf property in that vicinity has depreciated, and other wharves can be procured at much less rent than he was paying for this one. He said he was unable to pay the rent, and would have to give it up. Last year the committee made the amount he should pay $2000 for the year, but declined to cancel the lease for the reason that if business improved he could pay the rent to the full amount of the lease. He has been unfortunate the past year, and stated that he was unable to occupy the wharf at the rate of $3800 a year, but that he would pay $2000. Back rent to the amount of $2100 is now due. The order provides that if he will pay this back rent of $2100 he may continue on next year at the rate of $2000, and after that he will have to pay the full amount of the lease. If the city had to take the wharf it would not probably be able to get more than fifteen hundred dollars a year for it. This will encourage him to go on, and give the city a chance to secure this rent.

Mr. Spenceley—How much was the rent last year?

Mr. Clarke—Two thousand dollars.

Mr. Spenceley—And he is $2100 behindhand. In April we deducted $1250, and now he owes about $2100. If we keep on in this way, probably the wharf will do as well to lie idle.

Mr. Crocker said the rent last year was two thousand, or about that. This is not an additional reduction on the amount he has paid last year, but for another year, and is keeping his rent down. It was thought better times might come, and the rent would then be about fair. The proposition is to reduce it the first year, and is made conditional upon his paying all he owes.

Mr. Clarke said a part of the $2100 is included as a part of what he owed last spring, and he pays the $1500 abated under that order. The committee thought the city would get what he owed and two thousand next year.

Mr. Mowry asked if the lessee is responsible.

Mr. Clarke said the abatement was in consideration that he shall pay $2100. The committee had some doubts as to his responsibility.

The order was passed to a second reading.

Report and order to cancel bond of J. L. Simonds for land on Chapman street, and for issue of a new agreement, as therein set forth. Passed in concurrence.

Report and order to purchase of W. R. Huston his right and title to about 150 feet of land enclosed in Washington Schoolhouse lot, at not exceeding $200. Ordered passed to a second reading.

Order to erect temporary shelter for a steam pump on Berkeley street for purpose of investigations regarding improved system of sewerage. Read twice and passed.

Order to pay Benjamin Cushing $500 for services in capacity of secretary of Board of Assessors. Ordered to a second reading.

Order to pay D. H. Morrissey $200 for extra clerical services in the Assessors' office. Passed to a second reading.

Mr. Fraser of Ward 6 moved a suspension of the rule that it might take its second reading.

The rule was suspended and the order was read a second time and put upon its passage.

Mr. McGaragle asked if this order had been before any committee of the Government.

Mr. Pope of Ward 14 said it had been discussed in the Committee on Assessors' Department, and it was unanimously agreed that $200 for extra services to Mr. Morrissey, and $500 to Mr. Cushing, should be paid on account of the extra labor performed by both parties both at night and on Sundays. Mr. Cushing had had a great deal of additional work to do as secretary of the Board of Assessors.

Mr. McGaragle called to mind the request of the License Commissioners for more salary, and that the legal minds of the Council raised the point that it was a contract, and he wanted the same legal minds to be brought to bear upon this question. These parties were under a contract to perform the duties of their offices, and they were as much under a contract as the License Commissioners.

Mr. Pope explained again that the compensation was for extra services.

Mr. Spenceley of Ward 19 said these men were not in the Fire Department, and therefore when they did anything outside of their regular duty they should be paid for it. They have regular hours, and when they work extra they of course should be paid.

Mr. Morrill of Ward 21—It has been suggested that some of the work has been performed on the Sabbath. I should like to know how many hours' work was performed on that day.

Mr. Burke of Ward 2 had intended to make inquiries about the matter, if it was laid upon the table. The secretary of the Assessors receives $3000 a year, and he could not see how the City Council could increase this salary and refuse to increase the salaries of those who are earning more than they receive.

Mr. Clarke explained that the clerk in the Assessors' office has had an unusual amount of work to do, especially during the recent election campaign, in making duplicate copies of the tax bills, and he has had to work at night to keep up his regular work.

The order relating to Mr. Morrissey was passed in concurrence.

Mr. Fraser moved to suspend the rule so that the order relating to Mr. Cushing could take its second reading.

The rule was suspended, and the order was read a second time and put upon its passage.

Mr. McGaragle again alluded to the fact that Mr. Cushing had a stated salary, year in and year out, and he did not see why there was not as much of a contract on his part as there was with the License Commissioners.

Mr. Pratt of Ward 21 explained that there are contracts made specifically, and contracts made for certain things which are fair and reasonable. Mr. Cushing gets a salary for his services as Assessor, and for his services as secretary to the Board of Assessors the contract implied that he should receive fair and reasonable compensation.

Mr. McGaragle thought that according to the same ratio the chairman of the board would be worth about $1000. The duties of the secretary are to keep the records of the Dooming Board, and to him this looked like beating the city out of $500 for imaginary services.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 11 said the evidence before the committee was that if any one else had done the extra work Mr. Cushing did, it would have cost a great deal more than $500.

Mr. Mowry of Ward 11 thought the compensation reasonable for work which required Mr. Cushing to remain at the hall night after night until midnight.

Mr. Fraser of Ward 6 said this was no new appropriation; only authority to spend money appropriated which it had been expected to pay.

Mr. Burke said it was virtually paying Mr. Cushing two salaries, and there were plenty of clerks in City Hall and young men in the city who could perform the duties.

Mr. Fraser said the work was very peculiar, and while there were many worthy young men who might learn to do the work, no new man could do it as well as Mr. Cushing.

The order was passed in concurrence.

COMMERCIAL STREET.

The order for a loan of $800,000 for widening, grading and repaving Commercial street, between Eastern avenue and Charles-river Bridge, and for paying damages occasioned thereby, was considered under unfinished business, the question being on its passage.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—I propose to move to amend the order as follows:

Amend by changing the amount from $800,000 to $500,000, and by adding the words, "Provided, that said street be widened mainly on the water side, and to a width not to exceed eighty feet; and, provided further, that if the estimate of the Street Commissioners for the expense of widening, grading and repaving said street shall exceed said sum of $500,000, no part of said sum shall be expended until the abutters, corporations and persons interested in said street widening shall agree to contribute such sums of money as will with said appropriation of $500,000 be sufficient to cover said expense."

Mr. Sampson of Ward 17—I am decidedly opposed to the amendment, which is but an entering wedge to the job, and I trust we shall vote it down. Before entering upon this I hope the Council will consider that within a few years we have spent $23,000,000 for street widenings, and that in this time of depression every business man is struggling in consequence of the high taxes and heavy loads he has to carry. The Finance Committee were unanimous that it was unwise to pass this measure in the present financial condition of the city. We should consider the condition of the taxpayers and make their burdens as light as possible, rather than increase them.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10—The amendment relieves the original order from very many objectionable features and partly imposes upon the interested parties the corresponding burdens of it, which is just and equitable. I am not quite ready to say I shall not vote for the amendment, although I have opposed the original order. I hope further time will be given to consider it, and move that it be assigned until a week from this evening, at 8½ o'clock.

Mr. Fraser—While I favor widening Commercial street to a width of a hundred feet, I suppose that half a loaf is better than no bread. It is very late in the season, and I hope it will not be assigned, as several gentlemen want to express their views upon it.

Mr. Spenceley of Ward 19—Would the gentleman from Ward 9 be satisfied to vote for the amendment?

Mr. Thompson—I would not offer an amendment which I would not vote for.

Mr. Spenceley—Then I hope it will not be assigned, for I am afraid that before next Thursday the gentleman will have another order. He reminds me of the man who asked his clerk how much money would make him happy; he said $200; the man gave it to him, and the clerk said he wished he had asked for $300. The gentleman offered one amendment to make the amount $800,000, and now has another for $500,000; and I am afraid that if it is assigned he will offer one for $300,000. If there is anything in it, let us discuss it and pass it, and if not, get rid of it.

Mr. Thompson—My amendment was for $800,000, and made it obligatory upon the corporations to pay a part of the expense; and tonight I put it in another form. I would cheerfully vote a fair sum to widen Commercial street, if we can compel the corporations and others interested to contribute a portion of the expense.

Mr. Danforth of Ward 10—A large part of the benefit of this widening will accrue to the railroads. In the original charter for the Marginal Freight Railway, there was a provision that if the street were widened, the railroad should pay for it. The present road is owned by the Old Colony and Providence railroads, who were sharp enough to get that provision repealed, although they are able to pay for it. I hope no order to widen Commercial street will pass unless there is some provision that the cost will come upon the railroad corporations or abutters.

Mr. Morrill of Ward 20—This matter has been before the Council for some weeks, and the gentleman [Mr. Flynn of Ward 13] who has been prominent in this scheme is absent. I should be very happy to vote in favor of the matter under certain circumstances, but as it stands now I would move that it be referred to the next City Government.

The motion to specially assign, which the President ruled took precedence, was lost, and the question then came upon Mr. Thompson's amendment.

Mr. Crocker of Ward 9—The amendment will put this widening into an economical shape as we can hope to find it in, and if it is effected in this way it will be done as economically as we can hope to have it. Commercial street should be widened within a few years, and the city will not allow this Atlantic avenue, 100 feet wide, to terminate in a little street of 30 feet width. It seems to me that the connection between Charlestown and the westerly part of the city must be made larger than it is. It has seemed to me that this was an expense that is sure to be incurred before long; and I have thought that if it was to be incurred we might as well have it done now and get the benefit of it. I have therefore voted for the order twice, though with great doubt in my own mind, with the necessity for economy at the present time. Still, the original order has great objections; it left the matter very loose, called for a great deal more money than is necessary, and made it a greater width than is needed. I had made up my mind that I should not vote for the order as it stood originally; but with the modified amendment it seems to me if we can get the necessary widening at the cost which that amendment contemplates, it is a desirable thing to do. I hope the order will be amended in the manner proposed, and if it is not amended I hope it will be rejected.

Mr. Day of Ward 4—I am opposed to the amendment that it states definitely on which side the street will be widened. The Street Commissioners have no plan; they simply ask for the money, and when they get it they will make their estimate and submit their plan to the Council. Instead of making a positive statement on which side the street shall be widened, I think it better to leave it to the Street Commissioners.

The amendment of Mr. Thompson was declared lost. Mr. Thompson doubted the vote, and on his motion the yeas and nays were ordered. The amendment was adopted—yeas 37, nays 23:

Yeas—Messrs. Barry, Beeching, Brintnall, Brown, Cannon, Clarke, Coe, Crocker, Cross, Doherty, Duggan, D. A. Flynn, Fraser, Ham, Hibbard, Hiscock, Kelley (Ward 3), Kelley (Ward 6), Kidney, McDonald, Mullane, O'Donnell, Pearl, Perham, Pope, Roach, Roberts, Ruffin, Sibley, Thompson, Thorndike, Vose, Warren, E. R. Webster, G. B. Webster, Wilbur, Wolcott—37.

Nays—Messrs. Barnard, Blanchard, Burke, Danforth, Day, Dee, Fagan, Felt, Howes, McClusky, McGaragle, Morrill, Mowry, Nugent, O. H. Pierce, Pratt, Reed, M. W. Richardson, Sampson, Smardon, Spenceley, Stone, Upham—23.

Absent or not voting—Messrs. Blodgett, Cox, Cross, Fernald, J. J. Flynn, Jackson, Loughlin, O'Connor, J. H. Pierce, J. B. Richardson, Shepard—11.

On motion of Mr. Fraser, the subject was specially assigned to the next meeting at eight o'clock.

PUBLIC PARKS.

The order for a transfer of $3000 from Reserved Fund to appropriation for Park Department was considered under unfinished business. It was passed in concurrence—yeas 53, nays 3—Messrs. McGaragle, Morrill and Stone voting nay.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—I am going to move to suspend the rule, that I may offer an order; and in view of the present condition of business I will state my reason for making the motion. The Park Commissioners have been engaged in bonding land on the Back Bay in compliance with the order passed some time ago. They have practically succeeded in bonding all the land except one piece of an acre; but owing to the difficulties in looking up the titles, and in making several conveyances at one time, they wish to have an order passed by which they can take lots separately. The order provided for taking not less than 100 acres. The City Solicitor decided that under that order they must take the entire 100 acres and make one draft covering the entire purchase. The City Solicitor has drawn an order which will cover the point.

Mr. Sampson of Ward 17 objected to further remarks, as there was no motion pending.

Mr. Thompson thanked Mr. Sampson for his courtesy and moved to suspend the rule that he might offer the following:

Whereas, The Park Commissioners were authorized by an order of the City Council, approved by the Mayor on the 23d day of July, 1877, to purchase not less than one hundred acres of land or flats on the Back Bay, in the city of Boston, as appears by said order; and

Whereas, The tract of land selected by the Park Commissioners is owned in parcels by a large number of persons and corporations, and it is found impracticable to complete the examinations of the titles, and pass the deeds, and complete the purchase of all said lands simultaneously; it is hereby Ordered, That the Park Commissioners be and they are hereby authorized to complete the purchase of any part or parts of the said tract upon the terms provided in the said order, at such times as they shall deem expedient.

Mr. Sampson hoped the rule would not be suspended, as it had already delayed the large amount of business on the programme.

Mr. Thompson said Mr. Sampson attended the meeting of the Park Commissioners and committee and knew the importance of the order.

Mr. Sampson had no objection to the order, but desired the regular order of business to go on.

Mr. Sibley opposed a suspension of the rule. The Council refused to suspend the rule. [The order was disposed of later in the session.]

ROXBURY CANAL.

The order for a loan of $392,000 for Roxbury Canal improvement, all moneys received to be applied for redemption, etc., of said loan, was considered under unfinished business, and was, on motion of Mr. Sibley, specially assigned to the next meeting at nine o'clock.

STONY BROOK.

Mr. Perham of Ward 23 moved to reconsider the vote whereby was rejected the order for a loan of $133,000 for improvement of Stony Brook; said order having connected with it an order for a special committee to take charge of said improvement, as therein set forth. (City Doc. No. 86.)

The reconsideration prevailed, and the question was upon the passage of the order.

Mr. Fraser of Ward 6—When this subject was before the Council I did not have light enough to vote upon it understandingly. I have since had occasion to go out there and see how the houses may be flooded during heavy rains, and shall take pleasure in voting for the order.

The order for the loan was passed in concurrence—yeas 56, nays 4:

Yeas—Messrs. Barnard, Barry, Beeching, Blanchard, Brintnall, Brown, Caunon, Clarke, Coe, Crocker, Cross, Danforth, Day, Dee, Doherty, Dugau, Fagan, Felt, D. A. Flynn, Fraser, Ham, Hibbard, Hiscock, Howes, Jackson, Kelley (Ward 3), Kelley (Ward 6), Kidney, McDonald, Mowry, Mullane, Nugent, Pearl, Perham, O. H. Pierce, Pope, Pratt, Reed, J. B. Richardson, M. W. Richardson, Roberts, Ruffin, Sampson, Sibley, Smardon, Spenceley, Stone, Thompson, Thorndike, Upham, Vose, Warren, E. R. Webster, G. B. Webster, Wilbur, Wolcott—56.

The order for the appointment of the committee to make the improvement was passed in concurrence, and the President appointed Messrs. Brown of Ward 23, Flynn of Ward 13, Pratt of Ward 21, Wilbur of Ward 20 and Thorndike of Ward 1 on said committee.

COMMON INVESTIGATION.

Mr. Howes of Ward 18 called for the special assignment, which was the consideration of the report of the joint special committee appointed to investigate and report whether or not any neglect of duty has occurred in the department of Common and Public Grounds.

The President read the proposed ordinance and amendment to the joint rules and resolution appended to the report, as follows:

Be it ordained, etc.:

When trees, plants, shrubs, flowers or evergreens are required to be used on the Common and public grounds, exceeding in value $500, the Committee on Common and Public Grounds shall advertise in two or more newspapers, during the autumn preceding the spring that they may be required, for sealed proposals for furnishing such trees, plants, shrubs, flowers or evergreens, describing as particularly as may be the quantity and quality, and the times and places of delivery. Such proposals shall be opened at a meeting of the Committee on Common and Public Grounds, and the contract shall be awarded the lowest bidder. Rule 5 of the Joint Rules and Orders of the City Council is hereby amended, by adding the following:

"And at all meetings of committees the records of the previous meeting shall be read," so that it shall read, "The joint standing committee shall cause the records of their proceedings to be kept in books provided for that purpose, and at all meetings of committees the records of the previous meeting shall be read."

Resolved, That a proper performance of the city work requires that the Superintendent of Common and Public Grounds should hire the laborers employed in his department free from the interference or suggestion of members of the City Council.

The President—These proposed orders have been read once, and it will be necessary to consider each separately. The question is first upon giving the ordinance a second reading.

Mr. Crocker of Ward 9—I would like to know if the report has been accepted.

The President—The report has not been accepted.

Mr. Crocker of Ward 9—Does not that come before the passage of the orders?

The President—It has been customary where a committee has made a report with recommendations to take action immediately upon the recommendations. If the gentleman wishes the question put upon the acceptance of the report, the Chair will put the question.

Mr. Howes of Ward 18—I trust that the question will be taken upon the acceptance of the report. The matter covers quite a large extent of ground, and by merely acting upon these several orders the committee have offered, the general discussion of the report of the committee is not admitted, and I certainly hope it may be entered into.

The President—The question, then, will be upon the acceptance of the report. Is the Council ready for the question?

Mr. Howes of Ward 18—I have understood from the chairman of the committee on the part of the Common Council that it is not his intention to do anything more than to offer this report, and therefore I have not waited for him to offer any remarks upon this subject. As I understand it, the report submitted by this committee covers four distinct points, or censures, I might say, the committee or some one in four distinct particulars; one is on the purchase of rhododendrons; another is on the hiring of laborers in a promiscuous manner; another is on not receiving a sufficient quantity of gravel, loam and other things that were supposed to be delivered around the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument; and another is on the action of the committee in not asking for an appropriation in advance of the work that they did at that point. Now, Mr. President, on three of these points the committee have failed to make any censure. The plants and rhododendrons were bought by a sub-committee, and of course as far as the entire committee is concerned they may hold themselves blameless, as the entire authority was given to the sub-committee. In the matter of employing laborers and the matter of receiving the loam and other things around the monument, these were in the hands of the superintendent, and on these particular points the committee also pass over without censure of any kind. When, however, it comes to the matter of doing the work around the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument, and not asking for an appropriation in advance, the committee are very explicit and make a singular exception in finding fault with the whole committee in that particular. It may be well to read the brief note in which they find fault. It is on page seven of their report, and is as follows:

"From the above it appears that the Committee on Common and Public Grounds have expended more money than the City Council appropriated for that department for this year. This is a serious mistake; the committee had no legal or moral right to do it, and from any standpoint it was clearly and inexcusably wrong. The joint rule of the City Council requires that—"

And the joint rule is given.

"We have already adverted to the probable manner in which the Committee on Common and Public Grounds were led into the commission of this mistake; but it was no less a mistake, and a grave one, to say the least; the blunder was in passing the limitless vote they did, 'that the Superintendent be authorized to have the necessary grading done near the grounds of the Army and Navy Monument.' Under this authorization it is fortunate that the deficiency in the appropriation is as small as it is. The only manner in which the expenditure of money could have been controlled under this vote, and kept within the bounds of the intention of the committee, was by a personal oversight, on the part of the committee, of the work being done.

"If it be answered that this was impossible, or asking too much of the committee, the reply is, then, that they should not have passed such a vote. With the limited information which the committee possessed as to the amount of grading required, they may have thought it their duty to pass the vote; but, having passed it, they should have taken the precaution to protect the city's interest by seeing to it that the amount expended did not exceed their intentions; and when it became apparent that it would require a very much larger amount of money to complete the grading around the monument than was originally contemplated, the committee should have immediately reported the fact to the City Council, and asked for an additional appropriation."

In that statement there is a reflection, as clear and distinct as it can be, upon the entire committee. Now very briefly I propose to show that from the evidence the committee must have had before them at the time they made that report, the conclusions they have arrived at are erroneous and are not sustained by the facts they have had at their command. It is not necessary for me to enter into a general statement of the case. It is pretty well known that the Committee on Common and Public Grounds held a meeting on the 28th of August and passed this vote which I have just read. At that meeting the chairman of the committee and the Superintendent, Mr. Galvin, were present. Mr. Galvin states that he thinks he was not there. In that his recollection differed from members of the committee and also from that of the Clerk of Committees, Mr. Lee, who, in this particular instance, remembers nothing that occurred except when the vote took place. Then his attention was called to the fact that a vote was being passed, and he stopped all work and waited until the vote was passed, and the recollection of that single event is photographed, as it were, upon his mind. Now, sir, in his evidence on page 233, he states, in answer to a question which I asked him, "Do you know who were present at the time?" He says, "I think the chairman, Alderman Slade, yourself, Mr. Dee and the Superintendent." That agrees with the recollection of several members of the committee. Having heard that vote passed, and having received, as it were, the instructions of the committee, Mr. Galvin went to work around the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument. He had not proceeded very far in that work before he found it necessary to enlarge on the first estimate that he had made. In his evidence on page 237 he states in answer to a question by Mr. Clark. Mr. Clark says—

"I want the committee to understand that when he came to do the work that was necessary to grade the ground around the Monument he found the whole grade of the hill had to be changed.

He has so stated, and has so stated to me before. Of course that involved a greater outlay."

"Mr. Galvin—Nobody could give any idea of the cost if he had not taken the grades before the work was commenced."

Then on the next page he says, in answer to a question put by Mr. Wilbur—

"Q.—You mean to say that after commencing the work one thing developed another, and then you could see the necessity of making this extensive grading?"

A.—That is the idea exactly; when we get twenty feet graded, where we commenced twenty feet from the monument, it was three feet lower than the walk is now. That had to be filled with rocks and gravel; and you see the grounds were in a bad condition otherwise. It would have to be done either this season or next year, and you cannot avoid it."

That shows very clearly that after Mr. Galvin had begun the work about the monument, it came over him from the small amount of work that he had done that a much larger outlay was required than he or the committee had any idea of before. Mr. Galvin admits that the highest amount that he heard mentioned by the committee was $2500, and that was withdrawn; there was no vote taken on that subject. Now Mr. Galvin, it must be conceded, by this report, knew that he was entering upon a work which the committee had not contemplated when the vote was passed. He, however, goes back to the vote and sees that he is authorized to do the necessary grading. The chairman of the committee is in precisely the same position. On page 162 of the report he says, in answer to a question by Mr. Ruffin—

"Q.—Well, was it not the general impression of a majority of the committee that it would not cost a very large sum?"

A.—Why, I have no doubt, sir, that the committee supposed that for from $500 to $1000 they could level up there and get rid of the slivers and chips; but when they got to work it was an utter impossibility, and if the members of the committee had attended to their duty as I did, they would have known what was being done, and that the labor would cost more than $500, or $1000, or $2000."

Then lower down on the page he is asked—

"Q.—* * * At some time you had the impression, generally, that it would not cost a very large sum. That general impression was changed, and you thought it would cost more. When and how was that impression changed? Was it by the action of some other committee?"

A.—No, sir. After they had commenced to do the work there, it was found that the work necessary even for the celebration could not be accomplished for anything like $500. The grading was commenced, and, if we stopped at an expenditure of $500, it would have left the grounds in a dangerous condition, even for the celebration.

"Q.—There was no discussion upon the amount to be expended after this in any committee meeting, was there?"

A.—No, sir.

"Q.—(By the Chairman). As chairman of the committee, did you keep the run of this work during its progress?"

A.—I did, sir.

"Q.—And gave directions?"

A.—I had a general knowledge of what was going on, sir; the directions were left to the Superintendent."

"Again on page 168 Mr. Clark says—

"I should say it was not contemplated at that time (that is, when the work was first begun) to spend so much money as has been spent."

Again at the top of page 169—

"Mr. Bryant—I wish to ask, Mr. Chairman, through you, if, after that instruction or vote, it became apparent that the expense was very largely exceeding what any member of the committee contemplated?"

"Alderman Clark—I do not hesitate to say that in all human probability, as I stated in the Board of Aldermen, the proper course to have taken would have been to have gone to the City Council and asked for the appropriation to do this grading before it was done; but when we had commenced to get the grounds in a safe condition, it would have caused a delay of a fortnight or three weeks before we could have got the appropriation, and I deemed it advisable to go on and complete the work and have it done. This delay would have cost the city at least a thousand dollars."

Still further on he states, on page 175—

"It was my intention to make this a very attractive spot."

Now it is pretty apparent there that both the Superintendent and the chairman of the committee were aware after the work had gone on a short time that it was going to cost more than the committee had intended to be spent there. What would ordinarily have been their duty under the circumstances, to my mind, clearly would have been to call the committee together, explain the case to them and ask for an additional appropriation, or for some definite appropriation on that subject. The Investigating Committee says, with a great deal of coolness, Yes; but the members of the committee should have gone out there and protested and stopped the work. Now that is just what the members of the committee did. They did go up there and protest against the work, and this also appears in the evidence that the Investigating Committee has gathered. Now on page 220 of the report in the statement made by Mr. Pope he says—

"I can state that shortly after (Aug. 28)—within a week—that vote was passed, I went to the committee, and saw what was done, and remonstrated with the Superintendent for the amount of work which was going on there. I saw there was a very large expense incurred. I asked him what business he had to do it, and he told me he was authorized to do it by a member of the committee. I went and saw the chairman of the committee, Mr. Clark, and remonstrated with him, and he told me he could get an appropriation through easy enough, when it was necessary to meet the expense. I told him I did not think it was a proper way; that the expense was being incurred without any appropriation; and I spoke of the motion which I made, which was not entertained, asking for two thousand five hundred dollars, as that was not necessary."

Now, the chairman of the committee, on the 5th of September at least, must have known that in the opinion of certain members of the committee, he and the Superintendent, by authorizing that work to be done around the monument, were transcending the power given by that vote. There was no question about it; and his reply on that occasion was that he could secure appropriations easily enough. Now, that was only one instance. On the 15th of September, only fifteen days later, as will appear by evidence on the same page, Mr. Pope and myself both went to Mr. Galvin, and remonstrated with him and to the chairman of the committee, and remonstrated with him on that expenditure. We also stated that Mr. Slade, who with us two constituted a majority of the committee that passed that vote, deemed that the vote had been entirely exceeded by the Superintendent in carrying out the work as he did. Mr. Clark replied at that time, just as he did before, that there was no difficulty in getting an appropriation. Now, having made this statement, it comes with very poor grace from the chairman of the committee, when asked about or charged with this fact, to lie down on the committee, as it were, and say, Here is your vote; we did nothing more than your vote authorized us to do; Mr. Galvin was perfectly right in doing just what he did. Mr. Galvin also admits on page 336 that these same remonstrances were made. The question is—

"Q.—Did you hear any of the committee remonstrate about it?"

"A.—Mr. Pope remonstrated, as he said we would have hard work getting the appropriation; and I think Mr. Howes objected at one time.

"Mr. Howes—That was after it was through.

'Alderman Clark—He made no objection until after it was through?"

"Mr. Howes—I did n't see Mr. Galvin until about the 15th of September, when it was completed.

"Mr. Galvin—It was about half completed, and you found fault, and thought the committee would have hard work getting the appropriation.

"Mr. Brown—Have you done any work there since the 17th?"

"A.—Yes, sir; a large quantity of it."

Mr. Howes's time having expired under the rule, it was extended, on motion of Mr. Beeching of Ward 1.

Mr. Howes of Ward 18—At that time, on the 15th of September, it was two days before the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument was dedicated, and I must say that I supposed the work was completely done. The men had stopped work up there, temporarily probably, and the staging was built around in such a way as to preclude any definite idea of what the work was. I did not suppose that further work would be done after the remonstrance that had been made. However, at the next meeting of the committee that was not held until the latter part of the month of September, when the committee came together at that time I made a motion that the expenses of the department be cut down to $500 per month, and that all men necessary to be discharged to curtail expenses to that amount be discharged. That vote failed to pass, and the committee with the exception of myself voted to ask for an appropriation. I merely bring this fact up to show that the committee, or certain members of the committee, did attempt to stop that work and did attempt to have the chairman ask for an appropriation before the appropriation was asked for, before the work was completed, before the work had gone to any very large extent, and probably before more than a thousand or twelve hundred dollars had been spent. It is on that account that I find fault with the report of the Investigating Committee, when they have the evidence directly before them, in making a report which includes a sweeping condemnation of the entire committee, when to my mind the entire committee are by no means to blame; and, if the blame is to fall on any one, I desire it shall fall on the shoulders where it belongs, and not in a general way upon every one in general and upon no one in particular. I do not know that I have anything more to say on this subject. There is no very good reason why the report should not be accepted, though I do not believe in this particular feature of it, and I certainly should not want it to be accepted without entering my protest on that particular point.

The chairman of the committee, Mr. Clark, on one or two occasions has seen fit to advert somewhat severely upon the want of back bone on the part of certain members of the committee—for instance, on page 162 he says that he thinks it was charged by some members of the committee not having pluck enough to go to the Common Council and ask for an additional appropriation. Now, Mr. Clark, the chairman of the committee, may go ahead and do work just as he pleases. He may go ahead and ask for an appropriation afterwards. That may be his style of doing business, but it has not been mine since I have been on the committee, and I do not wish to be included in the condemnation which charges the committee with any such fault. Probably gentlemen may know that in times past and possibly for a certain portion of this year it has been the case that the chairman of the Committee on Common and Public Grounds has run this committee. When the committee first came together this year we had a vote passed that all bills and accounts should be left with the chairman of the committee to receive his signature and be paid. But certain members of the committee found that by that vote they voted themselves out of all power; and after the first of May, when the new appropriation came in, they reconsidered that vote, and the bills were then to be approved by the committee. Since that time the chairman of the committee has taken exception, I imagine, to the action of its members in doubting, possibly, his ability to do this work; and in this particular fact in authorizing by his presence and also by the fact that he would not call a meeting of the committee or hear the protests of the members, he has taken things into his own hands, to the exclusion of the rest of the committee; and if there is any fault in this matter I would like to have it charged to the one to whom it belongs.

Mr. Crocker of Ward 9—The gentleman from Ward 18, it seems to me, has pointed out very clearly some defects in this report, but I wish to draw attention to one other matter in which it seems to me the committee did not do as I think they should have done—with regard to the loam which the city paid for and did not get. It appears that the city paid for 1863 loads of loam (page 9 of the report) at fifty cents per load, that they, so far as can be found, did not get, making due allowance for settling. Thus some 1800 loads out of 6500, somewhat more than one-quarter of the loam the city paid for, is missing. This matter does not seem to be followed up by the committee, and no suggestion is made whether they tried to find out how it happened that this nine hundred and odd dollars' worth of loam was paid for which the city did not get. It seems to me that it is a matter that might have been followed up further. I have been making some inquiries about it myself, and I find that the probable explanation of it, which I will give for the benefit of those who are interested, is that this loam being sent in there at night by cartloads, the carts were not full, but were about three-quarters full. In any other department of the City Government, when they are buying dirt they usually put a man on from the City Engineer's office to measure each load and see if it is a twenty-foot load, and in that way they make sure of getting what they pay for. But it seems, as far as I can learn, in this case the officials in charge of this matter—whether the Superintendent of the Common, or the chairman of the committee, or the committee, whoever it was,—did not take the ordinary precautions that are taken in such cases, and the loads were run in there, a great many of them, all through the night, and perhaps there was not much in a cart, and on the average the carts were not quite three-quarters full. That, it seems to me, is the explanation of that leakage, and it is one which, it seems to me, the committee ought to have looked into. Perhaps they might have found out who the man was that got the money for loam that he did not deliver to the city. I do not know as it is possible to find out who it was. It may have been mere carelessness on the part of the contractor, as well as on the part of the city. It certainly was carelessness on the part of the city not to take the precaution taken in other departments to see that the loads, which we pay fifty cents per load for, on the supposition that they contain twenty feet, did really contain that amount.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—Mr. President, the report of this committee in certain parts affects only the Committee on Common and Squares. They are perfectly capable of answering for themselves, and I think have answered pretty well tonight. But there are certain findings in this report which affect the public inasmuch as they refer to the present system under which the Common is managed, and generally approve of that system. I wish to call attention tonight to some of the evidence upon which these findings have been made; so that the public may be able to judge whether these findings are correct or not. It is a matter of public importance that our Common and squares should be managed on the best possible system. I think a very large portion of the public are of the opinion that the present system is not a good one. Now, so far as this finding of facts can have any weight in the community, they do sustain that system, and I am now going to call your attention to several points which I think the committee might and should, on the evidence, have found differently from what they did.

In the first place, in reference to the Public Garden. On page 4 of the report it is stated that—"It is estimated that to replant the Public Garden properly, with different and finer flowers and plants, would cost not less than $50,000, and that it would require $30,000 per annum to keep and maintain it. Under the present system it costs now in the neighborhood of $20,000 per annum to carry it on."

Thus assuring us and the public that the changes proposed are in the direction of greater expense than those now in use. Now that finding in regard to the cost of replanting is based upon the evidence of Mr. Harris, the gardener of Mr. Hunnewell. To show how that idea got into the minds of the committee, on page 109 you will find the following testimony:

"Mr. Ruffin—Did you say that it costs about thirty thousand dollars a year to keep Mr. Hunnewell's place going?"

"A.—Yes, sir.

"Q.—What would it cost to put the Public Garden in the same condition that you find Mr. Hunnewell's estate in today; with the same qualities of evergreens?"

"A.—It would be almost impossible to make even a rough guess.

"Q.—A large sum of money?"

"A.—But to plant it out with the large quantity of stuff we have it would cost $50,000."

There then is the idea on which they make the finding that it would cost $50,000 to replant the Public Garden. By going a little farther back, however, in the evidence of Mr. Harris upon the same page it is asked, "How extensive is Mr. Hunnewell's flower garden?" and the answer is, "We have about forty acres improved, and we have a large collection of plants that are very expensive." Now the Public Garden, so much of it as is in plants, is less than twenty acres. There are twenty-two acres in all, and part of it is covered by a pond; and so far as this statement is concerned it is that if you attempt to grow on this twenty acres the same expensive varieties of flowers which are grown on Mr. Hunnewell's forty acres, it would cost $50,000 to replant it and $30,000 to carry it on.

On page 99, Mr. French, in giving his testimony, read a letter from Professor Sargent, who, referring to the Public Garden, said—

"In my opinion the Garden should be laid out on an entirely different plan; and if planted as I suggest, six men in summer and one in winter would keep it in perfect order, and $200 would buy all the plants required."

Going further, Mr. French says—

"One of the committee asked me what I thought it would cost to make a complete change in the Public Garden, and I didn't feel that I was able to state the cost; but Mr. Sargent says that $10,000 would make all the change that is necessary in the garden.

"Alderman Clark—Mr. French, who is Professor Sargent?"

"A.—He is the professor at the Buzzey Institute, and has charge of the Harvard Arboretum."

This was the evidence before the committee of Professor Sargent, a man qualified in every way to judge, and he thought it would cost $10,000 to replant the Public Garden, and afterward it could be maintained at an annual expense of $4500. On the other hand, Mr. Harris stated that it would cost $50,000 to plant and replace the choice variety of flowers now upon the forty acres owned by Mr. Hunnewell; and he also stated it cost Mr. Hunnewell $30,000 a year to maintain his place, saying in regard to that, however, in his exact words on page 107—

"A.—Yes, sir; I have the management of the entire thing, except building the houses. I should judge it costs Mr. Hunnewell $30,000 a year to run it.

"Q.—To run his flower garden?"

"A.—Yes, sir."

Then he goes on about the extent of the garden and says, "We have a large collection of plants that are very expensive." On this evidence the committee feel justified in making the above finding. I cannot agree with them. Then the committee go on to say, "Whether the results obtained from this outlay are adequate was not made very clear by the evidence. The only comparison as to cost made was between the Public Garden and private estates. It is plain that this could be no true test." I will say that the want of evidence on this point was the fault of the committee themselves; it was ruled out.

On page 56, in the evidence of Mr. Bowditch he says—

"The point I wanted to get at is this: that although the cost of this work is high, it is no more so than a quantity of other work done on Boston Common since 1867.

"Mr. Vose—I object to the gentleman going on in this rambling style.

"The Chairman—I was just going to call the gentleman's attention to the order. The scope of the investigation is confined to the past year.

Witness—I understand from some of the testimony in the early part of the evening, and from reading the reports in the papers, that it covered several previous years. Am I wrong in that, sir?"

"The Chairman—Yes, sir. We are merely investigating the doings of the present City Government.

"Witness—I beg your pardon. Then perhaps I can condense my figures."

I can state of my own knowledge that he had with him at that time the very information that the committee now deplore they did not have before them. So pass on to another point and refer to the rhododendrons. I don't think the question of the rhododendrons was of so much importance, but still, on the evidence before them I am surprised at the finding they made. They say this, referring to rhododendrons:

"They were bought, in the usual course of business, from respectable business persons, and at no unreasonable price."

The evidence was that they paid for these plants $1.54 each, and the evidence before them was that that was an excessive price. The evidence of Mr. Francis Parkman, the president of the Agricultural Society, was that he had examined these rhododendrons and that they were of a cheap variety. I suppose that the readers of the Boston Daily Advertiser noticed in an edition of a day or two ago a letter from Professor Sargent, who had taken the shortest means of showing exactly what these rhododendrons were worth. I hold in my hand the letter published in that paper, and as all of you have not read it I will read it.

F. W. Kelsey and the Boston Rhododendrons.

To the Editors of the Boston Daily Advertiser: Recent letters from Mr. Waterer of the Knapp Hill nurseries, England, the grower of the rhododendrons furnished the city, enable me to give more exact information in regard to Mr. Kelsey's transactions in this matter, that the public investigation on the management of the public grounds has brought to light. For the 600 rhododendrons and azaleas sold to the city, Mr. Kelsey paid, including the six packing cases, £53 10s, which, on April 14 (the day the plants arrived), was worth \$278.73, exchange on that day being 488 $\frac{1}{4}$ , and gold 106 $\frac{3}{4}$ . Freight and duty to the amount of \$91.60 were paid, and for the premium on gold used to pay the duty, custom-house charges, wharfage and cartage, \$12.96, making the total cost of the plants \$383.29. For this lot of plants, which cost him only \$383.29, Mr. Kelsey received from the city \$921, or, in other words, plants for which he paid sixty-four cents, he sold to the city for \$1.54, thus making a profit of 140 per cent.

The statement so often repeated by Mr. Kelsey and his friends, that these rhododendrons were all fine, hardy, named varieties, is as impertinent as the price charged for them is exorbitant, for among them, as any one can see who knows rhododendrons, are a great many cheap, unnamed seedlings, which may or may not prove hardy, as well as several named kinds which have not yet been tested in this climate in the open ground. It would, perhaps, hardly be worth while at this late day to bring this matter up again, were it not that Mr. Kelsey has managed to obtain the indorsement of several gentlemen whose recommendations have great weight with the horticultural public, and by the aid of which he may succeed in victimizing some other simple and confident city officials.

C. S. SARGENT.

Brookline, Dec. 17, 1877.

Now, the evidence before that committee was practically to the same effect as that letter. In the face of that I do not see how they could make the finding they did. The evidence of Mr. Galvin himself was that he advised the committee not to buy of Mr. Kelsey, for they could import them cheaper from England.

Another point is their finding in regard to greenhouses, which is as follows:

"This brings us to the consideration of the question, Whether it would be wise for the city to build a greenhouse? We are compelled to say from the evidence it would not be wise. In the first place, the city has no proper place to build three greenhouses. It was shown that it would require three to raise thirty thousand plants, the quantity used by the city; and secondly, and more important, the kind and variety of plants used on the Public Garden are not worth being housed and cared for during the fall and winter months. It would be cheaper to give away or destroy the flowers after the 1st of November, than to take them up and put them away in greenhouses." Now, I say the evidence of every expert who testified, including that of John Galvin, was right to the contrary, and Mr. Galvin—and it was confirmed by the chairman of the committee—always advised them to have a greenhouse. He pulled down the old greenhouse for the very purpose of putting up a proper one. Mr. Ernest Bowditch, before the committee, stated that no more wasteful system could be adopted than to buy seven or eight thousand plants a year and destroy them every fall. He stated in his evidence on page 66—he had given some facts in regard to greenhouses, and he gives an answer at the bottom of the page:

"I can tell you what it cost to run the greenhouses for Fairmount Park, and those are very large. It cost—if you will let me look at my list here, I will tell you what it cost [referring to papers.] The maintenance of the greenhouses for propagating and preserving plants through the winter is about $2000 a year, and $3000 more for planting and maintaining flower beds; $1000 to $1500 for the maintenance of a nursery for young trees. That is sufficient for all their parks."

And they have parks of two or three thousand acres. The city paid some $8500 for plants this year, which is more than the cost for running the greenhouses and the nursery for all the public parks in the city of Philadelphia. Mr. Harris, the gardener for Mr. Hunnewell, who was called by Mr. Galvin, also testified, and testified strongly, in favor of maintaining a greenhouse, in the following testimony:

"Q.—How large and expensive a greenhouse would be required to supply the public grounds of Boston with flowers?"

"A.—You would want three greenhouses—one large one for growing this large stuff.

"Q.—How much would it cost?"

"Alderman Clark—To grow such stuff as we have?"

"Mr. Harris—I should think it would require two or three houses one hundred feet long and eleven feet wide, to grow all the stuff you want.

"Alderman Clark—We have the Public Garden, and the parks in Charlestown, South Boston and the South End.

"A.—Anybody can easily calculate what it will cost if you put out the quantity that can be raised in a greenhouse one hundred feet long by eleven feet wide.

"Mr. Galvin—If you double that quantity?"

"Alderman Clark—How much would you want for double that quantity?"

"A.—Double the amount of houses.

"Q.—How much would the houses cost?"

"A.—Such houses could be built for eight hundred dollars apiece, and three thousand two hundred dollars for one large house. I should prefer one good large house for large plants, such as foliage plants, ficuses, lantannæ, as they give effect to a place at once, and add greatly to its beauty."

Mr. Thompson's time having expired under the rule, it was extended, on motion of Mr. Mowry of Ward 11.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—That would make the total cost of the houses $4800. It was accepted by all the persons present that three houses sufficient for growing all the plants that the city of Boston would require, including a large number which the city cannot now grow, fine large plants such as might be used for educational purposes; and these houses, including all the machinery, would cost about $12,000. Now the committee find that the city has no place to put these houses. If I am right, the city has a farm—the Austin Farm in Dorchester—which would afford space for a great many greenhouses, and the Park Commissioners have already recommended that it should be used as a nursery for young trees. At Philadelphia, as appears from Mr. Bowditch's testimony, such a nursery is maintained in connection with the greenhouses which supply all the parks of that city with flowers; and the total expense—greenhouses, nursery and all—is less than the amount paid this year for flowers for the Public Garden. See page 66. Certainly, in this instance, the finding is contrary to the facts.

Now, then, there is one other finding, and that finding, I am happy to say, I believe to be thoroughly right, and it is, by the way, a finding which does not affect the City Forester, but does affect the City Council. "The manner in which laborers are procured to work on the Common and Public Garden (through the 'influence' or by the recommendation of members of the City Council) is an unqualified nuisance, and wrong." I believe that, every word of it. As a specimen of that system of employing men, I may say that after considerable trouble and digging in the monthly pay rolls of the City Forester, I prepared a table showing the manner of the employment of laborers during the present year. Now, as a matter of fact, the committee by vote restrained Mr. Galvin in the employment of men to a maximum number of 145. From April 21 to May 20 he employed an average of 166 men; from May 21 to June 20 he employed an average of 185 men. During these two months he did far exceed the maximum number allowed him by the committee. He did that, I think, unknowingly, for he came before the committee and said he was so pressed by Councilmen for employment for men that he did not know how many men he had employed, and it was probable he had exceeded the number allowed. I made a further examination of the average length of time these men were employed. By the way, he kept two forms of pay roll—a regular pay roll which contains the names of men paid off on the regular pay day. These men, during the six months I investigated, had an average employment of 181 $\frac{1}{2}$  days. He had also a discharge pay-roll for men paid off during the month for such time as they were employed. They had an average of ten days, and that was made up, as I am informed, by the men being discharged and again taken on. They were paid \$1.75 per day, and the evidence of the committee and of the City Forester himself was that a very large proportion of them were totally incompetent to perform the work. Mr. Galvin said the expense to the city was largely caused by his being obliged to employ incompetent men. He said he employed men in his own greenhouse and paid them \$1.25 per day, and you may be sure they were men competent to do his work. The city of Boston employed this great raft of men, and paid them \$1.75 per day, and got no real service from them.

One further point I wish to refer to, and that is, what is stated in regard to putting the care of the Common and public grounds into the hands of the Park Commissioners. They say, "The time will come, doubtless, when the Common and Public Garden will be under the custody and care of the Park Commissioners, and that time may not be very distant."

And they go on to say that "under chapter 185, Statutes of 1875, and the City Charter, section 39, the commission have no legal right to the custody and care of the Common; nor can the City Council give them the right until the Legislature gives them the power."

I don't see how by any construction of law the committee make that finding. In section 39 of the City Charter, to which they refer, the only reference made to the Common is that the City Council shall not sell or lease it. Well, putting it under the care of the Park Commissioners would be neither selling nor leasing it. Then they refer to the Statutes of 1875, under which the present Park Commission was appointed; that act does not say the Jail Commissioners shall not have charge of the Common and squares, and the question is, Can the City Council, in selecting the agent who is to take care of the Common and squares, select the Park Commissioners? There is nothing in the charter or in the Statutes of 1875 to prevent it, and I believe it to be merely a question of discretion on our part. All we have to do is to amend the present ordinance on parks and substitute for "joint standing committee" the words "Park Commissioners," and the thing is done. Then they have referred to the equity of putting it upon the present commission because they are unpaid. As a matter of fact the joint committee is also unpaid. The present Park Commission is composed of very public-spirited gentlemen, who are willing to give their time and attention to beautifying and adorning the city, and I think I am justified in saying that the present Park Commissioners are willing to assume the responsibility if the City Council see fit to give it to them, and if it is given to them they will do their best to do the city justice. The City Forester himself, when he was asked if he thought it would be better to have the department in the hands of a commission instead of being left with a constantly-changing committee, said he believed it was better that there should be a general system than that the whole thing should be changed with every committee that came in.

I must apologize to the Council for my lengthy remarks, but I have made them for this reason, that this committee has taken occasion to refer to the system under which the Common and squares are now managed, and with the one exception of the employment of labor they approve of it. As a general thing, they give us to understand that, leaving out the employment of labor, the management is just about as good as anybody can give us. I do not think the evidence those gentlemen had before them justified them in making that report. As a matter of courtesy to the committee I hope the report will be accepted, but after it is accepted I hope the Common and squares will be taken out of the hands of the committee and put into the hands of the Park Commissioners, believing that they will do better than has been done for the city in the past.

Mr. Ruffin of Ward 9—An investigation into the conduct of others is a disagreeable undertaking. The investigation into the conduct of gentlemen who sit in this chamber, whom we meet in our daily walks, and regard as friends and acquaintances, is especially disagreeable. To do one's duty under such circumstances—to do your duty to your friend and yourself—requires courage, patience, firmness. I believe that this committee of investigation came to the work with minds free from prejudice; that they came with a determination to find the truth wherever it may be, and to speak the truth whatever it was. It was a specially disagreeable subject to inquire into, and it came at a bad time. We all like to do pleasant things for our neighbors when we can; but to investigate a matter wherein the public, and probably gentlemen in this chamber, expected revelations of a disagreeable kind, and after serious charges were made on this floor against the head of a department and a certain committee, was a duty from which I should have shrunk. The Chair chose to assign me as one of the members of the committee, and I went to the work with the idea of searching for the facts as best I knew how, finding them, and reporting them to the City Council. The suspicions were not confined to this chamber. The chief witness came fresh from the market house, and said the Department of Common and Squares was more corrupt than anything in this country; more corrupt than anything in New York; that persons paid by the city worked for private individuals; and he asked for more time to make his revelations. All this prepared the committee for startling revelations. We had to go into this matter as squarely as we could. The first thing the committee did was to give a public hearing. We advertised in the newspapers that everybody who had information to give could come; and we held meetings as long as people would come and testify of anything that they knew. On the one side, the gentlemen of the committee will claim that we do them injustice; on the other, gentlemen outside will say it is a whitewashing report, and that we attempted to sustain those whom we ought not to sustain. Hence you will see that it was a difficult duty to perform. The committee did not know anything to which they could direct attention, except these vague suspicions and remarks, just as we have said, of the man who came fresh from the market. We invited that man to come again and bear out those facts and assertions. Strange to say he never came again. Hence Mr. Daniel O'Brien's testimony went for naught; and that is the way with a great deal of the testimony in the newspapers and on the streets. I won't indulge in stating what the committee did, but will come to some remarks made here tonight. The first is, that the committee in saying that the prices paid for azaleas and rhododendrons were not unreasonable, is not borne out by the facts. Now, we had to decide this case upon the testimony. None of us knew anything about arboriculture or floriculture. We had these witnesses, and from the testimony before us—and everybody had an opportunity to come—and so we had to decide the case. The chief testimony showing that this was an exorbitant price came from Professor Parkman, who said he had walked across the Public Garden at times and saw the rhododendrons there; that they were of a mixed quality and of an inferior grade. He did not see all the rhododendrons. Somebody asked him if he had seen those planted around the Old Elm, and he said no, but he had seen those on the Public Garden, and they were of an inferior quality. Although Professor Parkman is a scientific man, on his cross-examination he said he had not bought any for two or three or four years. Mr. Bowditch, a landscape gardener, came to sustain a different proposition. To show that we were paying too much for gravel and loam, and that the cost of running the Public Garden for the past five years had been exorbitant. He had tabular statements on that point, but we thought that under the order we had not authority to go into any neglect for the past five years, as there are gentlemen who have not been on the committee before this year, and were not responsible for any previous neglect. We said, if he had anything to say against the committee of this year, we should be happy to hear him. Mr. Bowditch only claimed to be a landscape gardener, and we did not think him a competent witness on the point he came to establish. He did not know how much the price of loam and chips differed here in Boston. He made a statement that chips and gravel cost about the same, while other witnesses showed that stone chips cost twice as much as gravel. Mr. French, who is a fancy gardener up in New Hampshire—and the chairman of the Committee on Common attempted to show that he had a milk farm—showed that he bought rhododendrons for eighty cents apiece. Now, opposed to these was Mr. Taylor, who is in the flower business and is a thoroughly competent man from all appearances. His testimony was—

"Mr. Taylor—As I have a nursery, and import a great many rhododendrons, I would like to ask Mr. French what kind those were that he could sell for eighty cents each—if they had flower buds on them?"

"Mr. French—I am not in the business and cannot—"

"Mr. Taylor—Did they have flower buds on them?"

"Mr. French—Yes, sir."

"Mr. Taylor—Did you pay duty on them?"

"Mr. French—Yes, sir; and it was outrageous; twenty per cent."

"Mr. Taylor—And you say five or six buds were on each plant?"

"Mr. French—I did n't calculate them. Some might have three or four, and some five or six."

"Mr. Taylor—I should doubt your word."

"Mr. French—I don't know but you would; most of the plants had buds on them, and some might have had five or six."

"Mr. Taylor—They were not such plants as I could sell to my customers."

He was questioned as to the price.

"Q.—You say you have been in the habit of importing rhododendrons?"

"A.—Yes, sir."

"Q.—What do they cost you to import them?"

"A.—They cost me hard on to $1 each, and I take the risk at that. Such plants as I saw on the Common cost about $1.50. I saw some of those plants on the Common, and I thought they were good plants."

That is the substance of his testimony. He amplified that, but it is not necessary to read any more. He said he had imported a great many rhododendrons. He was a thoroughly competent, practical man, and that is his testimony. Then Mr. Dee, a member of the committee, was called. He is interested in the flower business. He was not on the committee on rhododendrons, as I understand. His testimony was:

"Q.—You saw the rhododendrons on the Public Garden?"

"A.—Yes, sir."

"Q.—Was the price paid a fair one?"

"A.—I have sold rhododendrons such as these, and paid more for them; I have seen plants sold at Covent Garden for five shillings apiece that would n't compare with these. I have asked other gentlemen in the business, and they thought they were cheap enough."

Then Mr. Harris said—

Mr. Smardon of Ward 10—I would like to interrupt the gentleman. Mr. Dee was on the sub-committee on rhododendrons.

Mr. Ruffin—I stand corrected. I had forgotten that fact. Then Mr. Harris, who has charge of Mr. Hunnewell's estate, who seemed to know the subject from beginning to end, testified—Mr. French had previously testified that he paid eighty cents for rhododendrons—

"Q.—What do you think of rhododendrons at eighty cents apiece?"

"A.—A miscellaneous lot can be bought for that price; but if you are to have choice named varieties, with scarlet blossoms, you have got to pay high as from two-and-sixpence to five-and-sixpence a plant for them."

He has testified at other times that the price of flowers of that class is about five shillings. Then Mr. Kelsey himself was called, and he made a statement as to what he sold the city.

"Q.—What varieties were there?"

"A.—The Everestianum, Charles Dickens, Album Grande de Florum, the Album Elegans, I think, and I think the Roseam Elegans and Roseam Superbum. I could not give the names of all without referring to the memorandum; my impression is that these eight or nine of the best named varieties, I believe there were [turning to Mr. Galvin]."

And Mr. Galvin said that was correct. Now Mr. Kelsey brought his catalogue of prices with him. While I am on this point I will say that it was unanimously admitted before the committee that Mr. Kelsey was a respectable business man; the gentleman from Ward 18 thinks that himself. He has a large business and sells to Mr. Hunnewell, and to the cemeteries in large cities, and he came with letters of recommendation from the best citizens in and around Boston. In his catalogue he describes the prices set forth:

"The named varieties, from one and a half to two and a half feet, are twenty dollars a dozen and one hundred and fifty dollars per hundred. Seedlings are down at six dollars a dozen and fifty dollars a hundred. Specimen plants are three dollars each and upward."

He stated that the rhododendrons which he sold the city were from two and a half to three feet high, and had ten to twelve buds upon them. Upon that state of facts before the committee we had to find just what we did. In the report of the committee we have said that the city could and ought hereafter to import these plants direct, and save the premium; but we did not believe that the city paid an unreasonable price.

Mr. Ruffin's time having expired, on motion of Mr. Pratt it was extended.

Mr. Ruffin—I believe the city paid fully enough for these rhododendrons, as it does for every article it buys. If we get a man to whitewash the basement of this building, the city will pay more than a private individual would. I believe it a rule that when a man does anything for the city he will get the full market price. I believe Mr. Kelsey got the full market price. It was shown that the same kind of articles were purchased from persons in this neighborhood for the same price; but I will not dwell long upon that point. I was going to say something about the remarks made by the gentleman from Ward 18 about the grading around the monument. In arriving at the conclusion we did about the grading around the monument we had to observe the same rule. Of course we did n't count our witnesses; we weighed them. But I believe we reported them correctly. No one except Councilman Pope—excuse me for calling his name—said positively they did not pass any vote such as we find recorded. The gentleman from Ward 18 himself, although he put it in an equivocal way, did not deny squarely that that vote was passed. This is Mr. Howes's testimony:

"Q.—Do you remember what vote was passed at that meeting?"

"A.—I would n't swear that any vote was passed at all."

"Q.—Do you say this record of the vote is incorrect?"

"A.—I say it embodies only a portion of the fact."

"Q.—It is incorrect to that extent?"

"A.—Yes, sir."

"Q.—What other portion was there to it?"

"A.—The other portion was that the expense was to be about five hundred dollars."

"Q.—Was there a vote to that effect?"

"A.—I don't know that there was a vote to that effect."

"Q.—Was there a vote to any effect as to grading in and around the monument?"

"A.—I am not prepared to say that there was; but it is the natural inference that there was a vote to that effect."

"Q.—Not an inference; but what was voted?"

"A.—I don't remember the taking of the vote at all, but I think likely a vote was taken."

That is the testimony of the gentleman from Ward 18. Mr. Slade was probably in the same state of mind that the gentleman from Ward 18 was. Here are three witnesses, Alderman Slade, Mr. Pope and the gentleman from Ward 18, who seem to think that this vote was not passed. Opposed to them is the positive statement of Alderman Clark, who ought to know what he had in his own mind. Councilman Dee was also positive about it. Mr. Lee the clerk of committees remembered it; he was not in his official capacity at that time, but overheard the conversation when the vote passed. When you add to that the assistant clerk himself, who took the minutes at the time, the evidence is overwhelming on that point. Here is the positive testimony of four gentlemen against the partial denial made by three. It is claimed that we are too severe upon one point, the spending of more money than was appropriated. I felt that that was the gravest thing in the whole matter. Individually I considered that that was the important matter before the committee. I considered it a gross offence, a matter that should be carefully guarded. For a committee to spend more money than they have, and exceed their appropriation, is doing something they have no right to do. Once admit that a committee has license to spend more money than they have a right to spend, and what is the use of having a Government? What is the use of passing an appropriation bill? When gentlemen on a committee take it upon themselves to exceed an appropriation without authority, we should take action to rebuke it, and it should be condemned in the severest terms. That is the reason so much time and space is given to that part of the subject. The gentleman from Ward 9 has said something about replanting the Public Garden, and the mistake the committee have made in saying it will cost the amount of money which they state. There were two classes of gentlemen before the committee. There was a scientific class—theorists probably, and gentlemen of fine taste—and another of ordinary practical people of not such refined taste. When Mr. French came before the committee he clearly had in his mind the idea that the Public Garden should be replanted; and when he said replanted he meant reorganization of the whole thing. He said it looked as if the flowers had been planted in the dark by the light of a lantern, and it looked as if it had been planted on top of a tombstone; that the principle was wrong; that it wanted to have a complete revolution; he wanted something of a winter garden, with evergreens, and something that would be pleasant to the eye even in winter. Mr. Bowditch's idea, as I understood, was that the plants on the Public Garden were of a cheap kind; that they were not worthy of Boston. I could see that they wanted an entire revolution; they had in their minds other estates, comparing it with Mr. Hunnewell's and others. It is a different system. I put the question to Mr. Harris—Mr. Hunnewell's gardener—what it would cost to put the Public Garden in the same condition that Mr. Hunnewell's estate is, and he said $50,000 would not do it. I put the question in his mouth and he said it could not be done.

Mr. Thompson—Will the gentleman read on page 159?

Mr. Ruffin (reading)—

“Q.—What would it cost to put the Public Garden in the same condition that you find Mr. Hunnewell's estate in today, with the same qualities of evergreens?”

“A.—It would be almost impossible to make even a rough guess.

“Q.—A large sum of money?”

“A.—But to plant it out with the large quantity of stuff we have it would cost $50,000.

“Q.—Would $50,000 do it?”

“A.—It would not give you the varieties of evergreens and rhododendrons we have.

It is necessary to recollect that Mr. Hunnewell has a large place of several hundred acres, and that the Public Garden is only a small place. It does not make any difference about the size of a place. Mr. Harris went on to state that to buy some rhododendrons might cost two guineas apiece. It is not the size of a shop on Washington street, but the quality of goods in it. A man might put thousands of dollars in his vest pocket in diamonds. You might put thousands of dollars' worth of plants in a small plot on the Public Garden. It is not the size of the place, but the quality of the plants; and I think the committee were right in stating that point. If you want to get rid of what is now called the rubbish on the Public Garden, if you want tropical and other expensive plants, you can make it as expensive as you want to, and spend a great deal more than has been mentioned here tonight. The committee were supported by Mr. Harris, who is competent authority, in stating that it will cost more than $50,000 to make the change; but whether it will cost $30,000 to keep it up or not, I am not so positive from the manner in which Mr. Harris put it; but you might spend $30,000 annually if it was laid out as these gentlemen would have it. The Public Garden may not be laid out to meet the taste of some gentlemen; but it meets the wants of the average citizen. We did not find that it cost more to keep it up than it ought to. We had no power to force witnesses before us. The criticism was made in the Globe this morning that we had been paying too much for this cheaper grade of flowers bought of Galvin Brothers; that we had not made any comparison of prices, and did not determine whether we were paying too much or too little. We did all we could. We opened our doors and asked witnesses to come in and testify about those things. If they had chosen to come they could have done so; but they did not. I will, however, tell the gentlemen what we did. The other members of the committee and myself felt the necessity of getting more information about the cost of cheap flowers. When Mr. Kelsey had gone to his dinner, I said to the committee, “Let us get more information upon this point.” We sent the City Messenger to two prominent florists, Mr. Spooner, who keeps under the Tremont House, and Mr. Calder, at the Hotel Boylston. One of them said he was in the business himself; it was a delicate point, and he did not think it right for him to come; the other said he had very many friends on the committee, and he did not know whether he knew anything which would be of any service to them. We could not get them to come, and we had to close our report with just the information we had. We could not make up our report on the statements of gentlemen who might have been there; but we had to make it up on the evidence before us. In regard to the greenhouse, I think the point is clearly established that it would not pay for us to have a greenhouse. If we are going to carry on the Public Garden on the same principle that Mr. Hunnewell and other gentlemen carry on their estates, we ought to have a greenhouse; but if we are going to have a cheap thing, it would not pay to go to the expense of having a place for housing 30,000 plants. If we want fine tropical plants, if we want large evergreens, we must have a greenhouse. But the testimony before us clearly showed that upon the system on which the Public Garden is carried on now it is better and cheaper for the city to give the flowers away to the boys after November and buy new ones in the spring than to build greenhouses to keep them in over winter; the cheaper variety of flowers are not worth the keeping. We have made a recommendation to remedy the difficulty, and that is in regard to the purchasing of plants. It was shown in the evidence that there was only one firm in this vicinity who could furnish as many plants as the city wants in the spring, strange to say. The reason was they did not know that anybody would want to buy that number. The committee recommend that the florists shall have due warning, so that more than one firm shall have a chance to sell to the city; that you shall say in the fall how many flowers you want in the spring. Then we shall have competition. We say that is the practical remedy for this. The flowers were bought from Galvin Bros., sons of the Superintendent. All the testimony we could get was, that the price paid was not an unreasonable price, and we had to say so. On the point of putting the Public Garden under the care of the Park Commission, it is not a matter of great consequence. I am in favor of it, and hope it will soon be done; but I still see the same difficulty I did when the report was drafted. I don't believe we can delegate any more power to the Park Commissioners than is delegated in the act. The power now exercised by the Committee on Common is the power of the City Government. I hope the time will come when the Park Commissioners will have this department under their charge. But we make another recommendation. We believe that for some years much trouble can be obviated by letting out the keeping of some of these parks. It has worked very well. Union Park is put out at $1500 a year, and is well taken care of. We think that system might be carried still further, and further experiments made until we have further legislation. We do not say there are no wrongs to be righted, or that everything has gone smoothly. Even in the matter of loam, what more could we have said than we have? We have found the fact, and cannot say anything more. The city has paid for an article that has not been delivered; but how, or why, we cannot say. We could not push the inquiry any further. We probed the witnesses as far as we could. My opinion is the same as that of the gentleman from Ward 9, that the carts were not full. We could not report in any other way. We have attempted to gloss over nothing; but I believe we have reported the finds correctly, and I don't see how the committee could have found anything else. We ask your attention to the passage of the order proposed; to the reference of the proposed ordinance to the committee, and to the amendment to the joint rules. We think that will remedy some of the defects. In the matter of hiring the laborers we have spoken in a pronounced manner. Some revelations were made which we have not reported. We had before us the books of the superintendent, in which he had charged every member of the City Government with the men employed on the public grounds. We found all the names of the members of the City Government. At first it was thought best to publish all of that, but I thought otherwise, and we finally concluded it would only excite public curiosity. We condemn the system, and say the best thing is to abolish it, and let the man who is to use the men, and has control of them, have the hiring of them, and be directly responsible for them, for we think the city will get better men and better work.

Mr. Howes—How could the Investigating Committee hold the Committee on Common responsible for the expenditure around the monument, when the evidence was that members of the committee protested against it?

Mr. Ruffin It was impossible for us to inquire into the individual action of members of the committee. We took the action of the committee as a whole, as we found it. We found they passed a vote which was very irregular. We found it on the books, and under it this expenditure was made. We could make no distinction between the members of the committee. Some of the members of the committee remonstrated; but it was the 15th of September, the money had been spent, and the great celebration was to be two days after. It seems to me that any intelligent action to stop this expenditure of money ought to have taken place before that. But the point is that the committee passed a vote, and under it the amount was spent. It appears that Mr. Howes was in the country some of the time; that was his misfortune. We must take the action of the committee as a whole.

Mr. Pope of Ward 14—The remonstrance was made on the 5th of September, when I asked Mr. Galvin that question, and he said it was less than a week after the work began. It was four or five days after the vote was passed, and I contend that it was not right for the Investigating Committee to find fault with the whole committee when the chairman does not see fit to call them together.

Mr. Howes—The evidence stated by the last gentleman is in print on page 220. He stated that he remonstrated within a week of the time that vote was passed.

Mr. Thompson.—It is important that the fact in regard to the cost of replanting the Public Garden be made to appear clearly. The chairman has stated that there were two classes of witnesses; that he weighed the witnesses, but did not count them. He spoke of one class as theorists, and another as practical men. He referred to a statement of Professor Sargent, and in reply to a question, Mr. Harris, one of the practical men alluded to, said—

"In reply to that remark of yours I think that few young men in this country have done so much in this matter as Mr. Charles Sargent. His place has been wonderfully improved since he returned from Europe, no doubt; I am satisfied that this young man has done wonders. Mr. Hunnewell and myself were talking with Mr. Tailby a very short time ago, and he said there were few men that were closer observers of things generally than Mr. Sargent; whenever he entered a house, or whenever he entered grounds, his eye caught everything at a glance; and when a man is possessed of such a wonderful faculty as that he certainly must possess an extraordinary amount of genius."

That was the opinion of one very practical man, who recommended the relaying out of the Public Garden. That this was the idea of Mr. Harris himself will be found by looking at page 117. In reply to a question by Mr. Wilbur—

Q.—In the first part of your remarks you stated that the Garden ought to be laid out anew.

A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—What change would you recommend?

A.—Well, sir, that would be a subject that would be almost exhaustless for me to try to go into.

Mr. Ruffin—He says it would cost $50,000.

Mr. Harris—It is not, today, what is considered the modern style of gardening. You want more grass there, a great deal, than you have, I think.

Q.—(By Mr. Wilbur)—Do you think there are too many plants?

A.—I think there are too many shrubs. You want more grass, and some grand terraces, twenty feet in width, for a ladies' promenade, with a ribbon from end to end, made probably not less than ten or fifteen feet in width; then you would have something to look at.

Now this idea of $50,000 in the mind of Mr. Harris was connected with something entirely different from what the gentleman refers to, and I want to call your attention to page 109 of the report, where, in a discussion with Mr. Ruffin, he said it would cost $50,000:

A.—It would not give you the varieties of evergreens and rhododendrons we have. You must be aware that we have evergreens and rhododendrons in that place fifteen to twenty feet, and $1000 would not buy them."

Then he adds, "You can buy little plants for about one dollar each plant, a foot high. But when you come to take them eight feet through and ten feet high, you can imagine what such plants would be worth, and we have any quantity of such plants on the grounds."

The idea in his mind was that if you were going to transfer Mr. Hunnewell's grounds to the Public Garden, and not to make simply a change.

At the suggestion of Mr. Fraser the roll was called to see if a quorum was present, with the following result.

Present—Messrs. Barnard, Beeching, Blodgett, Brintuall, Brown, Burke, Clarke, Coe, Crocker, Danforth, Day, Doherty, Felt, D. A. Flynn, Fraser, Ham, Howes, Jackson, Kelley (Ward 3), Kelley (Ward 6), McClusky, McDonald, Morrill, Mowry, O. H. Pierce, Pratt, Reed, J. B. Richardson, Roberts, Ruffin, Sampson, Sibley, Smardon, Spenceley, Thompson, Thorndike, Upham, Vose, G. B. Webster, Wilbur, Wolcott—41.

Absent—Mes-srs. Barry, Blanchard, Cannon, Cox, Cross, Dee, Duggan, Fagan, Fernald, J. J. Flynn, Hibbard, Hiscock, Kidney, Loughlin, McGaragle, Mullane, Nugent, O'Connor, O'Donnell, Pearl, Perham, J. H. Pierce, Pope, M. W. Richard-sou, Roach, Shepard, Souther, Stone, Warren, E. R. Webster—30.

Mr. Webster of Ward 3—I should like to say a word, perhaps, in the way of personal explanation. As I had the honor to offer the order for this investigation, it might be expected that I would take some part in the criticism. The reason I did not do so is that Mr. Galvin and myself had quite a serious misunderstanding, and it is quite well known that we are not friends; and any remarks I might make might be construed as resulting from personal feeling. Feeling that that might have a semblance of truth, I think it advisable and in good taste not to take part in the discussion.

The proposed ordinance was referred to the Committee on Ordinances; the order to amend the Committee on Joint Rules, and the resolve, was read a second time and passed. Sent up.

PUBLIC PARKS.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9 submitted, as a report from the Joint Special Committee on Parks, the order read by him earlier in the session.

Mr. Stone of Ward 3 said he received at two o'clock a notice of this meeting at three, but having a previous committee engagement to visit the smallpox hospital he could not attend. He moved to lay on the table, that they all may obtain full information.

Mr. Thompson said the special meeting was called at the request of the Mayor and the Park Commissioners. He received his notice about 2.30, and made it convenient to give up other business to attend. The Mayor and the commissioners explained the necessity for passing the order at once; and the words of the order explain the City Solicitor's opinion better than the speaker could. The commissioners are buying from a great many different parties, and the titles are difficult to search on account of the vagueness with which some of them are given. The period in which all the deeds could be actually passed may extend over some length of time, but in most cases it can be done at once, and under the strict construction of the order given by the City Solicitor, the commissioners would have to wait until all the titles were passed. They have not only obtained the land at ten cents a foot, but they have induced the Boston Water Power Company to give the land for the extension of Commonwealth avenue and Boylston street, which the Street Commissioners expected to take and pay for; and the same deed which conveys the land for the park will convey the land for Commonwealth avenue and Boylston street, and the lands through which a portion of the great sewer will pass, and without the city paying a cent for it. The Park Commissioners have managed it with great zeal and ability, and they say, Take off those restrictions and we will do the business for you.

Mr. Stone said there seemed to be a desire to rush the thing through, and as a week's time would not hurt it, he hoped it would lie over.

Mr. Thompson said the reason for hurry is that the Solicitor's opinion was obtained today; the Water Power Company had come up prepared to pass the deeds, when the question was raised and decided by the City Solicitor that they could not pay them until they go through with the other questions that they have to settle.

Mr. McGaragle of Ward 8 thought that as they had to get all the land, whether the Commissioners did not want to commit the city to an eighty-acre park at ten cents a foot, and the rest at more than that.

Mr. Sampson said he was well known to be opposed to parks. The Committee on Improved Sewerage had met the commissioners, and Mr. Thompson's explanation is correct. There can be no objection to the order.

Mr. McGaragle said his point was that the commissioners must get control of 100 acres before they can use any of this money, and they may commit the city to an eighty-acre park where 100 acres were intended.

The motion to table was lost. The order was read a second time and passed.

PUBLIC LANDS.

Mr. Clarke of Ward 22 submitted a report from the Joint Committee on Public Lands that there has been an execution against the city paid by the City Treasurer, amounting to $10,638.84, rendered in the Superior Court for land damages on the Northampton-street District, and there is a deficiency in the appropriation to meet the same. To pay said sum and to provide for the necessary expenses on said district, an appropriation of $12,000 is required.

Referred to Committee on Finance. Sent down.

ORDINANCES.

Mr. Crocker of Ward 9 submitted the following from the Joint Committee on Ordinances:

Storage of Ashes. Report on the order in relation to the regulation that the storage of ashes by the Health Department be transferred to the Health Department—that the order appears to have originated in the idea that the enforcement of the regulations relative to the storage of ashes was exclusively the duty of the Health Department; but the committee consider that the section is classified in the ordinances under the head of "Health" merely as a matter of convenience, and that any department or any citizen may properly enter complaint for its non-observance. They are therefore of the opinion that it is inexpedient to amend the section. Accepted. Sent down.

Examination of Bills, Records, etc. Report on proposed amendment to ordinance in relation to finance, recommending the passage of the following:

An Ordinance

In relation to the Records of Public Institutions and Departments.

Be it ordained, etc.

Section 1. The records and vouchers and files of the various departments and institutions of the City Government shall at all times, during business hours, be open to public inspection and examination, and any citizen may take copies thereof; provided, however, that the records of committees of the City Government and the medical records of the City Hospital, shall not be open to such inspection and examination unless by vote of the City Council, or in case of the records of a committee, by vote of the committee.

Sect. 2. The ordinance in relation to the records of public institutions and departments, printed on page 659 of the Revised Ordinances of the year 1876, is hereby repealed.

Ordered to a second reading.

Location of Telegraph Wires. Report on order proposing to require all telegraph wires stretched across streets shall be placed in such a manner as will not interfere with the elevation of ladders in case of fire. That in their opinion the subject is not a proper one to be regulated by ordinance, for the reason that the Board of Aldermen, under the provisions of section 2, chapter 457, acts of 1867, has the power to make such regulations in regard to telegraph wires as may be made by law, and that no further action is necessary. Accepted. Sent up.

SOLDIERS' MONUMENT.

Mr. Sampson of Ward 17 submitted the following:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the petition of Martin Milmore to be paid for extra labor performed and materials furnished in the erection of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument, having considered the subject, beg leave to submit the following report:

The principal items of Mr. Milmore's claim are based upon the fact that certain changes were made in the monument after the contract was executed, by reason of which he was put to considerable extra expense. These changes were made with the consent and approval of the committee which, for the time being, had charge of the erection of the monument.

The contract with Mr. Milmore left it, in a great measure, discretionary with him to carry out the details of the work. The general plan was outlined, but, in a work of art, like the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument, it was impossible to specify the details with that strictness and accuracy which would be followed were a building to be erected, and, therefore, much was necessarily left to the taste and judgment of the artist. Mr. Milmore appears to have interpreted his contract in the broadest spirit possible, and, while adhering to the general plan, which was indicated when the contract was made, to have felt it a duty to incorporate such new ideas and improvements as might suggest themselves as the work progressed, sparing nothing which would add to the beauty or durability of the monument, and leaving the matter of compensation for future consideration. An important and expensive change was made in the material for the statues and basso-relievos; but, at an early stage of the work, Mr. Milmore became convinced that neither granite nor marble would be satisfactory, and therefore asked permission to substitute bronze. By the advice of competent judges permission was granted, and the change is admitted to have added greatly to the beauty and durability of the monument. The difference in expense was considerable and forms one of the principal items of Mr. Milmore's claim. It also appears that Mr. Milmore was subjected to considerable extra expense in laying the corner stone, and in erecting certain portions of the monument before he was prepared to carry the work forward to completion. This was done at the solicitation of the committees in charge of the work, although not called for by the contract. In order to do it portions of the stone work were placed in position in an incomplete condition, and had to be finished on the ground, at a considerable greater expense than would have been the case if the work had been done at the quarry.

The foundation, which was built before the contract was made with Mr. Milmore, was found to be insufficient, and he was compelled to rebuild parts of it in order to properly support the monument. This was not known to be necessary at the time the contract was made. In the opinion of the committee Mr. Milmore has delivered to the city a monument which is superior in many respects to what was contemplated when the contract was executed, and they consider that he is justly entitled to be compensated for the extra work which he has performed. They would, therefore, respectfully recommend the passage of the following order.

For the Committee,

EUGENE H. SAMPSON.

Ordered, That there be allowed and paid to Martin Milmore the sum of $3100 in compensation for extra work performed and materials furnished in the erection of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument.

Ordered to a second reading.

THE COMMAND AT FIRES.

The Committee on Ordinances, to whom was referred a proposed ordinance to amend an ordinance in relation to the Fire Department, having examined the subject, would report as follows:

The proposed amendment was explained by its mover as intended to do away with a supposed conflict in the statutes and ordinances as to the officer or officers of the Fire Department upon whom rests the supreme authority and control during the progress of a fire.

The committee has been unable to discover that any such conflict exists.

The City Council of Boston is empowered by statute to establish a Fire Department in such manner as they deem proper, and in general to make such regulations in regard to the management and conduct of fires and persons attending at fires as they shall deem expedient. [Acts of 1850, chap. 262.] This power has been exercised by the City Council, and by ordinance the Board of Fire Commissioners are required to make rules for the government of all other officers and members of the department, and the duty of extinguishing fires and protecting life and property in case of fire is intrusted to the said Board of Commissioners. From this it is evident that, save in one particular to be noticed below, the power and authority of the commissioners are supreme during the progress of a fire as at other times (see opinion of the City Solicitor, Record of Proceedings of City Council, 1877, page 408). By act passed April 16, 1873, it was provided that the Engineer of a fire department in command at a fire shall, to the exclusion of all other persons, have the power to direct the pulling down or demolishing houses, etc., in order to prevent the further spreading of the fire. This act, having been accepted by the City Council, appears to constitute an exception, and the only exception, to the otherwise supreme authority of the commissioners. The wisdom of placing even this limit to the power of the commissioners is not apparent, and may be doubted. To restrict their authority still further appears to the committee injudicious. That the authority of the commissioners, at other times supreme and unquestioned, should cease on the first stroke of the alarm bell—and that, during the progress of a fire, however great the emergency, or however incompetent or disabled might be their subordinates, they, the heads of the department, must look on without issuing an order—appears to the committee an absurdity. In such a case, division of authority generally leads to division of responsibility, and in this department it is especially desirable that the responsibility for any failure or neglect should be directly and clearly traceable to its source. The presence at a fire of the commissioners, and their assumption of command, would probably be of rare occurrence, and only in cases of great emergency. In their absence the Chief Engineer alone is responsible, and his power is supreme; but the moment that the heads of the department appear upon the scene, and assume command, the responsibility for what is done shifts to them.

Even were the proposed change deemed desirable, it is the opinion of the committee that the verbal amendment proposed would be inoperative; "To provide for the extinguishing of fires, etc.," would certainly not exclude issuing orders upon the spot during the progress of a fire. To accomplish the end intended by this amendment would require a more full and explicit form of words. As, however, this object is not recommended, no substitute for the proposed amendment is here offered. The committee would respectfully report that in their opinion the proposed amendment ought not to pass.

For the committee,

ROGER WOLCOTT.

Accepted. Sent up.

PARK ON MT. BELLEVUE.

Mr. Thompson submitted the following:

The Joint Special Committee on Parks to whom was referred the offer of William B. Blakemore to deed to the city of Boston a tract of land situated on Mt. Bellevue for the purpose of a public park, having considered the subject and examined the lot in question, respectfully recommend the passage of the accompanying orders:

Ordered, That the offer of William B. Blakemore to deed to the city of Boston a tract of land situated on Mt. Bellevue in the West Roxbury District, and containing 27,772 square feet, for the purpose of a public park, be and the same is hereby accepted.

Ordered, That the thanks of the City Council be and the same are hereby tendered to William B. Blakemore, Esq., for his public spirit and generosity in donating to the city of Boston a lot of land for a public park.

In reply to questions by Mr. Clarke, Mr. Thompson said there was a public way leading up to the hill to the park.

Mr. Crocker said there may be a question about the generosity of this gentleman, who, having already laid out a park, might have given it to the city to avoid spending money upon it himself.

Mr. Thompson thought the criticism hardly a fair one. It has always been an understanding with his neighbors that this land shall be kept open to the public. People go there to view the surrounding country. The view is superb. When he sold the land it was with the idea that this should be given to the city.

The orders were read twice and passed. Sent up.

THE ANNUAL DINNER OF THE COUNCIL.

Mr. Crocker of Ward 9 offered the following:

Resolved, That it is advisable to omit the annual dinner of the Common Council at the close of the present year.

Mr. Crocker—I thought I would say just a few words in explanation of my purposes in offering this order. Considering the public feeling this year in relation to junketing, and the manner in which all expenses incurred for such purposes have been found fault with, I think it is expedient for us to omit the public dinner which we have had for years past. I have attended the dinners of previous years. Perhaps I might have been wiser to have stayed away. Last year the expense of the dinner was some $700, and in these days economy even in small matters is to be regarded. I think we shall save credit for ourselves and money for the city by passing this resolve.

Mr. Pratt of Ward 21—It is pretty well understood that I, as often as any one, have this year opposed unnecessary expenses for refreshments. But I fail to see the propriety of passing the resolution. Very many of us will soon turn our unwilling steps away from this hall to the more quiet and private walks of life. I think it would be mutually grateful to each one of us to have one occasion when we shall not be oppressed by the demands of public business; when we might meet and be social in a generous and friendly meeting before we separate for the year. Although this custom may have been abused sometimes in the past, it is honored by long use, and is more in the nature of a privilege to the President of this Council than anything else. Considering that this Council has not been very extravagant in the matter of excursions and expenditures for the mutual pleasure and comfort of its members, I see no reason why we should now take away from our President the usual and customary privilege of inviting us to a dinner. I do not think it is necessary, and I am certainly not prepared to make any extended remarks to the spirit of the resolve, to which I have no opposition. I hope the gentleman will not press it. It is a matter which should be left to the judgment of the President of the Council. While I do not propose to take any back tracks in regard to extravagant eating and drinking, I shall vote against the resolve.

Mr. Danforth of Ward 10—While I should certainly dislike to deprive the President of any privileges, I hope the resolution will pass. I think we can save the money of the city by it.

Mr. Crocker—I can only say, in reply to the gentleman from Ward 21—who suggests that this is abridging the privileges of the President,—that the resolve is offered in no spirit of that sort. The President was notified of my intention to offer the resolution and expressed his wish that the Council should state whether they desired the supper or not; that it was a discretion he did not wish to take the responsibility of, and he hoped the Council would express its wishes on the subject. My idea is that we should express our desire not to have it.

Mr. Wolcott of Ward 11—The only excuse for eating at the city's expense is during the period of actual service of the city. It is a reward for actual service; it is that the service has been of such value that we deserve this dinner. This rests upon an entirely different basis. During this year it was voted to take an excursion, which was very good; but it was voted that those who participated should pay the entire expense. But it appears that none went. This annual banquet should stand on the same basis—either be done away with altogether, or partaken of at the expense of those who participate. I hope the resolve will prevail.

Mr. Clarke of Ward 22—I agree with the remarks of the gentleman from the Roxbury District, that this has been a time-honored custom, and I see no reason why we should deviate from the course we have pursued in previous years. I have from the Auditor's office the expenditures for this annual dinner for the last ten years, and I find that they amount to about the same every year. In 1867, under Mayor Norcross, it was $684; in 1868, under Mayor Shurtleff, it was $550; in 1869, $831; in 1870, $439. These last three years were under Mayor Shurtleff. In 1872-3, under Mayor Gaston, $600; in 1871, $572; under Mayor Pierce in 1873, $536; under Mayor Cobb in 1874, $609; in 1875, $681; in 1876, $675—the last three years under Mayor Cobb. Those were all economical Mayors. It seems to have been a custom which the members of the Council adopted in parting from those who were not to remain here another year. It is a social gathering. It is known that during the year trifles often come up, and during debate warm words come up, which might break the friendship of members; and the annual dinner is a sort of settling up of what has occurred during the year, and each member leaves the Council in a happy manner. I am surprised that the gentleman who presented this matter, and who is usually very fair, should spring it upon the Council when there is hardly a quorum present. I think it would be more satisfactory when there are more present, and I move that it be specially assigned to the next meeting at 9½ o'clock.

Mr. Crocker—As I don't wish to get the opinion of a fraction of the Council, and would like to get a good vote upon it, I hope it will be assigned as the gentleman proposes.

The motion to assign prevailed.

HEALTH DEPARTMENT.

Mr. Sibley of Ward 5 submitted the following from the Committee on Health:

Ordered, That the City Collector be and he hereby is authorized to receive of J. J. Haley, assignee of J. F. Paul, in bankruptcy, the sum of $53.38, in full settlement of bills amounting to $3229.75, rendered by the Superintendent of Health, dated Jan. 1 and July 1, 1876, for ashes and street dirt sold to J. F. Paul & Son.

Ordered, That bills of the Board of Health and the Superintendent of Health amounting to $1262.94, as shown by schedule annexed, be cancelled, the same having been certified by the City Solicitor as uncollectable.

Ordered, That the Committee on Health be and they are hereby authorized to contract with R. B. Carter for the collection and removal of house offal from East Boston for the term of three years from Jan. 1, 1878, at the rate of $2000 per annum; to be charged to the appropriation for Health.

The rule was suspended, and the orders were severally read twice and passed. Sent up.

SURVEYORS OF HIGHWAYS.

Mr. Brintnall of Ward 5 offered an order—That his Honor the Mayor be requested to petition the Legislature of 1878 to change section 41, city charter, which now reads, "The Board of Aldermen shall be surveyors of highways for said city," to read, "The City Council shall be surveyors of highways for said city."

Mr. Brintnall said this had been tried several times, and always failed; but now he believed it would pass the Board of Aldermen, and give the Mayor a chance to petition the next Legislature.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10 was not prepared to vote upon it, and moved its reference to the Committee on Legislative Matters.

Mr. Webster of Ward 3 said that he understood from a discussion in the Board of Aldermen some time ago that they were entitled to free passes on all the railroads. If this would give free passes he would vote for it.

Mr. Kelley of Ward 3 believed the Paving Committee should be a joint committee, as then there would be a mechanic on it; this year there is not. He commented severely on the Paving Committee on the part of the Council having only a few minutes to look over the estimates for an appropriation of a million dollars.

Mr. Mowry was not prepared to vote on such an important matter, contemplating a radical change in the City Government.

The order was referred to the Committee on Legislative Matters. Sent up.

VENDERS OF OLD LEAD PIPE.

Mr. Clarke of Ward 22 offered an order—That the Committee on Ordinances be requested to consider the expediency of reporting an ordinance providing that a permit from the Superintendent of Pawnbrokerage shall be required from all persons offering old lead pipe for sale, and that a proper record of each case shall be kept by said Superintendent.

STONY BROOK.

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the order was passed for a committee on the Stony Brook improvement, made by Mr. Coe, hoping it would not prevail, was lost.

VEGETABLE MARKET.

Mr. Howes moved to take from the table the order for a loan for the purchase of the Mercantile-wharf property for a vegetable market, giving notice that he should move to indefinitely postpone it.

Two attempts were made to take the sense of the Council, but no quorum voted.

On motion of Mr. Stone, the yeas and nays were ordered, with the following result—yeas 22, nays 16:

Yeas—Messrs. Barnard, Brintnall, Clarke, Cross, Day, D. A. Flynn, Howes, Kelley (Ward 3), Morrill, Mowry, Nugent, O. H. Pierce, Pratt, J. B. Richardson, M. W. Richardson, Roberts, Sampson, Sibley, Smardon, Stone, Thompson, Wolcott—22.

Nays—Messrs. Brown, Coe, Crocker, Danforth, Hibbard, Jackson, Kelley (Ward 6), Kidney, McClusky, McDonald, McGaragle, Spenceley, Upham, Vose, G. B. Webster, Wilbur—16.

Absent or not voting—Messrs. Barry, Beeching, Blanchard, Blodgett, Burke, Cannon, Cox, Dee, Doherty, Duggan, Fagan, Felt, Fernald, J. J. Flynn, Fraser, Ham, Hiscock, Loughlin, Mullane, O'Connor, O'Donnell, Pearl, Perham, J. H. Pierce, Pope, Reed, Roach, Ruffin, Shepard, Souther, Thorndike, Warren, E. R. Webster—33.

And the order was taken from the table.

Mr. Howes moved to indefinitely postpone, which the President ruled out of order.

On motion of Mr. Stoue the roll was called.

Present—Messrs. Barnard, Brintnall, Clarke, Crocker, Cross, Danforth, Day, D. A. Flynn, Hibbard, Howes, Jackson, Kidney, McClusky, McDonald, McGaragle, Morrill, Mowry, Nugent, O. H. Pierce, Pratt, J. B. Richardson, M. W. Richardson, Roberts, Sampson, Sibley, Smardon, Spenceley, Stone, Thompson, Upham, Vose, G. B. Webster, Wilbur, Wolcott—34.

Absent—Messrs. Barry, Beeching, Blanchard, Blodgett, Brown, Burke, Cannon, Coe, Cox, Dee, Doherty, Duggan, Fagan, Felt, Fernald, J. J. Flynn, Fraser, Ham, Hiscock, Kelley (Ward 3), Kelley (Ward 6), Loughlin, Mullane, O'Connor, O'Donnell, Pearl, Perham, J. H. Pierce, Pope, Reed, Roach, Ruffin, Shepard, Souther, Thorndike, Warren, E. R. Webster—37.

There being no quorum present the President declared the Council adjourned.

CITY OF BOSTON.

Proceedings of the Common Council,

DECEMBER 24, 1877.

Special meeting at 2½ o'clock P. M., Benjamin Pope, President, in the chair.

The President read the following:

BOSTON, Dec. 21, 1877.

Benjamin Pope, Esq., President of the Common Council: Dear Sir—I have deemed it expedient to call a special meeting of the Common Council for Saturday, Dec. 22, at 2.30 o'clock P. M. for the purpose of taking action upon a notice for reconsideration of the vote whereby was passed a preamble and order to authorize the Park Commissioners to complete the purchase of any part or parts of the tract of land therein referred to, upon the terms provided and at such times as they shall deem expedient.

Very respectfully your obedient servant,
FREDERICK O. PRINCE, Mayor.

Mr. Stone of Ward 3 asked the President to read the notice he had filed with the Clerk of the Common Council, and the President read the following:

BOSTON, Dec. 21, 1877.

I hereby give you notice that at the next regular meeting of the Common Council, I shall move a reconsideration of the vote by which was passed a preamble and order to authorize the Park Commissioners to complete the purchase of any part or parts of the tract of land therein referred to, upon the terms provided, and at such times as they shall deem expedient.

Very respectfully,

P. J. STONE, JR.

To W. P. Gregg, Esq., Clerk Common Council.

Mr. Stone—As therein stated and clearly set forth (you will notice that "the next regular meeting" is underlined), I intend to make the motion at the next regular meeting, and do not intend to do anything of the kind today.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 3—As the gentleman from Ward 9 is so anxious to delay business, I will now make a motion to reconsider the order as passed, hoping it will not prevail.

Mr. Stone—I rise to a point of order. I believe I am the only party entitled to move a reconsideration in this matter. I don't wish to delay business, and I think I was unfairly treated in the matter of the committee meeting.

Mr. Crocker of Ward 9—I think my colleague is mistaken in moving a reconsideration. The rule is that any member may move a reconsideration at the same meeting, or give notice within twenty-four hours of his intention to do so at the next meeting, at which such motion shall be in order in the regular course of business. It seems to me that as the gentleman from Ward 3 gave the notice of a motion to reconsider, he can only make it when it is in order in the regular course of business. This being the next meeting, and no other business being in order, he must make it now, or it will not be in order at any other time.

Mr. Stone—Having stated specifically that I intended to make it at the next regular meeting, I think that I have a right to make it then.

Mr. Thompson—In order that this question may be settled I move to suspend the rule, that I may make the motion to reconsider today; and in order that the Council may understand why this order should be passed today, I will briefly state the facts. The Park Commissioners have practically completed the bounding of all of the land, and made arrangements for passing the deeds; but at the last moment, by the ruling of the City Solicitor, that found they were not authorized to purchase the land for the park in different parcels, but must take the hundred acres in one transfer. They were dealing with a large number of parties, and this ruling necessitated a great deal of delay. They did not learn of the City Solicitor's ruling until Thursday, and at once requested the chairman of the Joint Special Committee on Parks to call a meeting of that committee, every member of which was warned of the meeting some time before the hour appointed. Every notice was given that could be given; and the gentleman from Ward 3, who makes this factious opposition, received his notice, but did not come. The Mayor and the Park Commissioners came before the committee and explained the reasons why this order should be passed immediately. It is a matter of importance; a great many interests are involved, and it is of importance to the Park Commissioners themselves. The chairman of the Joint Special Committee on Improved Sewerage was present a portion of the time, as the purchase involves a portion of the land through which the intercepting sewer passes. Night before last the Common Council passed this order by a large vote, and I intended, in the regular order of business, to move a reconsideration, hoping it would not prevail, but was not able to do so. The gentleman from Ward 3 took advantage of his right to give notice of intention to move a reconsideration, which would cause delay. He was applied to for his reasons, and explanations were given to him; but he declined to withdraw the notice, and the Mayor, in the exercise of his power, has called this meeting to act upon this particular motion. Now the gentleman wishes to take advantage of a technicality, and cut off the power of the Mayor to facilitate business. This meeting is just as regularly called as any other. I therefore move to suspend the rule, and will then move to reconsider, hoping it will not prevail. I think the course of the gentleman from Ward 3 should not be approved by the Council. It delays business. The order would be carried over to next Thursday and would be still further delayed until the following Tuesday before it could be carried out. It is also an inconvenience to the Park Commissioners who deserve every courtesy we can extend to them.

Mr. Stone—Mr. President—

Mr. Morrill of Ward 20—I move the Council do now adjourn.

The President—Mr. Stone has the floor.

Mr. Stone—I give way.

The Council refused to adjourn.

Mr. Stone—I did not give any reason for attempting to delay this matter, as the gentleman from Ward 9 said, because the question is not before us. But when it comes before us I shall give reasons.

The President—Under the rule the motion to reconsider is in the custody of the gentleman who gave the notice, and cannot be made by another gentleman without the consent of two-thirds of the Council. The question is upon suspending the rule.

On motion of Mr. Stone the yeas and nays were ordered, and the rule was suspended—yeas 43, nays 4, as follows:

Yeas—Messrs. Barry, Beeching, Blanchard, Blodgett, Brown, Clarke, Coe, Crocker, Danforth, Day, Doherty, Felt, Fraser, Hibbard, Hiscok, Jackson, Kelley (Ward 6), Kidney, McClusky, McDonald, Mowry, Nugent, Perham, O. H. Pierce, Pope, Pratt, Reed, J. B. Richardson, M. W. Richardson, Roach, Roberts, Ruffin, Sampson, Sibley, Thompson, Thorndike, Upham, Vose, Warren, E. R. Webster, G. B. Webster, Wilbur, Wolcott—43.

Nays—Messrs. Barnard, Ham, Morrill, Stone—4. Absent or not voting—Messrs. Burke, Cannon, Cox, Cross, Dee, Duggan, Fagan, Fernald, D. A. Flynn, J. J. Flynn, Howes, Kelley (Ward 3), Loughlin, McGaragle, Mullane, O'Connor, O'Donnell, Pearl, J. H. Pierce, Shepard, Souther, Smardon, Spenceley—23.

Mr. Thompson—I move that the vote whereby the preamble and order giving the Park Commissioners the right to buy land for the Back Bay park in parcels be reconsidered, hoping it will not prevail.

Mr. Stone—My reason is that if they purchase the ten or fifty acres of the Boston Water Power the other parties are under no obligation to sell their land for ten cents a foot, and we are liable to pay one or two or three dollars a foot. While upon the floor, I raise the point of order that this motion for a reconsideration can only be made at a regular meeting, notwithstanding the suspension of the rule, this being a special meeting.

The President—The Council having suspended the rule, the motion is in order.

Mr. Mowry of Ward 11—I would ask the gentleman from Ward 3 if he has not understood that the land was all bonded except this fraction?

Mr. Stone—I may have used the term bonded, but I meant agreed to sell it.

Mr. Thompson—All the land is bonded except one acre and a half, which is owned by eight heirs, seven of whom live out of the State; but the managing heir has given a bond for his interest, and says a bond will be given for the rest. The trustees of the Eliot School fund have not given a bond, but have voted to sell the land at ten cents a foot, and authorized their officers to convey it when the commissioners are ready to take it.

Mr. Stone—What is the great desire to rush this matter through? Why not take time to look into it, if all the gentleman says is true? As a member of the committee, I am entitled to know something about the matter.

Mr. Thompson—The gentleman has had every opportunity and plenty of time to learn everything he needed to learn, if he had been desirous of facilitating business. If he didn't choose to take the word of the committee, he could have gone to the Park Commissioners or the City Solicitor or the Mayor of the city, any one of whom is familiar with the facts, and could explain them to him. The importance of hurrying the matter is this: The Park Commissioners, believing they had a right to take a portion of the land, gave notice of their intention to do so. This action involved the interests of others besides the owners. There are attachments upon the land of the Water Power Company, and notice was given by them of their intention to settle the claims on a certain day. Now comes in the gentleman from Ward 3, half breathing a doubt of somebody's honesty, and asks for delay. It is one of those routine orders in regard to details that have come before us many times this year, and we have suspended the rule. The money has been appropriated to make this purchase, and the question is simply whether you will permit the commissioners to draw money enough in one draft to pay the Water Power Company, or must they wait until they can get deeds from all those parties, and draw the whole $450,000 at once—whether you will consult the convenience of the Park Commissioners or not. The gentleman from Ward 3 has done himself great injustice. If he has any solid objection, I would give him all the time he wanted. He has had plenty of time to ascertain all the facts if he had chosen to do so; and I think he is entirely to blame for his conduct in this matter.

Mr. Morrill—I think no one has cause to find any fault with our action in regard to the park matter this year; but before we enter upon this expenditure, we had better find out whether it is $450,000 or $2,000,000. Those familiar with that property well know that ten or twelve years ago it was a swamp. To my knowledge, piles have got to be driven down there to a great extent; and, for one, I protest against spending one dollar more there above that $450,000.

On motion of Mr. Sibley the main question was ordered.

The motion to reconsider was lost.

Mr. Webster of Ward 3—This meeting has been a very enjoyable, sociable and delightful affair in every way, and we can say that we are indebted for it to my colleague from Ward 3. It has been a great benefit to me, as it comes upon me in the busiest part of the week before Christmas, and absence from business is like taking the meat out of a watermelon. I think the least we can do is to pass a vote of thanks to the gentleman; and I therefore move that the thanks of the Council be extended to Mr. Stone for his kindness and courtesy in calling us together.

Mr. Stone—I think the thanks are due to his Honor the Mayor, and not to me.

Adjourned, on motion of Mr. Morrill.

HORSE RAILROAD HEARINGS.

Metropolitan Railroad. A hearing was given on the petition of the Metropolitan Railroad Company for a change in location of track on Washington street, between Temple place and Summer street.

President Richards of the Metropolitan Railroad Company appeared for the petitioners and explained that a slight difficulty had arisen in regard to the location granted on Nov. 5th, on Washington street, which was a plan to relieve Tremont street, proposed by the Paving Committee and agreed to by the presidents of all the horse railroads. That location had been accepted and by far the larger portion of the tracks had been laid at an expense of twelve or fifteen thousand dollars, in all the streets except Washington street. They had been summoned into court, but were there told that it would be no contempt to go on and build the tracks. But he had never attempted to do anything in the face of great opposition. In making the plan the engineer had deflected a few feet from the centre of the street, in order to accommodate a curve. The order of location did not give the right to take up the old track, and they were forced to come before the Board again. This petition was to accomplish the purpose of the Paving Committee, and take up the old track. This will relieve the streets of the blockade. The company are endeavoring unselfishly and fairly to meet the views of the Paving Committee, at an expense of $20,000.

Colouel Long presented a remonstrance against the laying of two tracks in Washington street, between the points named, signed by Jordan, Marsh & Co., and several other large firms. He contended that two tracks there would not relieve the blockade.

Mr. Richards said the remonstrance did not contain the names of nearly all the abutters, and it was almost a flash in the pan after all the trouble they had been to get up a remonstrance. He could have got up a petition fully as large as that from the abutters. The only objection to the original plan will be removed by granting the petition.

No one else desiring to be heard, the petition was recommitted to the Committee on Paving.

Middlesex Railroad. A hearing was given on the petition of the Middlesex Railroad Company for tracks in South and Kneeland streets, at the Old Colony Railroad station.

William G. Russell appeared for the petitioners, and said they asked for a confirmation of a location previously granted, which he thought would be best accomplished by the passage of an order—That the location heretofore granted to the Middlesex Railroad Company by an order passed Nov. 12, 1877, and shown upon the plan referred to in said order, be and the same is ratified and confirmed.

The company have long desired to complete their facilities for transporting passengers to and from the depots. The cause of the difficulty is that the turn-out track granted in Kneeland street extends about five feet into South street, which is not covered by the order, the only streets named being Beach, Lincoln and Kneeland. The petition is to make the location in accordance with the plan before the committee, as the committee intended.

P. A. Collins stated that he appeared for certain abutters who are remonstrants.

The Mayor read remonstrances of Isburgh & Walker and 108 others; Flynn, Amsden & Co. and 127 others; Hills & Brothers and seventy-five other firms, against the location.

Mr. Collins said the remonstrants objected to a depot there for any purpose, the street being thirty-three feet wide, and a standing car will be a great inconvenience to firms receiving and delivering goods. The order for this location was passed without any notice to the abutters, and they had no notice that the former location had been granted until the present order was issued.

In reply to a question by Alderman Fitzgerald, the City Clerk stated that the present order of notice was based upon the points contained in two previous petitions, and that no separate order had been given on this one.

Mr. Russell claimed that legal notice had been given the abutters in this case by the publication of the other notices on the previous petition, as the points contained in this petition were covered by the other petitions upon which notices had been given.

George O. Shattuck, counsel for the South Boston Railroad, said the original petition and notice covered a location in Cove street, and did not cover the location asked for in this petition.

The question of the sufficiency of the notice was informally discussed by Aldermen Fitzgerald, Thompson, Mr. Russell, Mr. Child and Mr. Shattuck, during which Alderman Thompson read from the minutes of Nov. 5, when the order was passed granting the South Boston Railroad a location in front of the Old Colony depot, and when he withdrew an amendment providing that any other corporation should have the right to use the track in case they had permission from the Old Colony Railroad, it being the understanding the South Boston Railroad would not oppose this location for the Middlesex.

Alderman O'Brien said the Board had nothing to do with the agreements of private corporations, and Alderman Thompson said he should have objected to the location if the South Boston road was to have any exclusive privileges there as opposed to any other corporation.

Mr. Shattuck said this company has a location; that there was a hearing on a petition. Yet the ground on which they ask it is that the Board has granted it. But the truth is the Board has not granted it, and they come here because the court will not recognize their right to lay this track, and they are afraid the court will not allow them to have what they have now finally made up their minds they desire. They have undertaken by a patchwork on two petitions to get a location on South street. It seemed to him they turned themselves out of court by asking to confirm what has been granted, when it has not been granted. It is an entirely new petition. They ask leave to shift horses in the worst crowded street in the city, when the shifting of horses has never been allowed in any place except Tremont street, and has been refused on Canal street where it would not have been a great inconvenience. If anybody should have such a location in South street, it should be the South Boston road, which had the original location at the Old Colony depot; and if any road was to have the location at the Boston & Maine depot it should be the Middlesex. The spur now asked for will interfere with the construction of the proposed turnout of the South Boston Railroad Company in front of the depot.

Alderman Thompson said the President of the South Boston Company had told him they would not object to this spur if the South Boston Company were granted the location in front of the depot.

Mr. Collins called witnesses for the remonstrants.

R. J. Monks, trustee of estate of John P. Monks, said he had not objected to various locations which were in the interest of the public, even though it was some detriment to the estate he represented. He read a written remonstrance showing that the location would be a great inconvenience to the firms doing business there. A few days since there passed through the street from 7 A. M. to 6 P. M., 2027 vehicles—13 hand-carts, 1450 one-horse teams, 297 two-horse teams, and 261 hacks.

William S. Hills of Hills & Brother, storage and flour, South street, occupying six stores, said the street was thirty-four feet and one-half inch wide; frequently receive 1200 to 1500 barrels of flour and deliver 1500 to 2000 barrels a day; hardly a minute in the day but a team is backed up to the stores; the Old Colony baggage room is about sixty or eighty feet distant; very nearly all passengers to and from the Old Colony Railroad are received and delivered in South street. A large part of the flour over the Boston & Albany Railroad is delivered from No. 3 freight house, which is reached through South street. This location will be a serious inconvenience to their business and an obstruction to public travel, especially in the summer. [To Mr. Russell.] A one-horse team backed up to the sidewalk occupies sixteen feet; some of the caravans are eighteen feet long, without the horses.

Michael Doherty stated his objections, as previously given, that it would obstruct the business interests of that locality. They had been trammelled with horse railroads too much, and he believed citizens have some rights. The cars come there now, and go away with only two passengers. All the owners and abutters there are of the same opinion with him.

Mr. Fearing, of Fearing & Renfrew, teamsters, has a great deal of business with the No. 3 freight house; South street is usually crowded, and the effect of standing cars there would be a great obstruction to business and travel. Men in the teaming business agree with him.

Policeman David M. Foster, whose beat is on South, Kneeland and Federal streets, testified that South street is blocked up almost every day, and almost a constant block when business is brisk; the standing of cars there would be an aggravation of the blockade. There is no public necessity for cars to stand there. He had stood in the street four hours in August to keep the street clear for teams and carriages to go to and from the depot. He had seen them hold trains ten or fifteen minutes because the hacks could not get up to the baggage room.

Policeman James Foster said he had been stationed at the Old Colony depot for a year and half; know of no street in Boston so much crowded with teams. He corroborated the statements of the previous witness.

Mr. Russell read a notice issued by Hills & Bro., urging the abutters to do all they could to prevent the location, stating that they could accomplish a great deal by personal solicitation of the members of the Board of Aldermen, by their presence at the hearing and their testimony thereat.

Mr. Collins said he intended to show by the testimony of hackmen that the placing of a car on the proposed location would prevent carriages from driving up to the side entrance of the head house. He claimed to have shown that there was no necessity for it, and said there was nothing insulting in the circular, and was only urging citizens to use their endeavors as citizens.

Mr. Shattuck claimed that there was nothing in the circular that was disrespectful or insulting to the members of the Board, and that it was just what every citizen had a right to do, to protect his rights and his property. He thought the petitioners had not shown there was any necessity for the location, and claimed that there were sufficient cars there already to answer the purposes of the general public.

Mr. Russell, in closing the case for the petitioners, said every passenger on the Old Colony road would testify that this location is just what is needed for their accommodation; they can come out of the side of the depot and find a car there to take them down town. Every abutter or firm on a street has come in and said every street was crowded where it was desired to lay a railroad track. The teams coming up to the depot are delayed because the Old Colony road has not force enough to take the baggage as fast as it comes. The car will occupy only thirty feet of 120. A car will do no more hurt there than two hacks. The Old Colony Railroad Company have asked the petitioners to come there and occupy the space now occupied by two or three private hacks. He contended that this location should be granted as an offset to the location granted to the South Boston in front of the Old Colony depot, and because it was intended to be covered by the original order, but was omitted in naming the streets, though plainly shown upon the plan. In regard to the circular of Hills & Brother, he thought it was a clear invitation to "button-holing," penned and paid for by the South Boston Railroad. He should like to know if the remonstrants are so reduced in wit and wisdom that they cannot write or print their own circulars.

The matter was recommitted to the Committee on Paving.

PUBLIC PARKS.

An order came down to authorize the Park Commissioners to purchase any parcels of land for the Back Bay Park and settle for the same upon the terms set forth in said order.

The order was passed in concurrence, and Alderman Clark moved a reconsideration, hoping it would not prevail.

Alderman Thompson—I presume this Board, and I know for myself, know very little about this park matter, and I think this would be a proper time for some members of the Committee on Parks to give us some information in regard to the purchase of the land, if consistent with the public interest.

Alderman Clark—I think that a full report from the Park Commission will come in at the next meeting.

Alderman Gibson—Then I think it ought not to be pressed. It seems to me we ought to have that report in first.

Alderman O'Brien—This is a very simple matter. In trying to arrange for our one-hundred-acre park, the commissioners have found that they could not examine all the titles immediately, because the parties who hold the equity of certain small portions of land, are difficult to reach, and it will take a long time before all the titles can be finally adjusted and settled upon. The City Solicitor says they cannot take a portion of it; that one hundred acres must be settled for at once; and this order is merely to enable the Park Commissioners to do their business as they go along. They can take possession of eighty acres immediately, but there are several small lots which it may be six months before they can be reached and settled.

Alderman Thompson—Under the circumstances, it seems to me it might be well to introduce an amendment limiting the amount to eighty acres, if that is the amount already bonded.

Alderman Clark—The commissioners have bonds for the entire hundred and three acres, but there are some two or three acres the owners of which reside out of the city, and some in Europe, and one in the West. There are only a few acres to which the title cannot be obtained in a short time. All the titles are ready for the eighty acres, and also of several small lots of five or six acres. There is no question about obtaining the title to the entire property within a very short time. In order to make their right to purchase a part of the acres perfectly clear, it was thought advisable to pass this order. It was passed almost unanimously by the Common Council, was passed unanimously here, and the motion to reconsider is simply to expedite business and have it settled during the present Administration. It was thought advisable to move a reconsideration because of the experience in the Common Council, where the Mayor was compelled to call a special meeting, and then only four voted in favor of the reconsideration, and the balance opposed it.

Alderman Thompson—It was not my intention to oppose it if everything was as it should be, and that is what I desired to know. But if it is in such a position that the city can buy a few acres of land and take the deeds, and it is unable to purchase any quantity beyond that, and they expect to come before the City Council and propose to pay an additional price, I should object. But after the explanation of the gentlemen I should not favor the reconsideration.

The motion to reconsider was lost.

POLICE NOMINATIONS CONFIRMED.

Alderman Robinson submitted a report from the Committee on Police, recommending the confirmation of the following executive appointments of police officers: Frank E. Hall, Joseph McHenry, Cornelius F. McCarty, William B. Watts, James Lyons and James Sullivan.

Alderman Thompson inquired in regard to the evidence the committee had of the fitness of the appointees, and Alderman Robinson said the evidence was all taken down by the Clerk of Committees, in whose office it could be found.

The report was accepted and the nominations were confirmed.

POLICE STATION IN CHARLESTOWN.

Alderman Robinson submitted the following from the Committee on Police:

The Committee on Police respectfully request that additional accommodations be furnished for the use of the department in the old City Hall, Charlestown. A portion of the building is already occupied by the officers of Station 15, but the rooms are inconveniently arranged, and no improvements can be made without the addition of another room. The addition of a room situated in the front of the building, and having an entrance from city square, to be used for a business office, would facilitate the transaction of business, and would enable such a disposition to be made of the rooms at present occupied by the department as would add greatly to the comfort and convenience of the officers attached to the station. There is now an unoccupied room which can be made available with but little expense, and the committee respectfully request that it be assigned to the use of the Police Department, and fitted up as a business office for Station 15. They would recommend the passage of the following order:

Ordered, That the vacant room situated on the first floor of the City Hall, Charlestown, be assigned to the use of the Police Department, and that the Committee on Public Buildings be requested to alter the said room into a business office for the Police Station No. 15.

Alderman Clark asked if any estimate had been made of the expense, and Alderman Robinson said that it would not cost much, as about the only item was the cutting of a door through. As the matter came under the province of the Committee on Public Buildings, it was, on motion of Alderman Fitzgerald, referred to that committee. Sent down.

PAVING REPORTS AND ORDERS.

Alderman Robinson submitted the following from the Committee on Paving:

Report that leave be granted to M. Ellis & Co. to move a wooden building from Marginal street, Ward 2, to Decatur street, Ward 2, Accepted.

Order to pay George D. Howe, Samuel W. Swett and Samuel Johnson, trustees under the will of George Howe, $1500 for grade damages at 174, 176 and 178 Washington street. Read twice and passed.

Ordered, That the street leading from Wyman street to Green street, Ward 23, a part of which has heretofore been known as Curtis street, and a part of which Chestnut street, be hereafter called and known as Chestnut avenue, and that the Superintendent of Streets be directed to erect street signs upon and renumber said avenue. Read twice and passed.

METROPOLITAN RAILROAD LOCATION IN WASHINGTON STREET.

Alderman Robinson submitted the following from the Committee on Paving:

The Committee on Paving, to whom was recommended the petition of the Metropolitan Railroad Company for a change of location on Washington street, between Temple place and Summer street, respectfully recommend the passage of the accompanying order of location.

For the Committee,

R. W. ROBINSON, Chairman.

Ordered, That the Metropolitan Railroad Company be and it is hereby authorized and empowered to change the location and position of that part of its single track which lies in Washington street between Summer street and Temple place, and to lay down an additional track on said part of said street, so that it shall have and maintain two tracks on that part of Washington street which lies between Summer street and Temple place, as follows, viz.:

The most westerly of said tracks to commence at a point in the track of the Metropolitan Railroad as now laid down in said Washington street ten feet north of the northerly line of Summer street, and to extend to and connect with the track of said Metropolitan Railroad on Temple place. The most easterly track to commence at a point in the track of the South Boston Railroad as now laid down in said Washington street ten feet north of the northerly line of Summer street, and to extend to and connect with the track of the Metropolitan Railroad south of Temple place.

Said Metropolitan Railroad are also authorized and empowered to connect by means of curved tracks the most westerly track above mentioned with the tracks of the South Boston Railroad on Summer street, and the most easterly track with the track of the Metropolitan Railroad on Summer street; the tracks and connections described in this order being shown by red lines on a plan drawn by W. S. Barbour and A. Hodges, civil engineers, dated Dec. 21, 1877, and deposited in the office of the Superintendent of Streets, and said tracks are to be laid down in the position designated on said plan, the centre line of the two tracks on Washington street coinciding with centre line of said street, and the exterior rails of said respective tracks to be nine feet and five-hundredths from the sidewalks at a point near Summer street, and eight feet and seven-tenths from the sidewalks near Temple place, as laid down on said plan.

Said Metropolitan Railroad Company are hereby authorized and directed to take up and remove so much of the single track and its connections, now laid down on Washington street between Summer street and Temple place, as shall not be required by said company in the construction of tracks located by this order.

The right to lay down the tracks located by this order is upon the condition that the whole work of laying down the same, the form of rail to be used, and the kind and quality of material used in paving said tracks, shall be under the direction and to the satisfaction of the Committee on Paving and the Superintendent of Streets, and shall be approved by them. Also upon condition that said Metropolitan Railroad Company shall accept this order of location, and shall agree in writing to comply with the conditions therein contained, and shall file said acceptance and agreement with the City Clerk within thirty days of the date of the passage of this order; otherwise it shall be null and void.

On motion of Alderman Robinson, the order was read a second time and was put upon its passage.

Alderman Clark—I raise the point of order that there has been a public hearing given today and that parties have remonstrated against this location. The subject was recommitted back to the committee and they have had no meeting since the order was recommitted. The point I make is that this is not a fair treatment of the remonstrants against the location. This order was prepared by three o'clock this afternoon before the committee came into the Board and before they heard the remonstrants. Although the order will pass, still I think there is a fair way of doing business and of treating parties who come before this Board. I submit whether or not the point I raise is not well taken.

Alderman Robinson—The order for the location of that track was passed several weeks ago. It was fully discussed and taken into consideration by the Committee on Paving. The petition was for a double track from Dover street to Summer street, and the committee decided to give them a location from Summer street to Temple place. The matter which called forth this hearing was in consequence of a little quibble in the taking up of the track and laying it down again. The committee understood the whole thing, and so do all the members of the Board.

Alderman Clark—I submit that the gentleman is out of order. The question is whether the point of order I raised is well taken, and the question is not whether it is right or wrong to grant this location. It is simply that the committee have not had a meeting since the matter was recommitted to them.

Alderman Fitzgerald—I raise the point that Alderman Clark's point of order should have been taken when the report of the committee was made, and that it is too late now, when the order has been passed to a second reading and become the property of this Board. If the Chair decides otherwise, I shall move that this Board take a recess for one minute, so that the Committee on Paving may meet and make their report.

Alderman Clark—If that is the way the Committee on Paving do business, I submit that it is not a proper way.

The Mayor—The Chair rules that there is no point of order that can be taken as taken by the Alderman; that this is a matter before the Board of Aldermen for their consideration, and for them to take such action as they see fit. No parliamentary rule has been violated. It is not a question of order. The Aldermen can take such action as they see fit.

Alderman Clark—I accept the ruling of my Chair. And I should hope that the Board would not vote this evening upon a matter of such importance as this, because there has been no opportunity for the committee to investigate the subject; there has hardly been sufficient time for the Board of Aldermen to investigate the subject. This petition is for the location of tracks in Washington street, and some fifteen or twenty merchants on the line of the street have come here and remonstrated against the granting of this location. I should hope that the order will take its regular course and be referred to the Committee on Paving, for them to report at the next meeting, and then for the Board to act upon it. It seems to me rather an unwise thing to act so suddenly upon such an important matter, and I hope it will not pass this evening.

Alderman Fitzgerald—Nobody knows better than the Alderman the subject involved in this order. Nobody has said more about it than he. He was so anxious that everybody should know all about it, that when I was absent in New York a few weeks ago, for my special convenience and without asking me, he had the kindness to move a reconsideration of the order, and it came up a second time before the Board, which confirmed its former decision. All that is asked for is a little change in the laying of the track. The principle is the same. The Committee on Paving is the same. The Committee on Paving and this Board have talked it over with all the presidents of the railroads, and everybody knows everything about it, and nobody knows more about it than the Alderman opposite, and so he is not taken unawares; and if anything is to be done it should be done at once. Our lives are very short, and we should not leave it to the next Government. The weather is favorable and the work will be done immediately, if the gentlemen don't get an injunction.

Alderman Clark—This is an entirely different subject from that considered while the Alderman was in New York. It is an entirely new location. Furthermore, the gentlemen doing business on the street have come here and opposed this location, and the subject is before the courts, and I think there is to be a hearing during this week before the Supreme Court as to whether they have the right to lay down the tracks and whether the tracks already laid down should not be ordered up. There is another reason why this Board of Aldermen should not be injudicious and not act upon it without giving it full consideration. It is an unheard-of thing for a committee, after a public hearing, without having had a meeting, to come in here with an order already prepared, and attempt to force it through as suddenly as this.

Alderman Fitzgerald—The honest indignation which my friend opposite puts on about this order would perhaps have a great deal more weight if he was addressing a large assembly who did not know anything about the facts. But it is amusing and ridiculous, his addressing twelve men who know his relation to the order, and how much he has slept over it, how much he has thought and spoken about it. We might lay it on the table for six months and his and my ideas would be the same as tonight. This is a better order than the other one. It does justice to both sides. It is a better order for Jordan, Marsh & Co. The objection that the Supreme Court are to have a hearing upon the other order has nothing to do with it. The notice is so drawn that there can be no quibble raised against it. The plan was recommended by the Committee on Paving, and agreed to by the horse railroads, that it would be one of the best things to abate this nuisance on Tremont street. There is no good reason for the virtuous indignation of my friend on the opposite side. He talks in a Pickwickian sense, and if his speech has any effect and his motion passes, he will think what fools we have been. He knows that the order is going to pass. Mr. Yerxa is quietly weighing his tea and coffee, and Messrs. Hogg, Brown & Taylor measuring their tape, and they have not come near us. The only individual frightened is the Alderman opposite.

Alderman Clark—Another reason why this order should not pass is that there has been a great deal of criticism on the injudicious action of this Board of Aldermen, and this is a subject that there should not be an opportunity to say we have acted upon injudiciously. The petition comes in and we have a hearing; there is a strong remonstrance, and the Committee on Paving have an order prepared and their minds made up, and therefore they are not competent to decide justly between the petitioners and the remonstrants. If we do pass this order we will lay ourselves open to the just criticism of acting injudiciously,—more injudicious than the passage of the order freeing the East Boston ferries or the attempt to widen Commercial street or purchase the Mercantile-wharf Market. Let us consider it a few days, and it may be that next Monday I shall be prepared to vote for it. But I don't propose to vote for an order that comes down here in the pocket of the Alderman at three o'clock, before the hearing on the subject took place.

Alderman Fitzgerald—I am not surprised that the Alderman should lay such stress upon what he deems hasty action. There was a hearing some years ago upon the stately elms which stood upon Tremont street, and he brought in an order that afternoon to cut them down. He says we should wait for the remonstrants. They are mere paper men. I am not surprised that the Alderman should lay such great stress upon this matter when he has been so grossly negligent in a similar matter, and after what he did in regard to the Paddock elms. I am not surprised that he is repenting.

Alderman Clark—The order cutting down the Paddock elms was not referred to the committee. It was heard before the Board and acted upon without any reference to the committee, and the Board voted to cut them down at once. Had it been referred to any committee it would have received their attention.

Alderman Fitzgerald—The Alderman introduced the order then and there, and did not give them any opportunity.

Alderman Viles—I am informed that the Supreme Court has appointed no day in which to give the parties a hearing in this case. While I am willing to give the members of the Board an opportunity to investigate any subject, I think the Alderman has obtained all the light he can on this subject.

Alderman Clark—Does the Alderman think the Committee on Paving have had time to consider this subject since it was referred to them?

Alderman Viles—I cannot speak for the committee, but for myself, and I think I understand it and can vote intelligently.

Alderman Robinson—The committee have worked about three months upon it.

The order was passed.
A motion to reconsider by Alderman Fitzgerald, hoping it would not prevail, was lost.

Subsequently a communication was received from the Metropolitan Railroad accepting the location granted by the above order.

STABLES.

Alderman Viles submitted the following from the Committee on Health on the part of the Board:

Reports that leave be granted to occupy stables by E. M. Steimle, Parker street; Freeman Smith, Abbott street; City of Boston, Canterbury street; W. W. Blaney, rear Vale street. Severally accepted.

Reports of leave to withdraw on petitions for leave to occupy stables by F. Bemis, 17 and 19 Corey street; Henry Dudley, Elm street, Ward 23; Bridget Burke, rear 42 Simmons street. Severally accepted.

HEALTH DEPARTMENT.

Alderman Viles submitted the following, from the Joint Committee on Health:

Report on petition of Jane Burrill for aid from the city—That she have leave to withdraw, the city not having authority to grant the same. Accepted. Sent down.

Report on petition of Owen Harrington, for leave to open a burial lot in St. Joseph's Cemetery, Roxbury—That in consideration of representations of said Harrington that he is the owner of a partially-occupied lot, that said lot is not a grave, but built of brick and cement, and further that it is his only desire to place two more of the family now deceased in said lot, leave be granted. Accepted, and order granting the permit passed. Sent down.

THE MUNICIPAL ELECTION.

Alderman Viles submitted the following: The committee appointed to examine the returns of votes for municipal officers have, in accordance with petitions presented, recounted the ballots cast for a clerk and warden in Ward 20, and for ward officers in Wards 15 and 16, and found the results were as follows:

Ward 20.

For Warden.
Frederick M. Briggs.....1146 and is elected.
Edward W. Dolan.....1117
All others..... 1

For Clerk.

Thaddeus Page..... 780 }
George H. Prince..... 780 }
J. Otto Hageczky..... 40 }
William Utz..... 44 }

The persons above chosen are the same that were certified as elected by the ward officers of said wards. After the examination of the ballots for warden and clerk in Ward 20, the committee were struck with the great discrepancy between the whole number of ballots cast in said ward and the number returned by the ward officers for Lucius Slade, whose name was borne on all the tickets for Aldermen. They therefore counted the ballots cast for Alderman Slade in this ward, and found that he actually received 2235, while the ward officers only returned for him 1637, thus making a difference of 598 votes, and increasing the total number of ballots received by him to 46,319. In closing this report the committee desire to say that, though the duties of ward officers are sometimes onerous, yet they are highly important and responsible, and too much care cannot be exercised in selecting capable, honest and intelligent persons for these positions.

For the Committee,
CLINTON VILES, Chairman.

Accepted.

PUBLIC BATHS.

Alderman Viles submitted the annual report of the Committee on Bathing (City Doc. 100).

The committee asked for an appropriation of $25,000, to cover the expenses of the department for the financial year 1877-78, which was granted by the City Council.

In October, 1876, an order was passed by the City Council, placing the Cabot-street double bath-house (formerly comprising Nos. 13 and 14) in the charge of the Committee of Public Buildings, and it is now used as a wardroom and for evening-school purposes; consequently the number of bath-houses used this season was reduced from twenty to eighteen.

Since the close of the bathing season two old bath-houses (Nos. 15 and 18) have been sold, with the approval of the committee, by the general superintendent, and the proceeds, aggregating $140, have been paid into the city treasury. Two new houses, to take the places of the above, are in process of construction, under the direction of the general superintendent.

The several houses were opened on the 1st of June.

The following statements show the expense of maintaining each establishment during the municipal year, and the number of bathers of each class:

IMPROVED SEWERAGE ROOMS.

Alderman Burnham, from the Joint Special Committee on Improved Sewerage, submitted the following:

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be authorized to execute a lease of the rooms in the building No. 74 Tremont street, hired of T. O. H. P. Burnham, at the rate of $1400 per annum, for the accommodation of the branch of the City Engineer's Department employed on the improved system of sewerage; the rent paid under said lease to be charged to the appropriation for Improved Sewerage.

Gordon Dexter, for rooms at No. 2 Pemberton square, by the Committee on Public Buildings under the authority of an order of the City Council approved Oct. 29, 1877, providing that the city pay a proportionate part of the expense for heating, attendance and care of said rooms, be and the same is hereby repealed.

Read twice and passed. Sent down.

Amusement Licenses Granted—Morris Brothers' Minstrels, to exhibit at Beethoven Hall for two weeks, commencing Dec. 24; William Edwards, to give an athletic exhibition at Beethoven Hall on Jan. 7, 1878; A. P. Peck, to give an exhibition of wrestling at Music Hall on Dec. 31.

Hack Licenses Granted—William Sweeney, 191 Commonwealth avenue; Reuben E. Savage, corner Marlborough and Fairfield streets.

Ordered, That the license granted on April 30, 1877, to James G. Pierce, at 25 Howard street, as a pawnbroker and a dealer in second-hand articles, and also the license granted the same day to Thomas Hulk to deal in second-hand articles at 136 Ninth street, be revoked for cause. Read twice and passed.

Ordered, That his Honor the Mayor be requested to petition the Legislature at its next session for the passage of an act authorizing the Board of Aldermen to grant permission to worthy persons in necessitous circumstances to occupy temporarily portions of the public streets for the sale of fruits, with consent of the proprietors or occupants of the estates in front of which such stands may be placed. Read twice and passed. Sent down.

SUPERINTENDENT OF PAWN BROKERS.

Alderman Fitzgerald presented the annual report of the Superintendent of Pawnbrokers, for the past nine months, April to Dec. 15, 1877:

Stolen property recovered.....	$5,081.50
Property awaiting settlement.....	200.00
Fees collected for licenses and paid to the City Clerk.....	792.00
Pawnbrokers licensed and doing business..	84
Second-hand dealers licensed and doing business.....	378
Pawnbrokers' licenses cancelled.....	4
Complaints against pawnbrokers investigated.....	220
Complaints in court for violation of ordinances.....	3
Complaints against junk dealers investigated.....	84
Cases in court against junk dealers for violation of the ordinances.....	3
Important case in court awaiting trial, for property stolen July 30, amounting to.....	$900.00
Second-hand dealer's license revoked.....	1

I would suggest to the committee the importance of amending the ordinance in relation to pawnbrokers, making it compulsory to keep jewelry, watches, musical instruments, opera glasses, and all articles not of a perishable nature, for six months after the time for which the article was pawued. I find a great deal of trouble arising from the fact that there is no law compelling the brokers to keep the goods a specified time before selling. (In New York the time is one year.)

The rate of interest, also, is very much higher here than in New York, Philadelphia or San Francisco. In New York the rate made by law is twenty-five per cent. per annum on loans not exceeding $25, and ten per cent. on loans exceeding $25, under penalty of $100 for each offence.

In Boston the custom is for the brokers to charge five per cent. per week; but I find many that charge twenty per cent. per week, and a few make terms at a less rate than five per cent. per week. It seems to me that something should be done to make an ordinance regulating this important matter. I would recommend that 2½ per cent. per week be the maximum on all articles up to $20, under the penalty of $100 for each offence.

The fee in Boston is only $2 for each license issued for pawnbrokerage, and in New York the sum of $50 is charged, and a great many brokers in this city are willing to pay $100 for a license, in order that the business may be conducted by proper parties, and in a fair and honest manner; and they should be made to give two sureties, in the sum of $500, conditioned for the due observance of all such ordinances made or in force respecting pawnbrokers, during the continuance of such license. By this means we can have a better class of men engaged in the brokerage business, and it will have the effect of driving out the bad ones, and bringing the pawnbrokerage business up to a proper business standard. As it is now, there are some very fine men in this business, but it seems to me that there are now altogether too many small shops in the pawnbroker's business in this city for the good of the city of Boston.

I would recommend that the pawnbrokers be compelled to close their places of business at 8 P. M. in summer and 7 P. M. in winter, under a penalty of $50 for each offence.

And in relation to dealers in second-hand clothing, I respectfully suggest a new form of license to govern their purchases and sales. I would recommend a new form of license for the dealers in second-hand clothing, confining them to purchases of all kinds of clothing, boots, shoes, etc., but preventing them from dealing in jewelry of any kind, such as watches, chains, silver or gold, opera glasses, firearms, etc., etc., and requiring them to close at 7 P. M. in winter and 8 P. M. in summer.

JAS. K. CROWLEY, Supt. Pawnbrokers.

Placed on file.

SWETT STREET.

Alderman Clark offered an order—That the City Collector be and he is hereby authorized to receive the respective amounts subscribed by the various parties for the laying out of Swett street as full payment of the betterment assessed upon their several estates for said laying out. Read twice and passed. Sent down.

COMMERCIAL-POINT BRIDGE.

Alderman Clark offered an order—That his Honor the Mayor be requested to petition the State Legislature at its next session for such legislation as will enable the city of Boston, the county of Suffolk and the town of Quincy to connect said city of Boston at Commercial Point with the town of Quincy by a bridge to Squantum, the expense of building and maintaining the same to be apportioned among the several parties as the Legislature may direct. Read twice and passed. Sent down.

ORDINANCES.

Alderman Breck submitted the following from the Committee on Ordinances:

Report on the order to examine the ordinance in relation to finance and report such an amendment as will make the same conform to the statutes of this Commonwealth—that by the amendment to the ordinance in relation to finance, passed on the 27th of March, 1877, and the 10th of April, the supposed points of difference between the statutes and ordinances were removed, and therefore no further action is necessary on the part of the City Council. Read and accepted. Sent down.

Report on the order to consider the expediency of reporting an ordinance requiring all salaried city officials, except the License Commissioners, to devote their time to the city, and not engage in active business—that in their opinion it would be inexpedient to adopt such an ordinance. Accepted. Sent down.

STREETS.

Alderman Clark, from the Committee on Streets on the part of the Board, submitted the following:

Order to pay the Boston Society of Redemptorist Fathers $440, for land taken and all damages occasioned by the widening of Tremont street. Read twice and passed.

Order to quit on Shelby street forthwith. Passed.

MARKET.

Alderman Slade submitted the following from the Committee on Market:

Report in favor of approval of the transfer of lease of stalls Nos. 9 and 11 Faneuil Hall Market to William Prior, Jr., and Benjamin Jackson, by G. W. Hollis. Accepted.

Ordered, That from the first day of January, 1878, the rent to be paid to the city by Charles E. Morrison, for his occupation of a portion of cellar No. 14 Faneuil Hall Market, shall be at the rate of $882.00 per annum, payable quarterly; and the rent to be paid by Severance & Haley, for their occupation of a portion of said cellar, shall be at the rate of $258.00 per annum, payable quarterly.

TREES TO BE REMOVED.

Alderman Clark offered an order—That the Superintendent of the Common, etc., be directed to remove the tree standing on Washington street near Newcomb street, and the tree standing in the sidewalk of 27 Arch street, Ward 12; said trees being deemed obstructions to the public travel. Read twice and passed.

POLICE RULES AND REGULATIONS.

On motion of Alderman Breck, the police rules and regulations were taken from the table and specially assigned for consideration at the next meeting at five o'clock.

CLAIM OF JOHN RADDIN.

On motion of Alderman Dunbar, the report of leave to withdraw on petition of John Raddin for compensation for a set of wheels furnished for Engine No. 7, was taken from the table.

Alderman Slade said the matter was laid upon the table on his motion, but he knew nothing about the case. The wheels are attached to some engine and Mr. Raddin claims that he is entitled to some compensation for them. He asked for an explanation from the Committee on Claims.

Alderman O'Brien—The Committee on Claims gave Mr. Raddin a patient hearing. They ascertained that he had furnished these wheels to the city of Boston, and had never received pay for them. His claim had previously been referred to the Fire Department, and they could find no agreement whatever with Mr. Raddin. We inquired from all who could give us any information upon the subject. The following is a letter from Mr. Damrell, which I will read:

BOSTON, July 3, 1877.

To the Chairman and Committee on Claims: Gentlemen—Not being able to be present at a hearing on Thursday last in the matter of Mr. Raddin, I felt my duty to write you as to the facts in the case. In 1866 Mr. Raddin asked permission to apply his patent to a set of wheels which had been set aside as unsafe, he agreeing to put the wheels in perfect repair with his patent applied if the department would agree to give them a fair and honorable test. The wheels were placed on Engine No. 7, the engine being one of the heaviest in the department; the test was a severe one, and the wheels proved equal to every emergency. Letters of indorsement and approval were given to Mr. Raddin, to enable him to introduce his patent into the several department, as well as Eastern Railroad. If the department had applied his patent to any other set of wheels than those described, there would have been an agreement made as to cost, including the royalty; but there being but two sets of iron wheels in the department, including the ones fitted up as an experiment, the committee did not deem it best to apply the patent to the other set, and so the matter dropped, Mr. Raddin expressing entire satisfaction with the testimonials presented as to their utility, etc. I therefore cannot understand how Mr. Raddin can consistently present a claim against the city for that which he solicited, namely, a privilege to apply his patent to enable him to show its merits, that he might be better able to introduce it into the market.

I have the honor to be yours, gentlemen, with respect,
JOHN S. DAMRELL.

I would say also that Mr. Raddin impressed me as a very simple-minded man. He was so anxious to introduce his wheels to the notice of the public that he overlooked almost everything about money matters, and he only thought some years afterwards that the Eastern Railroad and the city of Boston owed him some money. He evidently furnished these wheels to the city of Boston. They did some good service in the Water Department, and they are still used by the city of Boston. But his claim is outlawed and he has no legal claim against the city, and therefore the Committee on Claims deemed it best to give him leave to withdraw. He certainly has some equitable claim against the city, if his advertisement is not an offset for his wheels.

Alderman Dunbar—Mr. Raddin claims, I believe, the amount of money paid out for labor and materials, and nothing more. The city has used these wheels and benefited by them, and received a good many more times the worth of the money he has paid. It seems to me he ought to be paid.

Alderman Slade—How much is Mr. Raddin's bill?

Alderman O'Brien—$315.76.

Alderman Clark—The chairman of the Committee on Claims admits that Mr. Raddin has a claim in equity, and if it is outlawed it is our duty to pay that claim just as much as if he had a legal claim. If he has furnished a car wheel of the value of $315, and the city accepted it, and it is in service now, he ought to be paid for it.

Alderman O'Brien—I merely spoke for myself when I considered that Mr. Raddin had an equitable claim. The report of the committee was leave to withdraw. As I said before, Mr. Raddin overlooked money matters. He was comparatively well off then, and considerably poor now.

Alderman Gibson—While the committee report leave to withdraw, I don't see, unless we have some additional evidence, why we should vote $315 out of the city treasury to pay this claim.

Alderman Clark—The chairman of the committee admits that he has an equitable claim. When was it done?

Aldermen O'Brien—In 1866. I would again call attention to the letter of Mr. Damrell. [The Alderman read the letter again.] The wheels were put on engine 7, one of the heaviest in the department. The test was a severe one and they proved equal to every emergency. They certainly did good service.

Alderman Clark—I would like to read the bill of items:

"LYNN, May 8, 1866.

Cash paid and expense in remodelling the wheels on Fire Engine No. 7, Boston:

Cash paid George T. McLauthlin for pattern..	$23.20
"    to Amoskeag Manufacturing Company, iron spokes.....	120.70
"    to Draper Brothers for castings....	54.36
"    to C. M. Clapp & Co., rubbers.....	37.50
"    to Breed, for teaming out and back wheels.....	12.00
To 170 hours' labor, with power, at 40c.....	68.00

$315.76

"The above does not include expenses in fitting up to do the work."

I move that the matter be recommitted to the Committee on Claims, with a request that they report at the next meeting.

Alderman O'Brien—I think it would be useless to recommit it. We may possibly have one more meeting, and I have my doubts whether the committee would reconsider and recommend any different action.

Alderman Viles—If the bill had n't been outlawed, would the committee have considered that he had a legal claim?

Alderman O'Brien—One other argument against Mr. Raddin was that he put them on as an experiment, and if they were not satisfactory to the city of Boston he was to remove them. It was supposed that the indorsement of the city of Boston would be sufficient remuneration and enable him to sell his wheels to other parties.

Alderman Clark—I move as a substitute that the bill be paid.

Alderman Thompson—This matter was before the Committee on Claims, and they realized the fact that if there was a claim against the city, somebody must have contracted it. They endeavored to have Mr. Damrell present on both occasions, but he was unable to appear at the time they met; but that letter came, and I think it had a great deal of influence upon the minds of the committee. It seems to me it would be wise to recommit it to the committee; they will come to some conclusion, and after they report the Board can act. The whole matter will be fresh in their minds, and they can explain it to the Board. But I do not approve of going back upon the report of the committee without giving some reason for so doing. I don't object to Mr. Raddin being paid if the price is right. There must have been some understanding between Mr. Raddin and Mr. Damrell.

Alderman O'Brien—There is no evidence of any agreement in City Hall where any party negotiated with Mr. Raddin. The only evidence was that the wheels have been used.

Alderman Thompson—Mr. Damrell knows about the price, whether or not it is right; and I don't object to the city paying him if it is the right price.

Alderman Clark withdrew the substitute, and on his motion the report was recommitted to the Committee on Claims. Sent down.

REPORTS CALLED FOR.

Alderman Clark called for a report from the Committee on Paving on the petition of the Union Railway for leave to run their cars to Milk street, and Alderman Robinson said he believed that the committee had reported upon it already, giving them leave to withdraw, but it appeared that he was mistaken, and on motion of Alderman Clark the committee were requested to report thereon at the next meeting of the Board.

Alderman Clark called for a report from the Committee on Police on the order introduced by him to compel tramps to work for the lodgings furnished by the city at the station houses.

Alderman Thompson said there was also a petition from citizens of Charlestown, asking for the paving of Main street, and he desired a report on that subject.

STABLE ON DARTMOUTH STREET.

On motion of Alderman Viles, the vote of the Board giving Robert Treat Paine, Jr., leave to withdraw on petition for leave to occupy a stable on Dartmouth street was reconsidered and re-committed to the Committee on Health on the part of the Board.

Adjourned, on motion of Alderman O'Brien.

PAPERS FROM THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

Mandamus from Supreme Judicial Court for continuance of tolls on East Boston Ferries. Placed on file.

Reference to Committee on Public Buildings of an order to assign to Police Department a room in City Hall, Charlestown, and to alter the same for a business office for Station 15. Concurred.

Report leave to withdraw on petition of John O'Connell, to be paid for services rendered by request of police. Accepted in concurrence.

Report no further action necessary on subject of ordinances on finance conforming to statutes. Accepted in concurrence.

Report of Committee on Bathing. (City Doc. No. 100.) Accepted in concurrence.

Report and order to allow Owen Harrington to inter two bodies in his lot in St. Joseph's Cemetery. Order read twice and passed.

Order to receive the amounts subscribed as full payment of betterment for laying out Swett street.

Mr. Sampson of Ward 17 requested an explanation of the order, but as none was given he moved to lay it on the table, which was carried.

Order to ratify a clause in lease of rooms 3 Pemberton square, so that the city shall pay a portion of expense for heating, attendance and care.

Mr. Mowry of Ward 11 asked for an explanation of the order and Mr. Spenceley of Ward 19 replied that the same arrangement had been made verbally for the past ten years, and that Mr. Dexter desired to have it continued in the lease. If the order is not passed the city would have to put in a heating apparatus.

On motion of Mr. Spenceley, the rule was suspended and the order was read twice and passed in concurrence.

Order for Mayor to execute lease of rooms 74 Tremont street, at $1400 per year, as a branch of City Engineer's office on subject of improved sewerage. Ordered to a second reading.

THE CLAIM OF JOHN RADDIN.

A report of leave to withdraw on petition of John Raddin to be paid for a set of wheels furnished for Steam Fire Engine 7 came down committed to the Joint Committee on Claims.

Mr. Sampson of Ward 17—I hope the Council will non-concur. The Committee on Claims had two patient hearings, and this is evidently a claim that cannot be entertained. The circumstances are stated in a letter by Mr. Damrell, the Chief Engineer at the time these wheels were in use. The claim is for wheels placed upon Fire Engine No. 7 in 1866. The agreement was made with Mr. Bird, who was Chief Engineer then, that they would be furnished free to the city, and if they proved to be satisfactory, the Chief Engineer was to give a certificate to that effect, so that Mr. Raddin could refer to the city as having found the wheels satisfactory. Mr. Damrell was unable to come before the committee, but he sent a letter, which I will now read for the information of the Council.

Mr. Sampson read the letter from Mr. Damrell, which was read to the Board of Aldermen last Monday by Alderman O'Brien, and continued—

There is no question but that this gentleman put those wheels on in 1866, but until this year—eleven years subsequent—he has never made any claim for compensation. It seems to me to be useless to refer it back to the committee at the close of this year, and I trust the Council will non-concur.

Mr. McGaragle of Ward 8—Before the gentleman's motion to non-concur is put, it is due to one of my most worthy constituents that I should make a statement of the facts in his case. Mr. E. W. James has taken upon himself the settlement of this estate since the death of Mr. Raddin. As everybody knows, he is a philanthropist, ready to lend a helping hand to any one. The Fire Department has reported in many cases that those wheels were of immense value to the city of Boston. I cannot state the case exactly as I would like to, as I had to take his word for it. His statement is that the city of Boston agreed to let him furnish those wheels for the heaviest engine in use; that they were used for seven years, and the agreement was that they were to be paid for to the amount of $350. That, I believe, is what Mr. James says. The city has never paid for them, and all he asks now is the actual expenditure of money he made in applying them to the engine—about $315. I don't know anything about Mr. Raddin, but I believe he has been dead some time. Mr. James told me that the original Raddin was dead, and that he was settling up the estate, and that he had also a similar claim against the Eastern Railroad. It hope this matter will not be non-concurred in, but laid upon the table, and I will endeavor to post myself upon the facts by the next meeting. The gentleman who has charge of the estate is a worthy constituent of mine, and I feel in duty bound to defend his case, as I know he is always right.

Mr. Mowry—I understand that the identical Mr. Raddin has been before the committee more than once. Has any gentleman seen any agreement in writing for the use of these wheels?

Mr. McGaragle—I intended to say that I had not. I got all the information I have from the party prosecuting this claim.

Mr. Howes of Ward 18—This man has appeared before the committee twice; he certainly was not dead at that time, but appeared to be unaccountably lively. In regard to the use of those wheels, it was entirely an accommodation on the part of the Fire Department that he put them on at all. The engine was thoroughly supplied with wheels which were taken off to allow him to put these on as a test for his accommodation and their recommendation. The point is just the same as if a man should ask to paint your house free of cost with some new sort of paint he wanted to advertise; you might not want to have your house painted, but would say go ahead; and then when he found that his paint did not sell very well would come to you and want you to pay for it. The case has been able set forth before the committee on two occasions by Mr. James, and the committee were unanimously of the opinion that the claim should not be entertained, and I trust it will not now.

Mr. Ruffin of Ward 9—I look upon this recommitment as very harmless. No harm will come to the city by referring it to the committee again. I understand there is some newly-discovered evidence that those parties propose to bring before the committee. Inasmuch as the chief witness for Mr. Raddin was not before the committee, and inasmuch as there is material evidence which he may produce, I cannot see any harm in allowing him to present his case. If he has no case, the committee can so report. Possibly it may be of some benefit to the city. Having had leave to withdraw, he may bring an action against the city; and if it can be disposed of amicably I think it would be better to give him another hearing.

Mr. Sampson of Ward 17—I am somewhat surprised at the remarks of the last speaker, who is a lawyer; for this claim is outlawed. There is no newly-discovered evidence except that of Mr. Bird, who says there was no agreement—and he so stated distinctly. With the evidence before them the committee unanimously gave him leave to withdraw. The reason I object to its reference to the Committee on Claims is that there are several more cases waiting to be heard this year. I trust the Council will non-concur.

The Council refused to concur in the recommitment—17 for, 34 against. Sent up.

DUTIES OF CITY OFFICERS.

A report came down that it is inexpedient to adopt an ordinance to require salaried officers to devote their whole time to the city and not actively engage in other business. The question was upon the acceptance of the report.

Mr. Howes of Ward 18—I believe I introduced the order referring this subject to the committee, and it seems to me the treatment of it by the committee is unusually short and indefinite. I should like the committee to state why officers receiving high salaries should be allowed to neglect city work and take up other work of their own.

Mr. Crocker of Ward 9—I will endeavor to state in a few words the reasons which led the committee to make this report. They were instructed to consider the expediency of reporting an ordinance requiring all salaried officers to devote their time exclusively to the city. There are some salaried officers to whom the rule might well be applied; there are others to whom it would be inexpedient to apply the rule. For instance, school teachers; they may have time to attend to other things besides teaching in the public schools without detriment to the public service. There are no doubt other people receiving salaries from the city in whose cases it would be plainly inexpedient to require them to abstain from services other than those they render the city. It seems that for these reasons it is impossible to make a general rule, and the committee did not feel called upon to make a rule for special cases.

Mr. Clarke of Ward 22—Have the City Council anything to do with school teachers so far as their time of service is concerned?

Mr. Crocker—I believe the salaries of the school teachers are fixed by the School Committee; but whether a general ordinance of the city might not reach them, I should think would be a matter of considerable doubt. At any rate, I merely mention them as one class of persons receiving salaries from the city to whom it would not be well to apply this rule. The Committee on Ordinances did not feel called upon to pick out the particular officers to whom they thought it would be desirable to apply the rule, and therefore they reported back that it was inexpedient to apply the general rule proposed.

Mr. Howes of Ward 18—I had hoped that the committee would do just the work the gentleman says they did not feel like doing. They had had the subject under consideration for several months, and, it seems to me, they might have picked out those departments standing upon that basis. To illustrate, the Fire Department are required to give their time exclusively to the city; the Health Commissioners give such time to the city as they please, and give such time as they please to work outside; both men are paid equal salaries and are supposed to be of about equal ability. There is no reason why one set of men should receive such large licenses and another set none. I think it is unjust. Now, the gentleman states the case of the school teachers. It is currently reported that one of the supervisors, who gets a high salary, devotes most of his time to giving private lessons to young men, preparing them for college; that is something which the School Board can look after if they please. But there are a number of instances here in City Hall which should be corrected, it seems to me, and in introducing that order and having it referred to the committee, I hoped that they would do something in that line. But they seem to have egregiously failed. They state that some wrong does exist, but they do nothing about it. I trust that the report will not be accepted, but that the matter will be referred to the next City Government.

At the request of Mr. Crocker the President read the original order referring the subject to the committee.

Mr. Crocker—The order, as proposed by the gentleman, was to consider the expediency of passing an ordinance requiring all salaried officers to devote their entire time to the city. If the gentleman intended that the committee should find out what he says he intended, he was very unfortunate in expressing himself. The committee could not be expected to know what the gentleman intended, unless he stated it. They considered what the gentleman proposed, but they did not consider what he now says he had in his mind, but did not state in his order.

Mr. Howes—Members of the Council will see that in order to be as specific as the gentleman thinks I should be, I would have been required to designate each office in which some correction should be made. That was just the duty which the committee should do. I might be biased by personal feeling; but the committee could examine it unbiased. The original order was to consider the expediency of requiring such salaried officer to devote his entire time to the city; then, at the suggestion of some one, it was inserted that the License Commissioners be excepted, as it was evident they were not paid a sufficient amount to put such an obligation upon them. But the whole tenor of the debate showed the committee what the intention of the Council was. I trust the report will not be accepted, but that the matter will go over to next year.

Mr. Wolcott of Ward 11—I think the committee considered the real question at issue was not whether certain officers devote their whole time to the work, but whether they do the work, and we thought that was rather for the committee which has the oversight of the department to look into. For instance, if the officers in one department ask for further assistance, then the question properly comes up, Are you giving your whole time to the duty? and then the committee would make such report as they see fit. If it became evident to the committee that more officers were employed than is necessary, they can report to the City Government. The difficulty in most departments is that the work is very great in one part of the year, and then it decreases; and it is very hard to say that men should give their whole time to the duty when it is not necessary. The committee found this practical difficulty, and thought that in most cases the committees on the various departments might make such recommendation as are necessary.

On motion of Mr. Howes, the subject was referred to the next City Government. Sent up.

BRIDGE TO SQUANTUM.

An order came down to petition the Legislature for authority for the city of Boston, the county of Norfolk and the town of Quincy to connect said city with said town by a bridge to Squantum.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10 said no petitions had been presented for this bridge, and desired an explanation, he being under the impression that it was a scheme to promote the sale of house lots in Squantum.

Mr. Clarke of Ward 22 said a petition had been presented and referred to the Street Commissioners, who conferred with the Norfolk County Commissioners and found they had no authority to build a bridge there. There is an act allowing a private corporation to do so, but the City Solicitor says they cannot build under that act. Before he went to Europe the City Engineer told Mr. Clarke that if the improved sewerage works were located at Moon Island a bridge would be necessary at the point named, but as it was needed by Norfolk County, Boston should not pay the entire expense. The cost will be fifteen or twenty thousand dollars, and the question is, whether the city shall pay the entire expense or not?

On motion of Mr. Richardson of Ward 10, the order was referred to the next City Government. Sent up.

CURBSTONE FRUIT-VENDERS.

An order came down for a petition to the Legislature for an act authorizing the Board of Aldermen to grant permits to worthy and needy persons to temporarily occupy portions of the streets for the sale of fruit, with the consent of the proprietors of estates in front of which stands may be placed.

Mr. Webster of Ward 3—This question has been hanging along for some time in a very indefinite manner, and it is about time it was settled beyond the prospect of any adverse decision. It is very short-sighted policy to spend millions in street improvements, and then allow the sidewalks to be obstructed with fruit stands. It is gross injustice to real-estate owners and fruit dealers in particular. It is well said that competition is the life of trade; but no branch of business can compete with gentlemen having better stands and paying no rent or taxes. This order is a failure, because it is notorious that most of the people who have stands are able to earn an honest living in some other way. However honest the intention of the Board of Aldermen to grant licenses only to poor people, many have obtained these permits who have money in bank, and might just as well engage in some other occupation. I don't see how any person who gives the matter five or ten minutes' thought can fail to see that the thing is wrong and a very great evil. I move that the order be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—I hope the order will not be indefinitely postponed, but that it will be sent to the Legislature for them to act upon. I believe it to be the best order ever introduced here, and that it is for the best interests of the poor people, who can buy fruit at least ten per cent. cheaper than in any market and stores generally. The day before Christmas Malaga grapes were selling at twenty cents a pound at a Summer-street stand, and at a store on Essex street they were thirty-five cents. I hope we shall concur in the petition for the act.

Mr. Webster of Ward 3—It is all very well, theoretically, to buy goods cheap; but why not have our dry goods cheap? Why should fruit dealers alone be subjected to this class of competition? We can close up all the fruit stands and give the store keepers the same chance the dry-goods dealers have. Every argument used for this class of trade is equally applicable to every branch of trade.

Mr. Flynn—Another argument is that it gives employment to hundreds of poor people who earn a living, and if they are deprived of this opportunity the city would have to feed them. If they can make a living by peddling on the street, and save the city from aiding them, the Council ought to be the last to stop them.

Mr. Pierce of Ward 21—If the argument of the gentleman from Ward 3 is carried out, we should close up Quincy Market, and do away with any idea of taking Mercantile wharf, or giving any facilities for distributing provisions at low rates. I agree with the gentleman from Ward 13 that we should do what we can to promote the sale of a large supply of fruit in the city. It is one of the most healthy articles of diet, and if it is freely sent into the families of the poor, I believe it will be a benefit to the general health of the city. I believe they cause no obstruction. The gentleman must have seen that, if there is any danger of a collision, the owner of the stand gets out of the way.

Mr. McGaragle of Ward 8—I hope we shall concur. While I do not think it good policy to widen streets for the special benefit of horse railroads, while I think the peddlers have some rights, I do not think the sidewalks should be obstructed by any kind of business. You won't have to travel a great distance from the corner of Elm and Washington streets to find a sidewalk very much obstructed. The gentleman says, "Why not get law cheap?" Those who have sat here this year have got theirs pretty cheap; and as the gentleman is reelected, I think that about the time he gets through next year he will have his belly full.

The motion to indefinitely postpone was lost.

Mr. Webster of Ward 3—If this is really so great a benefit to poor people, as I am as philanthropic as any one I will move to amend by adding the word "groceries," as they are as important as fruit.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—The amendment is too absurd for any gentleman to offer. If the gentleman wants to kill this order, let him do it man fashion, and not attempt to load it with that amendment.

Mr. Webster of Ward 3—I think the gentleman last up should be the last to speak about killing anything man fashion.

Mr. Webster's amendment was lost, and the order was read a second time and passed in concurrence.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Order to remit a tax assessed upon Isaac L. Rich for 1876—$50.80. Read twice and passed in concurrence.

Order to receive for 1878, upon a lease given to Thomas W. Carter, $2000, on the terms and conditions therein set forth. Amended on motion of Mr. Brintnall of Ward 5, by making the amount payable in monthly instalments of $166.67, and as amended passed. Sent up.

An ordinance in relation to the records of public institutions and departments. Passed. Sent up.

Order to purchase of W. R. Huston his right and title to about 150 feet of land enclosed in Washington Schoolhouse lot, at not exceeding $200.

Mr. Spenceley of Ward 19 offered an amendment—And with the restriction that said land shall never be built upon, and that said Huston, his heirs and assigns shall have the right to use said land in common with the city of Boston, and its assigns, for a driveway, and with the reservation that all parts of the buildings of said Huston shall be allowed to project over said land in the same manner and to the same extent that they may project over the same.

The amendment was adopted, after an explanation by Mr. Spenceley of Ward 19, and the order, as amended, passed. Sent up.

COMMERCIAL STREET.

On motion of Mr. Flynn of Ward 13, the Council took up the special assignment for eight o'clock P. M., viz.:

Order as amended for a loan of $500,000 for widening, grading and repaving Commercial street, between Eastern avenue and Charles River Bridge, and for paying damages occasioned thereby.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10—One single point in the amendment adopted at the last meeting has been called to my attention. It provides that no part of said sum shall be expended until the abutters, corporations and other persons interested in said widening shall agree to contribute such sums as will with the said $500,000 be sufficient to cover said expense. Criticism has been made upon this amendment, and I want to ask the mover if he has considered the point, whether, if this amendment is left in this order, any part of that $500,000 could be recovered by the city by way of betterments; whether the effect of the agreement on the part of the abutters who pay all sums over $500,000 is not in law a release from paying any part of the $500,000, and if it will not defeat the object of the mover that persons benefited by this widening should bear the proportional burdens of it? If the amendment is attached to the order the attitude of the city is something like this: We appropriate $500,000 to widen the street provided they will make up the deficiency, if any. We will suppose the deficiency is $100,000; they agree to pay that. The city then goes on and widens the street, and parties are called upon to pay $100,000, and they do so. The question then comes up, when they pay what they have agreed to, can we assess betterments upon them to help pay the $500,000. I had not much time to confer with gentlemen familiar with the betterment law, but this is something that ought to be considered, because if the abutters and parties interested are not going to contribute to this expense even of the $500,000 in the ordinary usual and equitable method in which streets are now widened, by imposing the burdens upon those who receive the largest benefit, I should be against it.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—I had not considered the question proposed by the gentleman from Ward 10 from just the point of view from which he looks at it; but it seems to me that the answer to his question is this: The practical thing we are striving to attain in passing this amendment is to force certain persons, who cannot be touched by any betterment law now in existence, to come in and contribute a portion of this expense—that is the railroad corporations who own the tracks of the Union Railway and are interested in having the street widened. This amendment does touch them, because if they are really desirous of having the street widened they will put their hands into their pockets and pay for it. It has been a mooted question whether this street should be widened, and there are many arguments for and against it. I say the best persons to determine this are those who use the street and run cars through it; and if it is to be a benefit to them, they will agree to pay a reasonable portion of the expense. If the Street Commissioners find that $500,000 are not sufficient, then the corporations and others must make up the difference. If the Street Commissioners think best to widen under the betterment act they will go ahead; but I cannot see that because a person voluntarily agrees to contribute, that that takes him out of the law. He merely says he is willing to contribute a little more. It might rest in equity with the City Council to say that it might not be just to force him to pay more than he agreed to. It is not important that the city should assess a betterment; but I should say that the Street Commissioners could assess a betterment upon a man after he has voluntarily contributed.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—I don't understand that the street is to be laid out under the betterment law; and it certainly cannot be under this amendment. If laid out under the betterment law, with these restrictions, I should oppose it; because it would be better to appropriate one million dollars and assess betterments than to compel the commissioners to widen on the water side, for every corporation and land owner would surrender his estate and involve the city in an expenditure of more than a million dollars. It is to be widened under the offset law, so that the commissioners can receive quite a large portion of the expense, as the parties have agreed to pay. I should have opposed the amendment had I been present at the last meeting; but, as a gentleman has said, half a loaf is better than no bread, and I shall vote for it.

Mr. Crocker of Ward 9—I agree with the gentleman from Ward 13 that it is unadvisable to widen this street under the betterment law, because, if parties surrender their lands to the city under present circumstances, it would be dangerous for the city to render itself liable by such surrender. If these parties agree to pay the excess over $500,000, my idea is that it would not prevent any betterment from being assessed them, though they might fairly claim that the amount assessed upon them should be accounted as a part of what they agreed to pay. For instance, if a man agreed to pay $10,000 in all, and a betterment of $5000 should be assessed, that would leave him $5000 to pay. The theory of my colleague's amendment is that the city shall not have to pay more than $500,000, less what betterments or offsets the city may get from other parties by agreement. I should like to suggest an amendment that instead of the parties "agreeing to pay," they shall "give bonds for the payment" of the excess.

Mr. Thompson—If there is no objection I accept the amendment. I might call the attention of the gentleman from Ward 10 to the order in regard to Swett street, which is to allow the receipt of the money subscribed, and where the betterment was probably less than the subscription.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10—Swett street was widened under the betterment law.

Mr. Thompson—I agree that this street should not be laid out under the betterment law, because any small amount of betterment we might collect from the side streets would not offset the large damage that would have to be paid.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—Swett street was laid out under the betterment law, and parties living at a great distance subscribed amounts to pay for it.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10—I understand that that order is to settle lawsuits. Some of the parties refused to pay, and suits were brought. The City Solicitor told me that some had failed and some had very little money, and that some will pay if they can be released from betterments.

Mr. Flynn—Is n't there a lien upon the estate until the betterment is paid?

Mr. Richardson—There is, if a street is laid out under the betterment law; but there can be no lien where the betterment law don't apply, which is to be the case in Commercial street.

Mr. Pierce of Ward 24—There is a decided objection to the amendment which has not been alluded to. Suppose the estimate of the Street Commissioners should be $490,000, and it is found that the expense will be $1,000,000, what can we expect to get from the parties? We should be tied up to pay the whole expense, whatever it might be. I am not willing to let the whole thing go upon the estimate of the Street Commissioners, as our experience shows that their estimates are often under rather than over the expense.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10—Suppose you lay it out under the offset law, and the Commissioners estimate $450,000, and it turns out that the cost is $1,000,000. You have not started out under the betterment law and therefore cannot assess betterments; and consequently you will be a great deal worse off than you were before.

Mr. Thompson—The City Government must trust to the experience of the Street Commissioners to some extent. They should have brought in a plan. But this matter will come back to us next year with estimates, and the City Council must have wisdom to detect any estimate for $490,000 when the cost will be $1,000,000. If there is anything wrong they can reject it at the last moment before a dollar is spent.

Mr. Crocker's amendment requiring those interested to give bonds was adopted. The order as amended was rejected—yeas 46, nays 21—two-thirds being necessary:

Yeas—Messrs. Barry, Becching, Brintnall, Brown, Burke, Cannon, Clarke, Cox, Crocker, Cross, Dee, Doherty, Duggan, Fernald, D. A. Flynn, J. J. Flynn, Fraser, Ham, Jackson, Kelley (Ward 3), Kelley (Ward 6), Kidney, McDonald, Morrill, Mullane, Nugent, O'Connor, O'Donnell, Pearl, Perham, Roach, Roberts, Ruffin, Shepard, Sibley, Smardon, Souther, Spenceley, Thompson, Thorndike, Upham, Vose, Warren, E. R. Webster, G. B. Webster, Wilbur—46.

Nays—Messrs. Barnard, Blanchard, Blodgett, Coe, Danforth, Day, Fagan, Felt, Hibbard, Howes, McClusky, McGaragle, Mowry, J. H. Pierce, O. H. Pierce, Pratt, Reed, J. B. Richardson, M. W. Richardson, Sampson, Wolcott—21.

Absent or not voting—Messrs. Hiscock, Loughlin, Pope, Stone—4.

Later in the session the following action was taken:

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13 moved to suspend the rule in order that he might make a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the order for the widening and laying out of Commercial street was rejected.

Mr. Howes of Ward 18—I rise to a point of order, that the order has been once reconsidered and rejected and is now no longer entertainable by the Council.

The President—The Chair is of the opinion that the original order was so changed by reducing the amount to $500,000, and also by adding that corporations and abutters interested should bear a portion of the expense, that it is a different proposition from what it was originally, and therefore it would be in order to reconsider.

Mr. Howes of Ward 18—I appeal from the decision of the Chair.

The President—The question is, shall the opinion of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Council? The Chair will call attention to the fact that the original order was to appropriate $800,000 as a special appropriation for the widening of Commercial street between Eastern avenue and Charles River Bridge, mainly on the water side. This was amended by changing the amount from $800,000 to $500,000, and by adding, provided that said street shall be widened mainly on the water side to a width not exceeding eighty feet, and provided further that if in the opinion of the Street Commissioners the cost of this improvement will exceed $500,000, no part of said sum shall be expended until the persons interested shall agree to give satisfactory bonds to add such sums of money as will with the appropriation of $500,000 be sufficient to cover said expense. The Chair is of the opinion that this amendment changes the original proposition.

Mr. Howes of Ward 18—I should like to state the reason for making the motion that I did to appeal from the decision of the Chair. It is this: To my mind the motion is one and indivisible; that is, the widening of Commercial street at an expense. The expense is merely a collateral part of the motion. If this ruling is sustained it will be possible to reconsider motions indefinitely. It would be possible to introduce an order for an expenditure of $100,000, and if it failed a reconsideration could be had on a motion to appropriate $99,999; and that failing, the amount could be reduced by a dollar, and so on through the list. I think the decision of the Chair in this matter is fallacious. I think that we have voted upon the matter of widening Commercial street, no matter whether it costs $500,000, $600,000, $700,000 or $800,000; and that the matter would have to come up as entirely new business in some other phase in order to be entertainable at this time.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—I think the gentleman upon reflection will remember that the question before the Council is not, shall Commercial street be widened? but, shall a certain sum of money be appropriated? The question whether Commercial street shall be laid out must come before another Council when the Street Commissioners send it before them. But the question before this Council is, shall we now appropriate $500,000 on certain conditions? The question which was formerly before the Council and which was reconsidered was, shall this Council appropriate $800,000? Evidently the main question was entirely different.

At the request of Mr. Sampson of Ward 17, the Chair read the orders.

Mr. Crocker of Ward 9—I will simply say that since I have been in the Council, it has been ruled several times that when a motion had been materially amended, it was in order to move a second reconsideration of the amended motion after the original motion had been once reconsidered. It seems to me that this belongs under that rule. We have once reconsidered our action upon one proposition, and here is a new proposition materially different, upon which we are at liberty to reconsider our action. I would suggest that this point of order is not well taken for another reason; that now the question is upon suspending the rule, that the gentleman may make a motion to reconsider; and even if it was contrary to our rules to reconsider, we might suspend the rule to give the gentleman a chance to make the motion.

The decision of the Chair was sustained, the rule was suspended, and the motion to reconsider prevailed. The order was then passed—48 to 19, as follows:

Yeas—Messrs. Barry, Beeching, Brintnall, Brown, Burke, Cannon, Clarke, Cox, Crocker, Closs, Day, Dee, Doherty, Duggan, Fernald, D. A. Flynn, J. J. R. Webster, G. B. Webster, Wilbur—48.

Nays—Messrs. Barnard, Blanchard, Blodgett, Coe, Danforth, Fagan, Felt, Hibbard, Howes, McGaragle, Mowry, J. H. Pierce, O. H. Pierce, Pratt, Reed, J. B. Richardson, M. W. Richardson, Sampson, Wolcott—19.

ROXBURY CANAL.

On motion of Mr. Sibley of Ward 5 the special assignment for nine o'clock was taken up, viz.:

Order for a loan of $392,000 for Roxbury Canal improvement, all moneys received to be applied for redemption, etc., of said loan, and preamble and order to take a certain parcel of land therein described for the abatement of the nuisance in and about Roxbury Canal. (City Doc. No. 92.)

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10—in all practical affairs it is much less difficult to correctly decide what ought to be done than it is to determine correctly how best to do it. In the matter before us, all agree that the evils arising from the present condition of this canal are no longer endurable, but how most expediently, and by what means most effectually, to put an end to them, are questions upon which all do not agree. Three plans are presented for it, each advocated by some whose opinions are entitled to consideration; and each is claimed to have some advantages over the others. One plan is to divert all sewage and drainage matter from the canal, dredge and clean it out thoroughly, permit thereafter no filth, poison or impurities to flow into it, thus removing and destroying the admitted cause of the nuisance, and you can then, it is said, allow the canal and dock to remain open for such commerce as may go there, with impunity; for it is stated, with truth, that the nuisance is not caused by the flow and ebb of the tides of the water of the ocean there, but is the result solely of the enormous amount of filth from the sewers and drains of 2755 houses poured into it, which the ebb tide is insufficient to carry out. In fine, if you should or can in any way remove this prolific cause of it, the nuisance itself, with its accompanying evils, will disappear. This plan would interfere with no one's wharf, water, or riparian privileges or rights, but would preserve and improve them, and all be accomplished at a mere trifling expense. No plan is or can be suggested which does not provide, as the first step to be taken, the diversion and exclusion of all sewage and drainage matter from the canal, and probably by carrying it into the new intercepting sewer ultimately. The objection made to this plan is, that the walls and land around the canal have become so saturated with the poison and filth, that a long time would elapse before they would be free from it; but it is said in answer to this that you could in no other way so quickly or effectually cleanse the dock or walls or extract from the land itself the poison and filth as by (after diverting from it all sewage and drainage) allowing the salt sea water to freely flow in and out with the tides, as it would, of course, twice each day. I suppose such large volumes of water and matter flow into the canal that the sea water now hardly ever reaches this end of the dock.

In the course of my investigations I have conferred with the Board of Health, and this afternoon I found on my desk the following:

BOSTON, Dec. 27, 1877.

J. B. Richardson, Esq.: Sir—In reply to yours of this date I will say, that if all the foul matter could be removed from the canal and no more be allowed to flow into it, the nuisance would be abated.

There are difficulties, however, in the way of securing these things.

It would be a very difficult job to thoroughly clean out the canal, if it could be done at all. The sewers which now empty into it could be discharged down nearer the Dover-street Bridge, but until the proposed intercepting sewer is built and the sewage of the city turned into it, the nuisance in the canal would soon be renewed by deposit from the foul waters of its vicinity. The foul mud, which reaches for a considerable distance beyond the walls on either side of the canal, would also, for a long time, furnish a source of contamination to the canal.

It is a long and sluggish canal, with a blind end reaching into a thickly populated section, and well calculated to receive and settle foul or refuse material from a variety of sources.

In my opinion the proposed diverting of the sewers to a point lower down the channel and the practicable cleaning will largely mitigate the nuisance, but solid filling with gravel is the only complete method of cure.

Mr. Keith differs with me, and believes that the nuisance can be abated by diverting the sewers and cleaning out the canal.

Mr. Boardman indorses the above.

Respectfully yours,

S. H. DURGIN, Chairman.

Inasmuch as a trial of this plan will really cost nothing, I should say that at least it is worthy of consideration. Another plan is to fill the canal and dock with solid earth, after, of course, diverting the sewages and drainage elsewhere, and pay the damages. This was the plan decided upon at the first of this municipal year, and the power to carry out which was what the City Council asked of the General Court at its last session; why that power was not given to the city would be difficult to explain to those who do not know what strong influence a combination of men of means, able to employ eminent counsel, are able to bring to bear in such a place upon such a measure.

The cost or expense to the city of carrying out this last plan could not, it seems to me, in any event, be anywhere near as much as by the plan before us, under the act, which we now have; and if what the Alderman from Ward 18 stated at the time of the passage of the order in the other branch is true, the city would not be liable to the payment of damages for simply filling up the canal. He said—

"I mean to say that the fee of the canal is in the city of Boston; that the reservations in all the conveyances insure to the city of Boston the right to run its scows in there and fill it up tomorrow, without trespassing upon the rights of anybody, so far as the canal is concerned. The conclusion I have arrived at is that the canal is simply a public highway, in which nobody but the public has acquired any right. I believe that such will be the decision. I venture to show these facts to the committee that they may have the benefit of my week's labor to the committee.

By the annexation act, the city of Boston acquired, among other public property belonging to Roxbury, land or marsh bordering on the Roxbury Canal and Albany street, and by deeds dated March 23, 1872, and recorded in the Registry of Deeds, lib. 1098, fol. 300 to 301, conveyed to Morse & Remick, and by deed of same date. This deed contains, as do all the deeds that have been given by any parties, to Boston, the following reservation, namely:

"The right to fill up the canal at any time without any claim for damages by the grantees, their heirs or assigns."

I doubt if the Alderman was wholly correct, but he is in part, and to that extent it is quite plain why wharf owners opposed our petition for an act authorizing the city to fill the canal and pay any damages. It is damages that these gentlemen want! they desire the city shall do something to damage them; like the clown in the play, who would provoke a kick in order to have the luxury of a suit for damages! Mr. President, I cannot doubt but that, if the City Council should still be of opinion that the best way to abate this nuisance is to fill up this canal, if properly presented the General Court at its next session will give to the city the right to do that, and pay merely for all damages occasioned thereby.

This act, under which alone the canal can now be refilled, or any land taken, requires the city to take property which is not necessary to be taken.

For example, look at the twelve houses on the corner of East Chester park and Harrison avenue. It is not proposed to remove these houses or raise them; the lots on which they stand do not extend down to within many feet of the canal. Why should the city be compelled to take this property, borrow money to pay for it, and run the risk of selling it again, when, if ever, there should be found a market for it? But then it is claimed that the city can resell it. How do they know that?

Sell it for what? and when? I for one do not believe that we are in a condition to enter upon a speculation of that sort, upon borrowed capital. An expenditure for what we do not need, even if procured at an apparently cheap price, is the greatest extravagance. And a hope that the city can buy or take property, hiring money to pay for it with, and sell it again without much loss in many ways, is a delusion. The cost of filling up the canal, as estimated by the committee, is $26,400. The value of the estates, that is, the land and buildings around the canal, included in the order, is $305,000. The other expenses (of the sewer to take off the sewage, and the new wall, both, are $59,000) are the same in either case. So that the difference in immediate outlay by these two plans, according to the committee, is $274,000. All of which as a present outlay can be avoided and saved, if the city own and have the right to fill the canal.

What we need is more knowledge of the facts, of the title to the canal, the extent of riparian rights, if any, upon it, and the probable damages we should have to pay if we should, if we can get the power, fill up the canal, but of which no estimate has been furnished to each branch of the Council. I disclaim any desire to delay, but haste makes waste; and I hope that we shall delay long enough to obtain from the law department of the city some further information as to the title, and the rights of the city in this canal, so that we can act intelligently in a matter of this importance and magnitude. I move that it be referred to the next City Government.

Mr. Wolcott of Ward 11—Mr. President, I have listened with a great deal of interest to the remarks of the gentleman from Ward 9, and they appear to me to have very great weight. In regard to the citation which he has made upon the remarks of the Alderman from Ward 19, I think I will say I have had shown me today an abstract of a title which I have not been able to trace, but the truth of which I have no reason to doubt, by which it appears that in 1830 the city of Boston conveyed to one Winslow Lewis, Jr., a large tract of land nearly surrounding the head of this canal or dock. The conveyance contained the following conditions: Said dock to be always kept open and unobstructed to navigation within 130 feet of the end thereof, and reserving to the city the right to take any part of the above-described land for a road or canal, or both, whenever they deem it expedient. This same tract of land, in 1852 was conveyed by the same Winslow Lewis to one James B. Doe, and in 1853, April 4th, the city of Boston gave a conveyance of the whole lot of land to the same James B. Doe, and also released all right, title and interest of the said city in and to said land and dock, and especially all conditions, restrictions and reservations attached to said land and dock. By that conveyance it would appear that James B. Doe received this land released from all conditions and reservations, and it would appear that the city no longer does hold the title to the dock, as has been stated. That, of course, has some reference to a large part of the remarks which the gentleman has made. But he has noticed certain difficulties in the act of the Legislature which may perhaps be well founded, and which we might possibly have hoped to improve upon by another attempt. I am very fully convinced, as I presume every one is who is familiar with the locality, of the great importance of a radical improvement there. At the same time I am equally convinced of the importance of our doing it in the most economical way to the city, and as the matter is still—even if my explanation of a part of the territory is found to hold—involved in some doubt, I should very gladly concur in the reference proposed by the gentleman from Ward 3.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10—I have just one word. I have today also, I suppose, seen the plans and the deeds to which the gentleman from Ward 11 refers; but the deeds to which I refer were since these. I am not certain about the estate to which he refers, whether it has rights in the canal; but I think I can say I know that some of the parties who claim to have privileges upon the docks have no rights in the canal. As to that, I think the city has the right to fill it up.

Mr. Mowry of Ward 11—In corroboration of what the gentleman from Ward 10 says, I think it can be safely asserted that one-tenth part of the canal which it is proposed to fill, the city has the right to fill without incurring any damages. Certainly they have the right in connection with one-third, if not one-half, of the canal which it is proposed to fill. Now, I maintain that there has been no project before this City Council connected with which there has been so much doubt as regards the rights of the city. There are certainly grave and numerous doubts as to the rights which the city of Boston has in connection with this canal, especially as regards filling it, and certainly I think it is very necessary to have this matter in such a shape as to enable us to vote intelligently upon it. Therefore I must refuse to vote in favor of this order until it is presented in such a shape that I may know what are the rights of the city of Boston in connection with this canal, and what are their rights, especially in connection with the filling of the same.

Mr. Sibley of Ward 5—As the gentleman from Ward 10 has discussed this matter very ably, and as he always does, fairly, I admit that there are grave doubts, and have been before the committee in reference to what was the best and practical way. Every one admits that it is a most intolerable nuisance, but how to get out of it does not seem to be so clear. We have tried to arrive at the best and the cheapest way for the city. The act of the Legislature we are told is the best we could get. Parties claim that it is what the city asked for, and that the gentleman who represented the city before the Legislature was satisfied with it. That I know nothing about. We have had hearings, and many gentlemen have appeared. The Committee on Health were ready to admit every word they stated. There have been several projects talked of in regard to what could be done. The chairman of the Committee on Health on the part of the Aldermen consulted Mr. Bradlee a week, and I might say a month. During the month of November I was not at City Hall and I am not so well informed as I should be in all that transpired during that period. But I am as anxious as any one, believing strongly that something should be done, and that immediately; that the cheapest way it can be done and answer the purpose, we should arrive at. The act of the Legislature looked to me to be too sweeping; it seemed to take too much property. We have been over the ground and I have been over it alone, with no committeeman with me. I have tried to talk with parties and to get at what they valued their real estate at, but it was utterly impossible to get at any conclusion in that direction. Here it is, presented in this form before us. It is a large sum of money, and it is a question for the Council to decide, whether we can get a better act. All acknowledge something should be done, and that immediately; but what can be done is not so clear, nor which way will be the cheapest. I am strongly opposed to voting money out of the treasury for the pleasure of voting it out. Economy of all things at the present time we should practice. The gentleman from Ward 10 has enlightened me on some facts I have been unable to know before. It is a question for the Council to decide. Of course, I shall be satisfied to have it go over, hoping that we may get something better from the coming Legislature than we did from the last.

Mr. Howes of Ward 18—By one or two remarks made to me by members of the Council I see that some of my statements are misinterpreted, or my meaning was. I am heartily in favor of abating this nuisance; indeed, it would be very strange if I were not, having lived in its immediate vicinity for some fifteen years. But the point in my mind is this: that the city ought not to spend such an excessive amount of money in abating a nuisance which requires an actual expenditure of but a small sum. The city already has a very large tract of property upon the Northampton-street District, and it seems unnecessary to load the city down with any more. As to the act of the Legislature it seems to me that we could improve upon that a great deal in the coming year. It is very well known that interested parties were at the State House during the process of legislation upon this subject, and used their efforts to secure the passage of a bill which sued their convenience. It seems to me that it would be very bad for the interests of the city to accept that legislation which comes from interested parties entirely. I think that in another attempt we could succeed in securing something far better, and I think we had better make that attempt.

Mr. Pratt of Ward 21—I have come to this, as I think we all do who have any knowledge of the locality, with an instinctive friendliness or disposition towards this question. I do not rise to offer any obstruction to the passage of the orders, but I noticed in looking over the report that the committee have taken pains to explain the smaller items in the statement of expense at sufficient length, perhaps, while they have passed over without any explanation or preparation of the mind for receiving it, the large item of $305,900 which is at the foot of page 3 of their report. I supposed when I took up the bill that we were to fill up the Roxbury Canal and do certain other things which were intimated in the other three items, namely, cost of filling the canal, cost of sea wall, cost of intercepting sewer to the outlet opposite Brookline street. But I have looked in vain for any explanation of this sum of $305,900, and I have listened in vain for it so far in this debate. I wish some member of the committee would kindly explain that matter to me.

The question was taken, and the motion to refer the order to the next City Government prevailed.

THE ANNUAL DINNER.

Mr. Beeching of Ward 1 called for the special assignment, which was the resolve that it is advisable to omit the annual dinner of this Council for the present year.

The question was on giving the resolve a second reading, and it was declared lost.

Mr. Crocker of Ward 9 asked that the vote be verified by a rising vote, and the order was refused a second reading—15 to 41.

Subsequently Mr. McGaragle moved a reconsideration, which was lost.

THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Mr. Spenceley of Ward 19 moved to reconsider the vote by which the Council accepted the report that the ordinance to amend the ordinance in relation to the Fire Department ought not to pass.

Mr. Spenceley of Ward 19—Mr. President, I will simply say I think there are a great many things in the statutes bearing on this matter which ought to be brought forth before this is laid aside as it has been. I know I am not in condition tonight to go into any argument about it, and therefore, if it is reconsidered, I will move to refer it to the next City Government, as the gentleman who has had charge of it will return here with the new Council.

The reconsideration prevailed, and the report was referred to the next City Government.

MERCANTILE WHARF.

The reference to Committee on Finance of the report and order to purchase from Mercantile-wharf Corporation the lot of land now leased for a produce market (80,000 square feet more or less), on Atlantic avenue, at not exceeding $4 per foot, came up as unfinished business. The matter was referred to the next City Government, on motion of Mr. Hibbard of Ward 17. Sent up.

RELATION OF THE IMPROVED SEWERAGE TO THE BUILDINGS ON THE BACK BAY.

Mr. Danforth of Ward 10 submitted the following:

BOSTON, Dec. 26, 1877.

To the Mayor and Aldermen and Common Council of the City of Boston—The Boston Society of Architects respectfully represent to your honorable body that the Commissioners on the Sewerage of the city appointed under your order of Feb. 23 and March 1, 1875, in their report (City Doc. 3, 1876) take occasion in several places to state that the system which they recommend, and which, we understand, has been accepted and is now partly under contract, will lower the ground water on the Back Bay territory about two feet. (See pages 25 and 40.) We beg leave to enclose herewith, for your further information, a copy of a letter from E. S. Chesbrough, Esq., chairman of said commission, dated Dec. 4, 1877, in reply to a letter of inquiry addressed to him by order of the Executive Committee of the society. As most of the foundation piling on the Back Bay territory has been cut off at various grades above the grade 5, and some as high as 7½ or 8; and as the commissioners expect to lower the ground water, at least over a part of this territory, as low as grade 5, the heads of much of such piling must remain unprotected by the water, if these expectations are fulfilled, and there must follow, in the course of a few years, serious and expensive dilapidations in the buildings erected in that district. As citizens, therefore, the members of this society respectfully represent to your honorable body the urgent necessity of obtaining accurate information as to the grades of the ground water in various parts of the territory, and the probable effect upon them of the establishment of the new system of sewerage, and, if necessary, to require such modifications and safeguards in the plans proposed and now in process of execution as shall secure private property from the serious damage which, it would seem, may reasonably be anticipated from this cause.

Respectfully submitted,

GEO. C. CABOT, President.

HENRY VAN BRUNT, Secretary.

[Copy.]

CHICAGO, Dec. 4, 1877.

Henry Van Brunt, Esq., Secretary of Boston Society of Architects: Dear Sir—Your letter of Nov. 22 has been received. With regard to the basis for the opinion expressed on pages 25 and 40 of the report of the Commission on the Sewerage of Boston (City Doc. 3, 1876) it is founded upon the belief that the system proposed would ordinarily keep the sewage constantly flowing towards the main outlet, and consequently the sewers would be free from back water at flood tides. As ordinary brick sewers, even when laid in cement throughout, do drain the soil through which they pass, down to near the average level of the water in them, such a result must be expected in this case, if nothing is done to prevent it. The surface of this ground water each way from a sewer is usually an inclined plane, more or less steep, according to the character of the soil. How much the ground water would be lowered at any point, or how much on an average, throughout the district to be drained, it is impossible to tell, and of course equally so to say what would be the effect upon foundation piles. On page 22 of the report of the commission it is said, "We propose that the main and branch intercepting sewers shall be so constructed that no water will leak into them through their bottoms or side walls; for by just the quantity that may be thus allowed to leak into them will their efficiency be diminished." Now, if this is done, dangerous lowering of the ground water near the main and branch intercepting sewers will be prevented. The interior of existing sewers, whenever desirable, could, I am satisfied, be effectually coated with cement so as to prevent leakage through them in most cases. Our experience here with catch-basins justifies this opinion. These and other precautions could be taken, but no doubt the City Engineer will have careful examinations made, before and after the construction of the sewers, and will suggest such measures as will prevent serious damage, should any be necessary.

Very respectfully,

E. S. CHESBROUGH.

Referred, on motion of Mr. Danforth, to the Joint Special Committee on Improved Sewerage. Sent up.

PETITIONS PRESENTED.

By Mr. Howes of Ward 18—Petition of William W. Wallace, for compensation for personal injuries. Referred to the Joint Committee on Claims. Sent up.

By Mr. Kelley of Ward 3—Petition of the Boston, Lowell & Nashua Railroad Company, for leave to erect a wooden building on Mystic wharf. Referred to the Joint Committee on the Survey and Inspection of Buildings. Sent up.

FREE MEDICAL ATTENDANCE FOR THE POOR.

The following was received from the Board of Health:

BOSTON, Dec. 27, 1877.

To the Honorable City Council: Gentlemen—In answer to your request of Sept. 10, that the Board of Health consider the expediency of employing physicians to visit the houses of the poor during the summer season, particularly tenement houses, and the crowded sections of the city, etc., we would state that the matter has been well considered, and we find that there already exists a most complete organization for providing for advice and medicine to every poor person within the city, except in the recently annexed territory. Physicians selected for their good character and professional attainments are stationed in each district of the city, are well known to the residents thereof, and attend all calls from the sick poor. By this one organization 48,789 persons were furnished with advice and medicine free of charge last year. The Massachusetts General Hospital treated over 12,000 (with twenty-five cent charges) persons; the City Hospital treated 12,422, and the City Almshouse 1631 free of charge. There are many other dispensaries and charitable organizations in the city where large numbers of adults and children are treated without charge. It is safe to say that from 75,000 to 100,000 poor persons are so treated in Boston yearly without charge, and by first-class physicians. It would not be advisable to urge upon the sick poor the services of other physicians selected by the city, or to supersede or interfere with the present district physicians, who are now answering all demands. We would therefore respectfully suggest that it is inexpedient to make further provisions for the treatment of the sick poor by employing and sending provisions among the tenement houses and in the crowded sections of the city at the city's expense. Respectfully submitted.

S. H. DURGIN.

Sent up.

HISTORIC SITES.

Mr. Ham of Ward 14 submitted the following:

The Committee on Historical Monuments, to whom was recommended the order in relation to the tablet on Christ Church, with instructions to report the evidence identifying the said church as the one from which the lanterns were hung; and also to report a description of the tablet and the cost of the same, beg leave to submit the following report:

The evidence which was presented to the committee consisted principally of the statements of gentlemen who have given much time and attention to the subject. Considerable documentary evidence was also presented, but not in such a form as to render it intelligible unless accompanied by the oral statements of which it formed a part. These statements were not taken down at the hearings, and, therefore, the committee cannot report the same in print as directed. The proposed tablet is to be seven feet long, three feet high and ten inches thick, and is to be placed in the front wall of the building. It is to be made of Nova Scotia sandstone, and will bear the following inscription:

"The lanterns hung from this tower
Signalled to Paul Revere
The march of the British troops
Upon Concord and Lexington."

It is estimated that the tablet will cost $800.

The report was accepted and the order to place the tablet on Christ Church was passed in concurrence.

SMALLPOX HOSPITAL.

Mr. Reed of Ward 17 submitted the following: The joint special committee appointed to investigate the subject of the expenditures for a smallpox hospital, and the works connected therewith, having attended to the duty assigned them, beg leave to submit the following report: The Board of Health, having an appropriation of $25,000 for the erection of a smallpox hospital, purchased a lot of land on Canterbury street, and applied to the City Architect for plans of the proposed building. The board was informed that it would take six weeks to prepare the plans, and being unwilling to wait that length of time, proceeded with the erection of the building, employing mechanics by the day and purchasing materials at the usual market prices, the work being performed under the general supervision of the City Architect. The board was led to believe that the building could be erected within the limits of the appropriation, but the information was not based upon plans and specifications, and was, therefore, unreliable. It was found necessary to do a large amount of work, such as grading, laying water pipes and fences, which was not contemplated in the beginning, and the board found that the expenditures were liable to exceed the appropriation. It therefore applied to the City Council for an additional amount, which was granted. It does not appear that the prices paid for materials and labor were unreasonable, or that any extravagance was exhibited in the construction of the building, and, although it is estimated to have cost $1000 more than it would have if it had been erected by contract, it is admitted that the workmanship is better than is usual in contract buildings. The additional expense may be said to represent the profit on labor and materials which a contractor would have deducted in bidding for the job, but which would probably have been made up in some other manner. In the opinion of the committee the Board of Health erred in going on with the erection of the building without understanding fully the extent of the work, and without first obtaining suitable plans and estimates. In justice to the board, it should be stated that an outbreak of smallpox occurred at the time, which, in the opinion of the board, warranted it in proceeding as it did. Without presuming to judge of the exigencies of this particular case, your committee believe that, as a rule, no board or committee of the City Government should be allowed to proceed with any work involving so large an expenditure as the one in question without first obtaining careful estimates of the cost by public advertisement. They believe that this is the only way of protecting the interests of the city in this respect, and of preventing a favored few from monopolizing the construction of our public works. In the event of any exigency arising which would require a deviation from such a rule, the City Council could modify the rule to meet the particular case. The committee respectfully recommend the passage of the following order:

Ordered, That the Committee on Ordinances be requested to report an ordinance requiring that whenever any public work is to be executed which will involve an expenditure of more than $1500, the board or committee having charge of the same shall cause suitable plans and specifications to be presented, and shall advertise for proposals for executing the same.

Ordered, That the Committee on Ordinances be requested to report an ordinance requiring that whenever any building belonging to the city is to be erected, altered or repaired, the work shall be performed under the direction of the Committee on Public Buildings, and shall be superintended by the Superintendent of Public Buildings and the City Architect.

On motion of Mr. Sampson the orders were amended so that the committee are to consider the expediency of reporting the ordinances, 35 for, 17 against, and as amended, passed. Sent up.

CLAIMS.

Mr. Sampson of Ward 17 submitted a report from the Joint Committee on Claims recommending the passage of an order—That there be allowed and paid to Patrick Horan, in compensation for personal injuries received by him on account of an alleged defect in Seventh street, the sum of one thousand dollars, upon his giving to the city a release and discharge satisfactory to the City Solicitor from all damages, costs and expenses incurred by him in consequence of the defective condition of said street; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Incidentals. Order read twice, under a suspension of the rule, on motion of Mr. Sampson, and passed. Sent up.

SALARIES OF MEMBERS OF CITY GOVERNMENT.

The Council took up the ordinance to provide for the payment of members of the City Council for expenses incurred by them in the performance of their official duties. (Printed City Doc. No. 94.) Referred to the next City Government on motion of Mr. Richardson of Ward 10. Sent up.

HARBOR MASTER.

Mr. Clarke of Ward 22 offered the following:

Whereas, The Harbor Master being required to keep the channel of the harbor clear from obstructions, by the several provisions of chapter 234 of the acts of the Legislature of the year 1847, and the supplementary acts thereafter, and he being now provided by the city with a row boat to perform that duty in all conditions of the weather, and the same being inadequate to properly perform the duties required of him, and having been obliged the past year to hire tugboats to assist him during stormy weather; it is therefore Ordered, That the Committee on Harbor consider the expediency of furnishing the Harbor Master with proper steam facilities to keep the navigation of the channel clear from vessels anchoring therein, and to facilitate the commerce of Boston in all weathers, and to keep the channel open and free from the obstructions of ice during the winter months.

Referred, on motion of Mr. Clarke, to the Joint Committee on Harbor. Sent up.

THE FINAL MEETING.

Mr. Wilbur of Ward 20 offered an order—That when this Council adjourn it be to meet on Thursday next at 3 P. M. Read twice and passed.

COLLECTOR'S DEPARTMENT.

Mr. Danforth of Ward 10 submitted the following:

Ordered, That there be allowed and paid to clerks in the Collector's Department, upon vouchers certified by the Collector, a sum not exceeding four hundred dollars, for services performed by said clerks after office hours; the same to be charged to the account of Real-Estate Advertising.

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be authorized to allow for payment to the Collector's Department the cost of extra clerk hire in collecting license fees; said sum, not exceeding three hundred dollars, to be charged to Liquor Licenses.

Severally read twice under a suspension of the rule, on motion of Mr. Danforth, and passed. Sent up.

Subsequently a motion to reconsider by Mr. Wilbur was lost.

INCIDENTALS AND CONTINGENT FUND.

Mr. Sampson of Ward 17 submitted the following from the Committee on Finance:

The Auditor of Accounts represents to this committee that the appropriation for Incidental Expenses, in consequence, principally of the large amount taken therefrom by the City Council for the dedication of the Army and Navy Monument, will not be sufficient to meet the expenses chargeable to said appropriation for the balance of the financial year, and that there will be needed an addition of $10,000 to the same; that there will be a deficiency of $15,000 in the appropriation for Registration of Voters and Election Expenses caused by the expenses attending the registration of voters for the late municipal election, by order of the City Council, and that a further appropriation of $600 is needed for the Contingent Fund of the Board of Aldermen. Your committee would therefore report the accompanying order adding $10,000 to the appropriation for Incidental Expenses and $600 to the Contingent Fund of the Board of Aldermen:

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be and he hereby is authorized to transfer from the Reserved Fund to the appropriation for Incidental Expenses the sum of ten thousand ($10,000) dollars; the sum of fifteen hundred ($1500) dollars from the Reserved Fund to the appropriation for Registration of Voters and Election Expenses, and the sum of six hundred ($600) dollars from the Reserved Fund to the Contingent Fund of the Board of Aldermen.

Read twice and passed, under a suspension of the rule on motion of Mr. Sampson—yeas 55, nays 1—Mr. Pratt voting nay. Sent up.

SOLDIERS' MONUMENT.

The order to allow and pay Martin Milmore $8100, for extra work and materials for Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument—was considered under unfinished business.

Mr. Sampson—As there is not time for that order to go to the Finance Committee, I move to substitute the following:

Ordered, That there be allowed and paid to Martin Milmore $8100, in full compensation for extra work performed and materials furnished in the erection of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument on Boston Common, and that the Auditor of Accounts be and he is hereby authorized to transfer to the appropriation for the erection of a memorial monument the sum of $8100, to be specially applied to make the aforesaid payment.

Mr. Sampson—Mr. Milmore presented a claim of $13,183 to the Committee on Claims, who went into the details very thoroughly and decided that the city should allow him $8100. He claimed $500 for extra expense in laying the corner stone of the monument in 1871; and the committee allowed $100 for rigging the shears and taking them away. He claimed $6000 as the difference between the cost of a granite statue and bronze one; the committee allowed $5000. Under the contract Mr. Milmore was to furnish a granite statue. After going abroad to complete his models it was suggested to him by observations made there that granite would be rather bad material to make the statues of on account of the softness of the lines to be made, and on account of its liability to be defaced by storms in the course of time; and he wrote back to Boston to ask permission to change the material to bronze. The chairman of the committee deemed it advisable that the change should be made, and wrote that if Mr. Milmore saw fit to do it he would do all he could to get the city to make up the difference. The Committee on Claims thought he was entitled to an allowance of $5000. The same allowance was made on account of the bronze tablet, of $1500. For extra expense in cutting the inscription on the monument the committee allowed him $200. He also had an extra claim of $5000 on the foundation, and the committee allowed $1000.

Mr. Webster of Ward 3—Were the committee unanimous?

Mr. Sampson—They were unanimously in favor of this sum; some favored allowing a larger sum.

The substitute was adopted and the order was passed—yeas 66, nays 0. Sent up.

NORTHAMPTON-STREET DISTRICT.

Mr. Sampson submitted a report from the Finance Committee, on request of the Committee on Public Lands, recommending the passage of an order—That the Auditor of Accounts be and he is hereby authorized to transfer from the Reserved Fund to the appropriation for Northampton-street District the sum of $12,000. Read twice, under a suspension of the rule, and passed—yeas 65, nays 1. Sent up.

REFRESHMENT BILLS FOR MONUMENT COMMITTEE.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13 offered the following:

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts allow for payment the bill of H. D. Parker, for refreshments furnished to the Committee on Army and Navy Monument, amounting to four hundred and twenty-five seventy one-hundredths dollars; the said bill not having been presented at his office within three months of the date of contracting the same, as required by the twenty-first joint rule of the City Council, said amount to be charged to the special appropriation for Dedicating the Army and Navy Monument.

Mr. Crocker of Ward 9 called attention to the joint rules requiring all such bills to come before the Council, specifying in detail the names of members who partook of the refreshments, etc.

Mr. Flynn said the bill was in the hands of the Clerk of Committees or Auditor, and the names of the Monument Committee are on it.

Mr. Crocker said his point was that the bill was not before the Council.

Mr. Flynn said the bill might reach from one end of the room to the other. The committee held some eighty meetings and it would necessarily be a long bill.

Mr. Webster of Ward 3 asked why it had been delayed so long.

Mr. Flynn said he supposed Mr. Parker was not in a very great hurry. A great many people supposed it would be a couple of thousand dollars, and they thought they would keep them in hot water as long as they could.

The President ruled that the bill must be presented with the order.

SUPERINTENDENT OF COMMON.

Mr. Vose of Ward 24 moved that the order to remove from office the Superintendent of Public Grounds be taken from the table, giving notice of a motion to indefinitely postpone.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9—After carefully reading the evidence before the Investigating Committee, I do not believe there was any cause for the removal of the Superintendent. I believe he was exculpated from a large part of the blame in the transaction investigated. So far as blame could be imputed to him, it was for weakness in giving way to the pressure from members of the City Government. The greater part of the blame rests upon the system. As I offered the original motion, it is due to the City Forester that I make this statement. I hope it will be indefinitely postponed.

The order was taken from the table and indefinitely postponed.

INDEFINITE POSTPONEMENTS.

On motion of Mr. Webster of Ward 3, the order in regard to the removal of the Inspector of Lime was taken from the table and indefinitely postponed.

On motion of Mr. Thompson of Ward 9, the order to appoint William T. McChesney a field-driver at South Boston was taken from the table and indefinitely postponed.

On motion of Mr. Barnard of Ward 24, the preamble and order for copies to be submitted in print of all bills for refreshments and carriage hire incurred from Jan. 1, 1877 to the present time, was taken from the table and indefinitely postponed.

SALARIES OF LICENSE COMMISSIONERS.

Mr. Thompson of Ward 9 offered an order—That the salary of the License Commissioners be and it is hereby established at the rate of $2500 a year from the passage of this order.

Mr. Thompson—At the beginning of the year I believed that the salaries of the License Commissioners were fixed at too low a point. They asked that their salaries might be increased from the beginning of the year, and I voted for an amendment something like this order. I say frankly that I believe there were political reasons both in fixing the salary and in refusing to increase it; yet I believe the city cannot get proper men to do that duty for the salary now paid. I shall vote for $2500 for the men next year; but I do not think it would be right to fix their salaries at $2500 from the beginning of the present year.

Mr. Kelley of Ward 3—It is very queer of the gentleman to advocate paying the License Commissioners $2500 a year, and the laboring men only $1.75 a day. I voted for $1000, and when they were willing to accept it they should be held to the contract. I believe in being consistent.

Mr. Thompson—I voted for the salary, which I believe to be right. I believe we are paying the laboring men more than they are worth, and the License Commissioners less.

Adjourned, on motion of Mr. Fraser of Ward 6, and stood adjourned to Thursday next, at 3 P. M.

METROPOLITAN RAILROAD.

The petition of the Metropolitan Railroad, for leave to extend their location by a track through Hereford street, or West Chester park, over the Milldam, to Brookline, came up for a hearing on an order of notice.

Alderman Robinson stated that there was not time for the Paving Committee to hear the petitioners and remonstrants, and as it would have to go before another committee, he moved that the matter be referred to the next Board of Aldermen.

In response to a question from the Mayor, Robert M. Thompson said that he appeared for the remonstrants, quite a number of whom were present.

Alderman Slade thought there would be no time for the committee to consider the matter, even if the hearing goes on, and he hoped that the matter would go over to the next Board.

Alderman Clark preferred to hear the reasons for and against the petition. There is a whole week left, and the Paving Committee are in the habit of acting rapidly upon petitions of the Metropolitan, and as this Board is just as competent to decide the question as the next Board will be, he hoped the hearing would go on.

Alderman Viles favored the reference, not thinking there was time to consider the question.

Alderman Robinson said that the matter referred to by Alderman Clark had been discussed in this Board for weeks, and it was brought up as a quibble to force this matter through.

Alderman Clark had no intention to force the matter, and did not know whether he should vote for or against the location. But he would like to vote upon it.

Alderman Robinson said the Paving Committee had a variety of business before them, and the subject could not be sufficiently considered by next Saturday.

Alderman Thompson objected to referring matters to the next City Government. This matter of importance should be considered by the present Board, and he would like to vote upon the question. If the Paving Committee are incompetent to decide the question, the full Board can do so without any report from them. He hoped the hearing would go on.

Alderman Wilder inquired if the Metropolitan Railroad was represented, and in response to a question by the Mayor, H. R. Harding said he appeared for the company, in the absence of Mr.

Richards, who had been compelled to go to New York.

Alderman Wilder favored going on, as both parties were present. This is no new matter, but has been before the people for fifteen years, he having petitioned the Legislature for some such accommodations as long ago as that. He should be glad to hear the reasons why the petition should not be granted.

Alderman Slade said that he favored postponement to avoid two hearings. The idea is to lay this track outside of the wall on the Milldam, which it is understood is not strong enough; and it had occurred to him that there would not be time enough for the committee to look over the ground.

Alderman Viles did not believe in forcing the matter upon the committee when they had so many other matters before them.

Alderman Thompson said too much attention should not be paid to the opinions of the committee. They have had several matters referred to them several months ago and have not reported upon them.

Alderman Robinson asked what the matters were.

Alderman Thompson referred to the repairing of Main street; and there have been several horse railroad matters upon which the public have been expecting reports.

Alderman Fitzgerald thought the discussion bid fair to take up as much time as the hearing, and if the Board desired the hearing and a vote before Saturday, in spite of the wishes of the committee, he should vote for the hearing.

Alderman O'Brien should vote for the hearing because the remonstrants had been invited to be present; and after hearing the evidence the Board could decide the question as well as the next Board could.

The motion to refer to the next Board of Aldermen was lost—yeas 4, nays 7:

Yeas—Aldermen Burnham, Robinson, Slade, Viles—4.

Nays—Aldermen Breck, Clark, Dunbar, Fitzgerald, O'Brien, Thompson, Wilder—7.

The hearing proceeded.

H. R. Harding, secretary of the Metropolitan Railroad, appeared for the petitioners, in the absence of the president. The company came urged by a series of petitions from residents in that vicinity. A large district of Brookline to the north of the Albany Railroad, and near Corey Hill, has never had proper facilities for reaching Boston. The population is large and thriving; they seek Boston every day, and some accommodations ought to be provided, if compatible with public interests. They have asked the Metropolitan road to furnish the same facilities furnished to other districts. The only way to reach the section is by a track on a part of Beacon street from the termination of the present track on Marlborough street. If there was any other avenue leading to Brookline, the company would ask for it in preference to this. In no place does the rail encroach more than three and a half or four feet on the roadway, which would leave thirty-two feet clear in the roadway, which ought to be ample for any travel that goes there. He had never seen a matter pressed so hard upon the company as this had been, and he would call a few Brookline gentlemen to state their reasons for coming to the company and the Board.

Charles U. Cotting had watched the effects of horse railroads for fifteen years, and was satisfied that this location would accommodate the greatest number. About five hundred houses now have no accommodations, and three hundred would be better accommodated than they are now. He did not believe the Metropolitan road would have petitioned for this location had it not been afraid some of its competitors would apply for it. He thought the cars would take off many teams which now go over the Milldam. [To Mr. Thompson]—An interested four times as much in Boston as in Brookline.

Mr. Harding read a long petition in favor of the location, signed by Jordan, Marsh & Co. and many others.

Mr. Wasson, of Wasson, Pierce & Co., a resident of Brookline, believed the location very desirable for the people there; it would accommodate 2500 or 3000 people, who have brought a tremendous pressure upon the company for the track.

Mr. Cotting, being recalled by Mr. Thompson, said that parties residing in Brookline and doing business in Boston have guaranteed the company $25,000 for five years, without interest.

Mr. Bush thought the outer wheel of the car could be run over the wall, so that more than thirty-two feet in the clear would be left in the roadway. Reside on Beacon street. [To Mr. Thompson]—Am not interested in Brookline real estate.

Mr. Harding here rested the case for the petitioners, saying he would only cumulate testimony by calling more witnesses.

The Mayor read remonstrances signed by George B. Chase and others; John P. Barnard and others; John A. Winch and others; W. S. Houghton and others; Avery Plumer and others; W. E. Perkins et al; G. W. Calef et al; J. P. Marquand and others, and several other remonstrances.

Robert M. Thompson, in opening for the remonstrants, alluded to the character of the daily travel over Beacon street, which will be partially blocked up by the granting of the petition. The reason the whole space is not allowed for travel is that it is not safe to have the pounding of horses, teams and cars so near the edge of the wall. It is not pressed by citizens of Boston, and where it accommodates one person it will inconvenience a thousand. The first duty of the Board is to consider what will accommodate the greatest number of citizens of Boston.

Mr. Goddard, formerly a carriage maker, testified that one-third of the accidents to light carriages were caused by horse-railroad tracks, particularly where the track crosses a street diagonally, as it will in this case. He thought the track would be very dangerous to sleighs. He thought Boylston street would be a better avenue by which to reach Brookline. A track on Beacon street would be injurious to the vehicles and very dangerous to the drivers. One-half the axles broken by horse railroads are broken by diagonal tracks and more than that proportion of sleighs.

Henry Lee, a resident of Boston, said he was interested in Brookline property, and thought the present railroad accommodations sufficient; and whether they were or not, to narrow Beacon street would be an outrage. He fully agreed with Mr. Goddard. He thought horse railroad companies should pay for their tracks, as steam roads do.

George B. Chase said he was in the habit of driving over the Milldam when he kept a horse in town; for the last ten years the travel has constantly grown, but the street has not grown wider; it is frequently dangerous for ladies and children to walk there, and this would be increased by the track. Had known more than one thousand people pass over Beacon street in an hour, and the Board ought to consider how heavily the granting of the petition will bear upon a large number of citizens. It is but common justice that the city should have one avenue untouched by horse-railroad tracks. [To Alderman O'Brien]—The rush of travel made the street dangerous—the number of vehicles and the confusion. [To Mr. Harding]—There would be danger on Beacon street from the confusion and crowd, even without the fast driving. [To Mr. Thompson]—The cars would greatly detract from the pleasure of people who drive over the Milldam. [To Mr. Harding]—The greatest obstacle will be caused by the horse cars crossing the street.

Benjamin E. Cole believed the effect of horse cars would destroy the pleasure and diminish the safety of driving, and greatly increase the risk to the vehicles, as on a gravelled or macadamized road the rail must project above the level of the ground.

Mr. Shepard, of Shepard, Norwell & Co., a resident of Brookline, believed the petition was got up in the interest of a few landholders in the vicinity of Corey Hill, though he would favor it if it would accommodate the most people, and it would really discommode 1000 where it would accommodate 100. There used to be an omnibus run to that part of Brookline, but there were not people enough to support it.

Alderman Wilder, in asking Mr. Shepard some questions, said that to his knowledge the people in the vicinity had been clamoring for some such accommodation for fifteen years; and the patrons of the omnibus then averaged about seventy-five per day.

Mr. Lovering said it was a question whether the Board had a right to grant a petition to accommodate people out of the city when such grant would incommode a large proportion of the citizens of Boston.

Mr. Sears said there was formerly an omnibus line to Brookline which was stopped by the Metropolitan road because it did not pay.

Mr. Murray said he ran fifteen hacks, and this location would be ruinous to the stable business, as it is the only avenue for pleasure driving. Strangers frequently object to the city because of the tracks in the street. The Columbus-avenue tracks have been injurious to the stable business. A year ago last Christmas there were eleven accidents in one day by wheels catching in the tracks at the corner of Boylston and Berkeley streets. The use of salt on the proposed Beacon-street tracks would stop the sleighing there.

Mr. Thompson here rested his case.

E. W. James said the people of the West End wanted a proviso put on that the track should be built in one year, and the cars run to the Northern depots via North Charles. This petition will put more cars into Tremont street.

Mr. Cotting, being recalled, said the majority of the people this track would accommodate cannot reach the nearest depot in less than eight minutes, quick walking. Over three-quarters of the petitioners for the track live at or near Coolidge's Corner, and own their houses, and are within the eight-minute district.

Mr. Harding said the petitioners could have produced a cloud of witnesses if they had supposed the hearing would go on.

Mr. Thompson said the remonstrants did not summon any one.

Charles Faulkner, called by Mr. Thompson, said he almost daily rode out on the Milldam, and he felt that the public needed relief from the danger there now, and which the horse-railroad track would increase.

Mr. Clark, a resident of Maple avenue, Ward 22, said that there were 105 houses with 300 people in that section who would be accommodated by this road. His neighbors now have to walk a long distance to reach the horse cars. Do not think the track crossing a street is as objectionable as has been represented, as he had driven for twelve years and never had an accident.

In closing the case for remonstrants, Mr. Thompson said there were four points in the case:

1. Whether this Board has the right to grant this petition for the convenience of citizens of Brookline, when it inconveniences so many citizens of Boston?

2. Whether it is expedient to grant this petition and thus inconvenience one hundred citizens of Boston for every citizen of Brookline accommodated by the horse cars.

3. Whether, as it has not been deemed safe to allow driving on the edge of the wall, it will be expedient to allow horse cars there.

4. Whether, if a location should be granted, it should not be on the south side of the street, so as to avoid the unnecessary nuisance of the tracks crossing Beacon street twice.

Every real accommodation needed can be furnished by omnibuses, and thus save the infernal nuisance of horse-car tracks in a pleasure-driving avenue. By the action of the Park Commissioners the land for the Boylston-street extension has been given to the city, and that street will be extended in a year or two directly to the neighborhood intended to be accommodated by this accommodation. The street is reasonably safe to the many who drive there daily for their pleasure and health. The board were to consider whether they have a right to grant this petition in order to benefit the citizens of another town, and inconvenience citizens of Boston; that it would not be safe for the horse cars, and the traffic which passes over the Milldam; that there are various business interests bound up in horses and carriages, which would be injured by the location. He read in conclusion an extract from the report of the Park Commissioners, to show that the speedy completion of Boylston street or Commonwealth avenue would occur, and then another avenue would be opened for the connection of the part of Brookline referred to with the city by horse cars, if it was absolutely necessary.

Mr. S. J. Elder said he appeared for citizens of Boston near the avenues referred to and beyond all present railroad facilities, and who desire some better means of access to the city of Boston. He replied to the various objections made against granting the petition. He claimed that the real force and weight of the objection that it would interfere with pleasure-driving came from those who violate the law by fast driving on the Milldam.

Mr. Thompson read an item from the Traveller referring to the funeral of Mr. Chase, who it said was killed by an accident on the Milldam, which he quoted to show the condition of the road today, etc. Mr. Clark said the accident happened at the cattle fair in Brighton, three miles from the Milldam, and had nothing to do with the horse cars. Mr. Thompson said the correction should be made to the editor of the paper.

Mr. Harding, in closing for the petitioners, alluded to the great increase of passengers on the horse cars within the last few years, and the necessity for horse-car accommodations between the centre of the city and the suburbs, and the result will be a great growth of population as has been the case in every section where horse cars have run. The view from Corey Hill is one of the most beautiful in the world; yet thousands of people in Boston have never seen it because they have no facilities for getting there. In his opinion the profit to the company will be from the summer travel of Boston people going to Corey Hill. The objections urged are the same that have been brought against every location asked for in the city. They propose to run this line at five-cent fare, for persons from all parts of the city. The Milldam is in a condition which it ought not to be in, more from fast driving than the number of vehicles. The racing, collisions, arrests and confusions occur late in the evening, when the fast teams are returning, and the cars would have a tendency to check the fast driving.

Alderman Wilder moved that the matter be referred to the Committee on Paving, with the request that they report at the next meeting.

Alderman Fitzgerald said that members had contended that the Board were amply competent to take care of the petition without any reference to the committee, and as the Board had disregarded the wishes of the committee in giving the hearing this afternoon, he moved that the subject be specially assigned to the next meeting of the Board.

Alderman Wilder withdrew the motion to refer.

Alderman Clark would vote to assign, but was ready to vote upon the main question.

Alderman Fitzgerald was surprised that Alderman Clark was so quick to make up his mind.

Alderman Clark said it did not take long to make up his mind when he had heard the evidence upon both sides.

Alderman Fitzgerald wished Alderman Clark had the same charity for the Paving Committee.

Alderman Clark said the difficulty with the committee was they had made up their minds before they had the hearing.

The matter was assigned to the next meeting of the Board.

BOND APPROVED.

The bond of C. A. McCaffrey, constable, being presented duly certified, was approved by the Board.

LOCATIONS ACCEPTED.

A communication was received from the South Boston Railroad accepting the location on Sixth street, between O and P streets, granted by this Board. Placed on file.

A communication was received from the Metropolitan Railroad confirming the action of its president in accepting the location granted by this Board at the last meeting, and formally accepting the same. Placed on file.

SEWER ASSESSMENTS.

Schedules of the cost of constructing sewers in Warren and Crawford streets; in private land from Blue Hill avenue to Warren street; in passageway between Canton and Brookline streets; in Jenkins and Tuckerman streets, were received from the Committee on Sewers, and severally referred to the Committee on Sewers.

COMMERCIAL STREET.

The order for a loan of $1,000,000 for widening, grading and repaving Commercial street, between Eastern avenue and Charles River Bridge, and for paying damages occasioned thereby, came up amended, to make the expense $500,000—that the widening shall be mainly on the water side and not exceed eighty feet wide, and that abutters and others shall contribute any amount exceeding said sum.

The question was upon concurrence in the passage of the substitute.

Alderman Fitzgerald—I should like some person to give us an explanation of this order. According to all parliamentary law it has no business before us. It was defeated in the other branch, reconsidered, amended, defeated again, and then again reconsidered, which was a total violation of all rules governing the Common Council and this

Board and all parliamentary bodies; and I should like some person interested in this scheme to give us an account of this order and the condition in which it stands now. It is rather an unusual way of making an appropriation to say that five hundred thousand dollars shall be appropriated for a certain improvement, and if that be insufficient some persons interested shall make up the difference between the five hundred thousand and the amount necessary to repave and widen the street. It is rather a strange way in which to do it, and it must have been put through under a most extraordinary emergency, when, in order to coax members of the Council to vote for it, it was absolutely necessary to put a certain amount down to be paid by the city, and another certain amount to be paid by somebody interested in this scheme, in order to widen and repave this street. I say it is a most extraordinary way, and could only have been introduced under most extraordinary circumstances, in order to get some persons to vote for an order which had no merit in itself. It was one million in the beginning; that was defeated; then reconsidered and changed to $800,000; that was defeated and reconsidered, and then amended to $500,000, with a proviso that interested parties should contribute what is necessary in addition to that amount; that was defeated and then reconsidered because the amendment had been tacked on to the original order, and then it was passed. If that is the way things are done in both branches of the City Government, in order to accomplish a result, then I say there is no end to reconsiderations before this Board and the other branch. This is rather a strange order for an improvement in a particular locality, which has been supposed to have some peculiar merit in it, and which is claimed to be absolutely necessary now. If it be of so much importance the city should assume the whole responsibility and lay it out under the betterment, or some other law. But to tack on an amendment that the city shall spend five hundred thousand dollars, and that persons interested shall pay the difference between the five hundred thousand dollars and the cost of the widening of that street, I say it is an improper way to widen a street, and must have been brought about by an immense pressure, which should not be needed in so great an improvement. It is doubtful if the Street Commissioners can do what is proposed in the order. It is fortunate that the street cannot be laid out without the concurrent vote of the Street Commissioners and the City Council. I doubt the propriety of passing this order until we can find out what the cost will be. We have no data by which we can find out what it will cost. It cannot be done until the abutters agree to pay a portion of the expense. If they give their estates it will be done; but if twenty or thirty-five owners of estates hold out and say they stand upon their legal rights, and you can do what you please, then the difficulty will begin, and the Street Commissioners will come and say they cannot do it under this order, and we will be obliged to appropriate three or four hundred thousand dollars more. You pass this order and it is for the Street Commissioners to work the amendment out. I venture to say the Street Commissioners cannot do it. Before they begin some interested parties will come up, and some will be willing to give their land and others will not, and the parties who are willing to give their land will come to the City Government and say you have appropriated so much for this street, and the Street Commissioners cannot accomplish what the order intended, and now you must appropriate two or three hundred thousand more in order that the improvement must go on. I say it was done to catch a few votes. If this has sufficient merit in it, should be passed as all other orders appropriating money for widening streets are passed. Of course, I offer these objections; but I stood alone in voting against the order, and will stand in that position now.

Alderman Clark—I don't know that I have anything special to say on the subject of Commercial street. I voted for the order when the appropriation was a million dollars. I supposed that a considerable amount might be returned to the city in betterments. I believe the improvement to be for the commercial interests of the city. The Council have amended the order cutting the amount from a million to five hundred thousand dollars, and I shall vote to concur in the amendment. In my opinion it is an improvement that the city ought to carry out. I believe it is the opinion of the Street Commissioners that it can be carried out on the order as amended by the Council; that by the appropriation of half a million dollars, and with the amount which can be obtained from other parties in interest—the railroads and others—a sufficient amount can be obtained to make this improvement. If that is a fact, it can be done at a less expense in that way than it can under the betterment law. The Board understand the merits and demerits of this question just as well now as they would if it came here a year hence. I believe that the business interests of the city demand it; that it will be a good thing for the city in affording deep, water accommodation for the terminus of the great Hoosac Tunnel route of the Fitchburg Railroad, who propose to make that their depot for the shipment of grain which may come over that road, and for receiving foreign freight, which may be received here in vessels to go over that route to the West. As the subject is fully understood by the members of the Board, there is no occasion for any remarks to be made by me in favor of it, and I shall vote to concur in the amendment and in the passage of the order as amended.

Alderman Fitzgerald—Does the Alderman say he voted for this because he thought an immense amount of betterment could be obtained from the widening?

Alderman Clark—I said I thought a considerable amount of betterment could be obtained if it were laid out as is usual under the betterment law. But I believe this to be a more judicious course to pursue, and that a larger betterment will be received than if it were laid out in the usual way.

Alderman Fitzgerald—When a street is laid out sixty feet wide, don't the Street Commissioners think there is not so great a betterment as if the street were fifty feet?

Alderman Clark—It is a question with the Street Commissioners whether the street over sixty feet wide is any better than a street sixty feet. That is a question in the minds of the commissioners and the Committee on Streets. That is, the widening of Atlantic avenue to one hundred feet is not greater betterment to the residents on the avenue than if the width had been sixty feet. Neither were the abutters assessed any more than if the street had been widened to sixty feet.

Alderman Fitzgerald—After all I have heard, I am surprised to hear that the interested parties are not willing and able to pay all the bills. We have got so far that certain railroads and others will pay a portion; and after all the activity they have exhibited, I am surprised that, rather than have it defeated this year, they would not agree to pay all the bills. I am glad we have got so much; but it is a consolation that this cannot finally go through until the Street Commissioners bring in their report, and the City Council concur with them, and the City Council will have to pass upon the merits of the question.

The amendment was concurred in—yeas 9, nays 2; Aldermen Fitzgerald and Wilder voting nay; Alderman Gibson absent.

Subsequently a motion to reconsider by Alderman Viles, hoping it would not prevail, was lost.

MISCELLANEOUS PAPERS FROM THE COMMON COUNCIL.

Petitions were referred in concurrence.

Report of Committee on Historical Monuments—That the order to place a tablet on Christ Church ought to pass; and passage of said order. Report accepted, and order passed in concurrence.

Report and order to pay Patrick Horan $1000, for personal injuries received from a defect in Seventh street. Order read twice and passed in concurrence.

Report of Board of Health that it is inexpedient to make special provision for medical attendance upon inmates of tenement houses. Accepted in concurrence.

Report of special committee on subject of erection of the smallpox hospital—with orders for Committee on Ordinances to consider the expediency of providing that proposals shall issue for construction of public buildings involving a cost of $1500—and also that the Superintendent of Public Buildings and the City Architect shall oversee the work. Accepted, and orders passed in concurrence.

Votes referring to next City Council—1. An ordinance to provide for payment of members of the City Council while employed in public duties. 2. Report of Committee on Ordinances that it is inexpedient to amend section 4 of the ordinance relating to the Fire Department as therein set forth. 3. Report inexpedient to adopt an ordinance to require salaried officers to devote their whole time to the city, and not actively engage in other business. Severally concurred.

The order to receive for 1878, upon a lease given to Thomas W. Carter, $2000, on the terms and conditions therein set forth, came up amended, so that said sum shall be payable in monthly instalments. Alderman O'Brien stated that there might be some difficulty about the amendment conflicting with the terms of the lease. The amendment was non-concurred in. Sent down.

The order to purchase of W. R. Huston his right and title to about 150 feet of land enclosed in Washington Schoolhouse lot, at not exceeding $200, came up amended, so that said lot shall not be built upon, etc. Concurred.

Orders to pay for extra clerk hire in Collector's office on account of liquor licenses $300—and on account of extra work beyond office hours $400. Passed in concurrence.

POLICE RULES AND REGULATIONS.

On motion of Alderman Breck, the Board took up the special assignment for five o'clock, viz.

Consideration of the new code of police rules and regulations, with amendment to section 15, as originally reported, as follows: "When in the opinion of the committee the evidence is sufficient to warrant the removal of an officer, they shall report the fact to the Mayor."

Alderman Fitzgerald inquired how the rules differed from the original rules as reported.

Alderman Robinson said they are substantially the same as the present rules of the department, the changes made being mostly verbal, to conform to the changes made in other departments by the establishment of commissions, etc.

Alderman Fitzgerald could see no necessity for adopting the new rules, if that is all the difference.

Alderman Breck said there had been no substantial alterations. They had left the power of the Mayor and the Board of Aldermen just where it has been.

Alderman Fitzgerald compared old section 15 with the proposed amendment, and thought the old one better, as it conformed to the city charter.

Alderman Clark thought it would not make a great deal of difference to this Board what rules were adopted, and he moved their reference to the next Board.

Alderman Fitzgerald said that action on the rules was due to the committee as a matter of courtesy. The amendment does not cure the difficulty, but the present rule would be better.

Alderman Robinson could see no substantial difference.

Alderman Clark withdrew the motion for reference. The amendment was adopted and the reported rules as thus amended were adopted.

INSPECTION OF BILLS IN AUDITOR'S OFFICE.

An ordinance in relation to the records of public institutions and departments, allowing them to be accessible to the public, came up for concurrence.

Alderman O'Brien said that it appeared to be a revival of the refreshment business which has occupied so much attention of the City Council and space in the papers this year. He moved that it be indefinitely postponed. The motion prevailed.

IMPROVED SEWERAGE.

A memorial of Boston Society of Architects upon the damage to buildings on Back Bay territory likely to result from adoption of existing plan of improved sewerage came up to be referred to the committee on that subject.

Alderman Burnham—I do not rise to oppose the reference of the memorial to the Committee on Improved Sewerage; but as it seems to be an injustice to the committee and our Civil Engineer, I shall ask the Board to indulge me in saying that this request of the architects for investigation and explanation is certainly superfluous, for the subject has already been considered in all its bearings by the committee and the engineers for months past; and investigations have already been begun, the length and breadth of which I should be happy to explain where it not such a late hour. The architects were invited by the chairman and the engineer to suggest improvements in any manner, which they failed to do. The report of the commissioners, on which they base this memorial, has been in print two years, and it seems rather late for the architects to come to us; and it is rather reflecting upon the committee and the engineer. If the architects have been so reckless as to cut off piles in this region at a grade of  $7\frac{1}{2}$  feet, it seems to me there will be dilapidations any way, whether the intercepting sewerage lowers the ground water or not. But the committee and engineer have had no hasty action on this matter; but in all the investigation they have had this feeling in regard to the estates referred to: It were better that a few imperfectly-built houses, with no foundations under them, should be put in proper condition, at an expense of a few thousand dollars, than that the interests of our city should suffer and we deprived of this great sanitary improvement. It seemed to be due to the engineer and the committee that I should make this statement before the reference.

The memorial was referred in concurrence.

CITY SOLICITOR'S REPORT.

The semi-annual report of the City Solicitor was received and placed on file.

THE BACK BAY PARK.

The sixth report of the Park Commissioners (City Doc. 104) was received and sent down.

The board cite the order authorizing the purchase and say—

Acting under the special authority and instructions contained in the foregoing order, the commissioners proceeded to examine and survey the territory designated, and to open negotiations for the purchase of lands. It was evident that the whole of the region within the prescribed limits should be studied with reference to the economical use of the land for streets and building purposes, and the relation of the same to the park itself. The plotting of the adjoining territory, as shown by the accompanying map, has been done under the advice and with the encouragement of the Board of Street Commissioners, and, wherever the rights of the Commonwealth were concerned, after consultation with the State Board of Land Commissioners. These locations for streets are, nevertheless, only offered as suggestions, and are not binding upon any parties in interest. It is not assumed that this plan will prove to be the best that can be made, either in regard to the general requirements of the region or in its relation to the park, and it is not unlikely that changes and improvements may suggest themselves when the details shall receive attention from the department having them in charge. It was also necessary to consider what disposition should be made of the waters of Stony Brook and Muddy River, which now are discharged into the Back Bay. These streams should be diverted from their present courses and conducted into Charles River, but all sewage which they now receive should be otherwise provided for.

In relation to the former, the city of Boston, by annexation, acquired the rights which the city of Roxbury had by an indenture made the 28th day of December, 1864, by and between the said city of Roxbury and the Boston Water Power Company, and recorded with Suffolk Deeds, lib. 852, fol. 265, in which the Boston Water Power Company granted the right to lay out, construct, and maintain the necessary drainage through the lands of the said Boston Water Power Company from the Roxbury line to Charles River.

By act of the Legislature, chapter 267, of the year 1872, the town of Brookline and the city of Boston were empowered to divert the waters of Muddy River so as to make them flow in a more direct line to Charles River, through the lands of any person or corporation as they shall adjudge to be necessary for the public convenience or the public health. It is for the interests of the town and city that united action should be taken at once, as authorized by the act.

Feasible routes to Charles River are indicated on the map, but the execution of the work belongs to another department of the government, more competent to decide upon the details than this. It is recommended that the subject receive early attention, both for sanitary reasons and to facilitate the improvement of the park and the adjacent territory.

The conditions contained in the order compelled the commissioners to proceed in the work of securing land in a peculiar manner. It could only be obtained by actual purchase at no higher price than ten cents per square foot. It was held by various owners, corporate and individual, some non-residents, in some instances by trustees and guardians, and in others the estates were involved in legal complications. The peculiar forms of many of the smaller estates increased the difficulty of adjusting the boundaries of a park to the common advantage of public and private interests. These difficulties could not be overcome unless the owners were prepared to cooperate in carrying out the scheme as proposed in the order. The commissioners are gratified to report that, with unimportant exceptions, such has been the case, and that the owners have met them in a liberal spirit. The requirements of the order have been complied with, so far as the work has progressed, with the addition of some features which will increase the value of the adjacent lands and the accessibility of the park, and the future sanitary condition of the city.

Entrances.

Beacon entrance, 300 feet wide, opens from Beacon street, near the sluiceways, 610 feet west of West Chester park; joins Commonwealth avenue entrance, thence to and over the Boston & Albany Railroad by a bridge, into the park, a length from Beacon street to the park of 900 feet.

If the waters of Charles River should be used in the basin of the park, the route of the connecting canal will be through this entrance. The order does not authorize the extension of the Beacon entrance to Charles River, as contemplated in the commissioners' plan of 1876. It is recommended that this addition be made as a valuable part of the scheme.

Boylston entrances are by Boylston-street extended, which street crosses the park to Brookline avenue.

Westland entrance opens from Parker street, opposite a new street, eighty feet wide, leading from West Chester park, named Westland avenue, the lands for which, as the commissioners are advised, are given to the city in consideration of the location of this fine entrance, with a width of 300 feet on Parker street and increasing to 500 feet at the park boundary.

Huntington entrance is at the junction of Huntington avenue and Parker street; is 200 feet wide and 400 feet long.

Parker Hill entrance opens from Huntington avenue, opposite Bumstead lane; has an average width of 200 feet, and is 900 feet long.

Longwood entrance opens from Brookline avenue, opposite Maple avenue; is 200 feet wide and 950 feet long.

The road surrounding the park is laid out fifty feet wide, and will be, with its chief approaches, over  $2\frac{1}{2}$  miles long. Upon this road, at convenient intervals, the streets of the adjacent territory will open, or, in other words, these streets will radiate from the park. This road will supply a frontage for dwellings, with great varieties of exposure and park views, conditions which appear to be specially adapted to the tastes of the citizens of Boston.

The Park.

The park proper, as figured in the accompanying map, is located within the limits prescribed by the order. Beginning on the southerly side of the Boston & Albany Railroad, with a width of 400 feet, it widens thence at angles of about forty-five degrees to the eastern and western Boylston-street entrances, and at these points reaching its greatest width of 1450 feet. The eastern boundary extends southerly from Boylston street parallel to and distant from Parker street 216 feet, crossing the Westland entrance to Huntington entrance, 2400 feet; thence by a curved line of about 650 feet radius to Parker Hill entrance, 1500 feet; thence by a curved line of about 1700 feet radius to Longwood entrance, 1300 feet; thence by a serpentine line to the western Boylston-street entrance, 2750 feet. The area within these lines is ninety acres. The longest straight line within the park and entrances is from Huntington avenue to the Boston & Albany Railroad, 4700 feet, or nearly one mile.

Commonwealth avenue has been completed during the past season to West Chester park. It will be observed that from this point the direction of the avenue has been changed from a straight line, as shown upon the joint plan of the State Board of Land Commissioners, the city of Boston and the Boston Water Power Company, dated Dec. 6, 1864, and is deflected to the point of junction of Beacon street with Brookline and Brighton avenues. An agreement to this change has been made by formal instruments, by the parties in interest above named, and approved by the Governor and Council.

By this change the avenue is brought into better relations with thoroughfares already existing, and can be continued as required, through Longwood, on the Beacon-street line. The expense of heavy filling and a costly bridge over the Boston & Albany Railroad will be avoided, and the contiguous lands more economically used for building purposes.

The volume of business traffic and pleasure driving now concentrated on the narrow mill-dam is a source of constant and increasing danger and inconvenience, and suggests the necessity of relief by the early completion of Commonwealth avenue.

The commissioners regret that they are not prepared to report the final completion of their work under the order at this time. The delay has occurred not from any insurmountable obstacles, but from the novelty of the negotiations; the intricacy of surveys of an unimproved region, much of it being under water, containing estates whose limits in many cases have never been accurately defined by permanent monuments, and from other temporary causes beyond the immediate control of parties in interest. The examination of titles has also proved to be an intricate and laborious task.

[The order recently passed to allow the purchase of the land in parcels is recited, and the report continues—]

Conformably to the above order, of the 106 115-1000 acres comprised in the park, the deeds have been passed and the money has been paid for 2,763,832 square feet, or 63 448-1000 acres. A deed has also been passed conveying about twenty acres to the city, which will be paid for when the examination of the title can be completed. The commissioners hold the owners' bonds for deeds for nineteen acres, and a recorded vote of the Trustees of the Eliot School Fund, agreeing to sell 2 353-1000 acres, making in all about 105 acres, leaving less than one acre, which is owned by eight persons, for seven-eighths of which no papers have yet been obtained, and one undivided sixth interest in another small parcel, which cannot be secured until a trustee is appointed.

Respectfully submitted.

CHARLES H. DALTON, }
WM. GRAY, JR., } Commissioners.
CHARLES S. STORROW, }

Boston, Dec. 29, 1877.

HORSE RAILROAD LOCATIONS.

Alderman Robinson submitted the following from the Committee on Paving:

Report of reference to the next City Government on the petition of the Cambridge Railroad for leave to run their cars through to Milk street.

Alderman Thompson did not like referring matters to the next Board, as this Board was competent to decide upon matters. He moved that the petitioners have leave to withdraw, as they could bring their petition fresh before the next Board.

The report was not accepted, and the motion that the petitioners have leave to withdraw substituted and passed.

Report of leave to withdraw on the petition of the Middlesex Railroad for leave to construct a turn-out track adjacent to the Old Colony Railroad station on South and Kneeland streets.

Alderman Thompson moved to lay the report on the table.

Alderman Fitzgerald said they made three reports, and when this Board hear them they will see that it is a wise report to make. Both roads are in a muddle. It is wrong to allow any horse railroad to have a turnout and track in such a place as that, and we have introduced orders revoking the orders granting the locations of those tracks. The Old Colony Railroad have withdrawn the permission to allow the use of their private land for the purposes for which the corporations want them, and have so notified them both.

Alderman Thompson said his motion was for a temporary purpose.

The report was laid upon the table.

Ordered, That the right granted to the Middlesex Railroad, Nov. 12, 1877, to construct a turn-out track on South street, near the westerly corner of the Old Colony Railroad station, and to connect the same by curved tracks with the tracks of the South Boston Railroad Company on Kneeland street, be and the same is hereby revoked, and the order granting said right rescinded.

Laid on the table, on motion of Alderman Thompson.

Ordered, That the right granted Nov. 5, 1877, to the South Boston Railroad Company, to lay down curved tracks to connect its track on Kneeland street with the turn-out track to be constructed by permission of the Old Colony Railroad Company on the premises of said company, lying between the southerly line of Kneeland street and the Old Colony station, be and the same is hereby revoked, and the order granting said right rescinded.

Alderman Burnham moved to lay on the table. Alderman Thompson hoped the order would pass.

Alderman Burnham withdrew the motion, and the order was passed.

On motion of Alderman Burnham, the order revoking the seventeenth location of the Middlesex Railroad was taken from the table and passed, and the same action was taken, on motion of the same Alderman, on the report of leave to withdraw on petition of the same road for turn-out track in South and Kneeland streets.

Alderman Thompson moved to reconsider the passage of the order revoking the South Boston Railroad location at Old Colony depot, hoping it would not prevail. Lost.

The same action was taken on the order revoking the location of the Middlesex Railroad, on motion of Alderman O'Brien.

TRANSPORTATION AND STORAGE OF EXPLOSIVE COMPOUNDS.

Alderman Breck submitted the following (City Doc. 83):

In compliance with the order of City Council, approved June 5, 1877, directing "that the Committee on Ordinances be requested to report such ordinances as are necessary to give effect to the statute of 1877, chapter 216, relating to the transportation and storage of explosive compounds within the city limits," your committee have the honor to report the ordinance hereto appended; and, as the question is one of importance, have added compilations of the English "Orders in Council," defining the several classes of explosive compounds—Appendix A; and the laws of the United States relating to the foreign transportation of explosive compounds—Appendix B; also the act of 1877, under which we are now acting—Appendix C.

The rules regulating the transportation of high explosives are in substance the same as those adopted by the Railroad Commissioners for use on the railroads in the State.

On examination of the St. of 1877, c. 216, it will be seen that gunpowder is expressly excepted from its operations.

The law and ordinances at present in force, viz., St. of 1833, c. 151; St. of 1837, c. 99; St. of 1841, c. 58; St. of 1850, c. 262; Gen. Sts., c. 49; Gen. Sts., c. 88; Ordinances of 1876; Fire Department, § 7,—leave the regulation of the sale, transportation and storage of gunpowder in the "Board of Engineers."

And this authority is derived directly from the State, and is independent of City Council.

The only authority possessed by City Council is given by Gen. Sts., c. 88, and is very limited, and probably can be exercised only by abolishing the Board of Engineers.

Further, the Board of Engineers have, by statute, exclusive authority to license and regulate—

1. Manufactories of chocolate.
2. The carrying or kindling of fires in the streets.
3. Sale and keeping of fireworks.
4. " " " " gunpowder.

And it is made the express duty of each and every engineer to inquire after and prosecute any person "who shall smoke, or have in his possession, any lighted pipe or cigar in any street, lane, or passageway, or on any wharf or in any rope-walk, barn, or stable in said city."

At the time when the statutes conferring the above-enumerated powers were passed, the "Board of Engineers" was the executive head of the Fire Department.

Under the existing ordinance by which that department was reorganized, the existence of the Board of Engineers, as a Board, was apparently continued only for the sake of preserving the statute powers granted to that board (see Ordinances, 1876; Fire Department, § 7); and, as a matter of fact, the board but rarely meets, and then only to grant licenses for the keeping or transportation of gunpowder, fireworks, petroleum, and burning fluid.

In the opinion of your committee it would be better that the authority to make rules regulating the traffic in all dangerous articles should rest primarily with the City Council, with the power to delegate that authority to such boards or persons as it might by ordinance select.

Your committee, therefore, in addition to the ordinance they were directed to report, have added an order requesting the Mayor to petition the General Court for a law giving the City Council as full power for regulating the transportation, sale and storage of gunpowder, fireworks, and the dangerous burning fluids, and of controlling the exercise of dangerous trades and the use of fire in the streets, as is given it by the statute of 1877, in regard to the explosive compounds therein referred to, and as is now intrusted to the Board of Engineers.

Committee on Ordinances.

Be it ordained, etc.:

Section 1. By the words "explosive compound," as used in this ordinance, shall be understood gun-cotton, nitro-glycerine, or any compound of the same; any fulminate, and generally every substance, except gunpowder, intended to be used by exploding or igniting the same, to produce a force to propel missiles or to rend apart substances.

Sect. 2. No person, except on military duty in the public service of the United States or of this Commonwealth, shall keep, have, or possess, in any building, place, vehicle, ship or other vessel, within the limits of the city of Boston, any explosive compound in quantity exceeding one-fifth of a pound, unless thereunto licensed in the manner and form hereinafter set forth.

Sect. 3. Any person desiring to manufacture any explosive compound within the limits of the city of Boston shall make application in writing, for a license therefor, to the Board of Aldermen of said city, setting forth therein the exact location of the land and construction of the buildings where such manufacture is to be conducted, and a general description of the articles intended to be manufactured, the method of manufacturing, and the amount proposed to be manufactured. Such application shall be referred to the Board of Fire Commissioners and to the Chief of Police of said city, who shall cause an examination of the place or building described in such application to be made by suitable persons appointed for that purpose by each of said departments.

If the report of said examiners be in favor of granting said application, the Board of Aldermen shall grant a public hearing to all remonstrants thereto, after public notice of said hearing has been given, for two consecutive weeks, in at least three daily newspapers published in said city.

The Board of Aldermen after such notice and hearing may, by a two-thirds vote, and with the approval of the Mayor, grant a license to said applicant to manufacture the explosive compound at the place specified, with such limitations as to the quantity to be manufactured, and the mode of storing, keeping, or transporting the same, as may be prescribed by ordinance, or which the Board of Aldermen may in each case see fit to impose.

Sect. 4. No manufactory of explosive compounds shall be erected or maintained within the territory now contained within the limits of Wards 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 16, 17, 18 and 19, of the city of Boston, according to the present boundaries of said wards.

Sect. 5. Any person desiring to keep for sale within said city any explosive compound may make application for a license therefor to the Board of Fire Commissioners of said city, or to such person or persons as may be charged with the duties now performed by said board. The Board of Fire Commissioners shall cause to be made, by a suitable person, an examination of the place where such explosive compound is to be kept for sale, and if satisfied that such place conforms to the requirements of this ordinance, and is not otherwise objectionable, may grant a license so to keep such explosive compound.

Sect. 6. The following shall be the maximum amounts of the following class of explosive compounds which may be kept for sale within the said city, in any place within twenty feet of any building or construction regularly occupied any portion of the day or night:

Of nitro-glycerine and all compounds thereof, and gun-cotton, four ounces.

Of detonators or exploders for use with any explosive compound other than gunpowder, such number as contains in all one-half pound of the detonating compound employed.

Of any explosive compound, not otherwise provided for, such amount as the Board of Fire Commissioners may deem safe, not exceeding ten pounds.

In case the person so licensed to keep explosive compounds is also licensed to keep gunpowder in the same building, or within fifty yards of it, the maximum amount which he may keep of explosive compounds shall be one-half of the above named amounts.

Sect. 7. Every person licensed to keep explosive compounds for sale shall provide a suitable place for the storage of such compounds, as follows: each class of articles specified in section 6 shall be kept separate from every other class, by suitable divisions or partitions of brickwork. No compound of nitro-glycerine shall be kept in any receptacle constructed with any exposed iron or steel in the interior thereof.

Sect. 8. Licenses to establish magazines for the storage of explosive compounds, in quantities greater than those mentioned in section 6, may be granted to manufacturers or dealers, in the manner and on the conditions prescribed in sections 3 and 4 for the establishment of manufactories.

Sect. 9. No person shall keep explosive compounds for sale, as provided in sections 5 and 6, in any building or storehouse within three hundred feet of any schoolhouse, church, theatre, or hall licensed for public assemblies; nor within five hundred feet of the city hall, State House, court house or jail in said city.

No magazine, as provided in section 8, shall be allowed within six hundred feet of any dwelling house occupied by persons not engaged in the manufacture of said explosive, nor within one thousand five hundred feet of any of the buildings specified in the preceding lines of this section. All magazines to be surrounded by an earthen traverse ten feet thick at top and natural slope to bottom, and so high that a line drawn from the highest point of the explosive in store, and grazing to top of the parapet and wall passes above the highest of the surrounding houses.

Sect. 10. The transportation of explosive compounds in and over any highway, street, or way used by the public, not including any steam railway, within said city, shall be allowed only on the following conditions:

a. That nitro-glycerine, in any of its forms, shall be in a congealed state, and the packages in which said nitro-glycerine is contained shall during transportation be kept constantly packed in ice, and in the charge of a competent agent furnished by the forwarder, who shall, during the time such nitro-glycerine is being transported, travel in the vehicle in which the explosive is carried.

b. That all dry nitro-glycerine compounds shall be packed in wooden cases holding not more than one hundred pounds of such explosive, the explosive compound to be packed in dry sawdust when in bulk to the depth of at least three inches on all sides between such explosive and the inside surface of the case, and when in cartridges, each cartridge shall be surrounded on all sides and all interstices between such cartridges, and a space of at least one inch between the outside of each cartridge and the inside surface of the case should be filled with such sawdust.

c. That all gun-cotton shall be pulverized and in a compressed form and a moist state.

d. That all explosives of the fulminate class shall be wet, and contained in wooden water-tight kegs, which shall be packed in sawdust in wooden packages.

e. That all explosives of the nitrate-mixture class and chlorate-mixture class shall be subject to the same rules and regulations as are now in force or may hereafter be prescribed for the transportation of gunpowder.

f. That all packages containing explosive compounds shall be plainly marked on at least three sides with the name of its contents, and the words "Explosive—Dangerous" so as to be readily seen by those who are to handle them. The name and address of the manufacturer and forwarder shall also be plainly marked thereon.

g. No detonating or percussion fuses, caps, or primers, or articles liable to cause fire or explosion, shall be packed in the case or barrel containing any explosive compound, nor carried in or upon any vehicle in which said compound is being transported.

h. That not more than one case or barrel shall be transported in any vehicle, unless the said vehicle has been suitably prepared by lining the same with wood, felting, tarpaulin, oiled cloth, or other material, exclusive of iron or steel, and is fitted with a close cover of the same. No matches, acids, petroleum, or other hazardous articles shall be carried in the same vehicle with explosive compounds, and not over one hundred pounds of such explosive compounds shall be carried in one vehicle.

i. No two vehicles containing explosive compounds shall be allowed to approach one another within one thousand yards, unless in charge of a qualified inspector detailed by the Fire Commissioners for that duty. Such inspector shall be detailed upon written application, and shall be paid for his services five dollars for each day or portion thereof, by the person transporting such explosive compound.

Sect. 11. The following officers and each of them may at any time enter the building or premises of any person or persons licensed to sell explosive compounds, to examine and ascertain if the laws, rules and regulations relating thereto are strictly observed, viz.: The members of the Board of Fire Commissioners, the Chief Engineer, and the assistant engineers of the Fire Department, the Chief of Police, the Deputy Chief, the captains, lieutenants and sergeants of police, and any other person duly empowered to make a special search of any particular building or buildings by written instructions signed by either of the Board of Fire Commissioners, by the Chief or Deputy Chief of Police, or by his Honor the Mayor. Provided, however, that all such written authorizations shall be recorded in the department by which they were granted, and shall not be in force for over forty-eight hours.

Any person deeming himself aggrieved by unnecessary and repeated examinations may apply for relief to the City Council, who shall forthwith examine into the alleged injury, and grant suitable relief, if it be deemed necessary.

Sect. 12. Every license granted in accordance with this ordinance shall be upon condition that the Board of Aldermen may suspend or revoke the same, with or without cause at any time. Any violation of the terms of the license by the person licensed shall work an immediate revocation of the same.

Sect. 13. Every person guilty of a breach of any of the above ordinances shall be liable to a penalty of not less than one dollar, nor more than fifty dollars. Prosecutions of all breaches of this ordinance shall be made by the Police Department in the manner prescribed by law; and all fines and penalties so collected shall be paid into the charitable fund of said department, as provided in sect. 12 of police ordinance as reestablished in 1876.

Ordered, That the Mayor be and he hereby is requested to petition the General Court for the passage of an act giving the City Council full powers for regulating the transportation, sale and storage of gunpowder, fireworks, and the dangerous burning fluids, and of controlling the exercise of dangerous trades, and the use of fire in the streets. Read twice and passed. Sent down.

MANAGEMENT OF HORSE RAILROADS.

Alderman Clark offered an order—That his Honor the Mayor be requested to petition the Legislature for an act to transfer to the Board of Railroad Commissioners all the powers now vested in the Board of Aldermen relating to the control of street railways.

Alderman Clark moved to lay on the table.

Alderman Fitzgerald hoped the Board would not for a moment entertain the idea of giving the control of the streets to any parties outside of Boston. He moved the indefinite postponement of the order.

Alderman Thompson fully agreed with Alderman Fitzgerald. If the people of Boston, through the Board, are not competent to take care of the streets, they certainly ought not to give it to a board appointed by the State. The city is required to pave and keep in repair the streets, and the horse railroads ought to be within its control.

Alderman Clark said the Board's experience had taught them the importance of putting the matter under some other control than that of the Board of Aldermen; whether to the Railroad Commissioners or the Supreme Court he was not fully determined. He introduced the order to lead to a determination of the subject. The interests of the city would best be served by putting them into the hands of an independent commission, paid for by the horse railroads.

Alderman Fitzgerald said Alderman Clark did not seem to realize that it involved the principle of municipal government. The Alderman should give reasons for it, and not the other members of the Board. The speaker believed that the matter should be in the hands of the people of Boston through their representatives. The Supreme Court would no doubt take care of its legitimate business, as it did in the matter of refusing to appoint the Inspectors of Elections.

Alderman O'Brien believed the matter should be in the hands of a joint committee of the City Council.

Alderman Thompson thought it would be as well to include the Common and squares as the horse railroads.

Alderman Clark was glad to see that others believed that the matter should be taken from the Paving Committee, and he had put in the order to bring the matter to the attention of the Government.

Alderman Fitzgerald said the statute placed it in the hands of the Board, and the reference to a committee was merely a form to have the orders drawn.

Alderman Slade said the Paving Committee had not had a very hard time, and probably would not have hereafter. They come here to work, and he was willing to do all that was necessary.

Alderman Clark said there were other reasons why the matter should be taken from the Board, which every member knows, but which it was no use discussing. Having accomplished his object he would withdraw the order.

Alderman Fitzgerald objected, and on his motion the order was indefinitely postponed.

Alderman Thompson moved to take from the table the nomination of James K. Fagin to be Superintendent of Lamps.

Adjourned to Saturday, Jan. 5, at 12 M., on motion of Alderman Fitzgerald.

Non-concurrence in amendment to order concerning the lease to Thomas W. Carter for wharf on Albany street.

Mr. Crocker of Ward 9 said he understood that the reason why the Aldermen did not concur was that it was feared the amendment would affect the terms of the lease for the balance of the term, whereas the committee only intended to make the change apply to only one year.

On motion of Mr. Crocker the Council adhered to its former action and amended the order by adding the words "And shall execute an agreement with the city satisfactory to the City Solicitor, for the purpose of effecting said change in said lease."

STREET STANDS FOR THE SALE OF FRUIT.

Mr. Webster of Ward 3 moved to reconsider the vote by which was passed the order, viz., To petition for an act authorizing the Board of Aldermen to grant permits to worthy and needy persons to temporarily occupy portions of the streets for sale of fruit, with consent of proprietors of estates in front of which stands may be placed.

Mr. Webster—This matter was discussed pretty thoroughly in the Board of Aldermen early in the session. A remonstrance against this system of vending on the curbstones was presented, and I should like to read a few of the names to show the class of men who oppose this system. [Mr. Webster read the names of the remonstrants, which have been published, comprising many heavy taxpayers and large firms.] In the Board of Aldermen three reasons were urged why the system should be continued: first, it affords employment to poor people; second, it affords facilities for the quick sale of perishable fruit, and increases the trade of Boston; third, it supplies poor people with fruit at low prices. In order to show how the matter was understood in the Board of Aldermen I will read a few extracts from the debate. Alderman Viles says—

"While I shall vote to remove the fruit stands from the streets, I will merely reply to one or two assertions made by the Alderman last up. He said the fruit stands make no difference in regard to the sale of fruit in the stores. That is not so. I have been in a grocery store for twenty years, and we used to keep all kinds of fruits in their seasons—Malaga grapes, oranges, strawberries, bananas, etc.; but for the last ten years I have not kept any of those articles, for the reason that people on the street undersold me, and our fruits rotted on our hands. I shall not vote to remove them, for it is pretty hard to prevent a poor man from getting a living. I know that the street stands are demoralizing to the fruit stores on our street, and it is so all over the city."

And Alderman Slade, who is in the commission and produce commission business, and understands the matter pretty thoroughly, said—

"If I understand it, the trouble about this is that this trade has got to be immense with people who pretend to be poor, and have stands upon the streets, but the same persons will employ a dozen or fifteen, more or less, at a certain price per day, get the stands, furnish them with fruits, and take the benefit of the profits. I think this order should go back to the committee, and let them look into the matter. I have understood that some of these individuals who have numerous stands will go down to the auction sales of fruits and purchase more than any dealer would dare to purchase; and that makes a competition in fruit, because they know they do not have to pay any rent, and can sell at much less than a dealer can, and therefore they can pay higher prices."

Then Alderman O'Brien said—

At the same time, the dealers in fruit who occupy stores and pay taxes have good reason to complain of the present state of affairs. If the business were confined exclusively to the poor, there would be very little or no objection to street stands; but it has become of such magnitude that capitalists are now in the business, and some of our street vendors are no longer mere retailers, but compete with our largest jobbers in the purchase of fruit, frequently buying from fifty to one hundred boxes of oranges at a time, and sometimes even a larger amount. With no rent and no taxes, they can afford to sell cheap, and unless this business is placed under more stringent regulations, stores devoted exclusively to the sale of fruit will have to be given up. Capitalists, who have no stores, who pay no taxes, who never intend to become citizens, supply many of the prominent street corners with all the fruit that is sold, interfering with the business of the regular dealers, and these men ought to be reached if possible. No one person should be allowed more than one stand, and no one should be allowed to sell fruit on the street who has accumulated any considerable amount of money. These permits should be given only to the poor, and if this is done I believe there will be no complaint.

And Alderman Clark said—

"It seems to me that it is hardly necessary to refer this matter to the Committee on Licenses, because all licenses expire on the 1st of May. If the committee exercise their judgment, I think they will not allow permits to any speculative persons. I believe no permits should be granted to any but persons in necessitous circumstances. Many of the present occupants of stands are known to own their own houses and have money in bank; and in my opinion such persons should not have permits. So far as possible, the permits should be given only to citizens of the city."

In conclusion, Alderman Fitzgerald, the chairman of the Committee on Licenses, said—

"The committee should see to it that no persons except those poor men who have large families dependent upon them should receive licenses, and I, as chairman of the committee, and my colleagues, will scrutinize them so that nobody, except those poor people who are unable to go into business, shall get a license to sell these fruits."

In the entire debate it was admitted that they all realized the evil that was going along together too great an extent; that it was a great injury to real estate and injustice to the fruit dealers; and it was only allowed to go on upon the distinct understanding and pledge by the chairman of the committee that, when the permits expired on the 1st of May, they would be scrutinized very carefully, and none but the worthy poor should be allowed to occupy those stands. It was continued upon the distinct understanding that they did not want to interfere with poor people. Now, I wish to show very briefly how much consideration has been paid towards keeping only poor people on the stands. I have taken the trouble to collect a few facts about some of the occupants of stands near by us, and there are many more facts of a similar nature that can readily be obtained if any one has the time to do so; and for the substantial accuracy of the statements I shall make I am ready to stake my reputation: Dominick Malatesto, corner Summer and Washington streets; it is reported that he is well off, that his business is good for $1500 profit per year. Augustus Lagino, at the corner of Court and Howard streets, owns real estate and is worth considerable money. Ellen Sullivan, corner of Milk and Washington streets, is reported on good authority to be worth $20,000; owns real estate in South Boston, and rents a store for forty-five dollars per month. Mrs. Hickey, at the corner of State and Washington streets, is well off. Mrs. Harrington, on Winter street, owns real estate. Mr. J. Field, on Pemberton square, was taxed in 1866 for $4800 and is said to be worth $10,000. Mrs. Osgood is on Union street at the corner of North street; her husband has a store at the junction of Union and Washington streets; owns real estate, is well off and is taxed for $1000. But perhaps the best illustration of the system is the Widow Hennessey, who has a stand on the corner of Tremont and Beacon streets; last summer she came down to City Hall barefoot, to obtain a permit; it turned out that she owed about $4000, but it was ascertained that she had several thousand dollars in the bank; and after her creditors had got what she owed them she boasted that she still had $6000. I understand that the gentleman from Ward 23 [Mr. Brown] was one of the creditors in this case, and I tender to him the sympathy of the entire Council.

Mr. McGaragle of Ward 8 raised the point of order that Mr. Wehster's time had expired, and, on motion of Mr. Howes of Ward 18, the rule was suspended.

Mr. Webster of Ward 3—The stand on the corner of Summer and Washington streets requires three men to run it; in peach season fifty baskets is a small sale for one day; it is reported that the proprietor has an offer of $1000 bonus for his chance; he was able to obtain the services of first-class counsel when prosecuted recently, as, in fact, many others have done. It is reported on good authority that many of these dealers have money in bank, but not in their own names, so that it is impossible to ascertain the amount. It is also somewhat interesting to consider the career of Captain Tobin in connection with this matter. He had charge of all these permits, and the Committee on Licenses intended, with his assistance, to do away with the entire system excepting so far as it related to poor people. In this connection I will take the liberty to read a few extracts from the Herald of a few days ago:

"Several days ago, in commenting upon the enrious manner in which the municipal system of licensing fruit dealers was conducted, we had occasion to intimate that Mr. P. H. Brady, one of the parties interested in these operations, was either a misunderstood philanthropist or a very dispicable rogue. Whatever doubts we may have had at that time have since been set at rest, for a thorough investigation of his case has developed such results as to make hesitancy as to his classification an impossibility. We have in our possession a huge mass of evidence comprising statements made by a large number of these small dealers with whom this man has had business. Some are comparatively well-to-do dealers; others are the poorest of the poor; but in each instance the same story is repeated, that hard-earned money was obtained under some specious device. Nor is this the worst feature. In several cases this illegal tax was levied on the ground of agreements on Brady's part to obtain certain concessions of privileges. These agreements were never fulfilled; but the money once put into Brady's pocket was lost past all recovery. Since the publication of our former criticism on these muddy transactions, Mr. Brady has had the assurance to print a note, stating that he has received money for acting as "broker in the procurement of permissions from abutters." There is a fine mercantile air about this assertion. It justly calls to one's mind the stock exchange, and large business operations, so extended, indeed, as to make it impossible for the first parties in the trade to meet and settle their own affairs. But a little reflection shows that this brokerage was unwillingly paid by Italian men and women. And for what? For Brady's assistance in appealing to neighboring property owners? We think it would be no difficult matter to show that money has been demanded and paid in cases where there was no pretence made of soliciting permission from abutters. Leaving Brady to the enjoyment of his commissions, we would ask, what action does the City Government propose to take in regard to the other party to these transactions? It is not necessary for us to cite the facts that are at our command, for within the past three weeks an official investigation has been made by the police, developing, as we understand, a close relationship between the "broker" and the Superintendent, Captain Tobin."

This investigation was perhaps the most secret one that ever was held in City Hall. The reporters were carefully excluded and the evidence is not readily accessible, as I could not obtain it. It was not intended that it should be fully reported, but it was testified to, to my certain knowledge, and admitted by Captain Tobin, that one party who refused to loan Captain Tobin $300 on poor security, had his license revoked. There was so much testimony of that kind, that upon the Mayor perusing it, Captain Tobin was immediately removed. I only quote this to show that the cry that we should have to support these poor people in our public institutions, if the permits are not granted, is not founded on facts. A very large portion of them are not our own citizens; they are men who have no particular sympathy for our institutions, but are attracted here by the prospect of carrying hand-organs and peddling fruits. It can be demonstrated beyond a reasonable doubt that many of them return to Italy comparatively wealthy; and it can be shown that very few are paupers, and that many are far from requiring support from the city of Boston. The idea that granting the permits prevents them from going to the public institutions is a delusion. Now, in regard to the facilities for the quick distribution of fruit; it can be readily ascertained by inquiry that 1800 dealers, representing four millions of capital, who formerly engaged in the fruit business, only nominally keep fruit today, and have practically, as Aldermen Viles says, been obliged to give up the traffic. I submit that we should extend the same privileges to these 1800 dealers that we do to these foreigners; that we should allow them to sell upon the curbstone, and that they should have the benefit of any liberal construction of the law which we give to the other class for the sale of perishable fruit. No dealer can have any connection with a curbstone stand; if he does he is hounded; but these outside parties who pay no rent or taxes, can completely control the sale of perishable fruit. If the law is to be construed loosely, and any one is to have the benefit of a doubt, our own taxpayers and citizens should have the preference. The second claim is, that it supplies poor people with fruit at a low price. Now, fruit is a luxury: there are many other articles just as good as fruit. We have no evidence that poor people had any trouble in getting fruit a few years ago. The fruit business can afford to compete on equal terms with other branches of trade, and pay rent and taxes. The idea that we should have one article furnished free of rent and taxes will not bear critical examination for a moment, in my judgment. For example, until within something less than a year there have been crockeryware stands upon Blackstone square and other places. I have always been poor, and believe that crockeryware was more necessary to obtain cheap than oranges and bananas. The fruit dealers have a common impression that by going to Alderman Clark, who is a crockery dealer, the stands were discontinued; and we have one crockery dealer in the Council who voted not to remove the stands. I don't want a hat stand near my store, for I could not compete with persons who pay no rent or taxes. A good many dealers in lager beer voted for stands; and if it is good for poor people, why should it not be sold on the streets? If whiskey punch is a good thing at ten cents, why not get it for five? Why do you pick out fruit and demand that it be furnished so cheap, and not undertake to carry out that principle, be consistent, and give the same chance to others? The arguments against this thing are that it is wrong in principle; that it is constantly increasing, a standing menace to the best interests of the city, and opens the door to bribery and corruption. The matter was thoroughly sifted by the License Committee this year, and the result shows an amount of bribery, intimidation and humbugging that would reflect credit upon New York in the palmiest days of Tweed. In many cases these dealers pay rent of $3 to $5 a week to the abutters for the privileges. We have no time to investigate this matter, but I propose to have it referred to the next City Council who will have time to investigate it. During the last season there have been twenty complaints, and the judge has ruled that it was not necessary to prove that the dealers were poor citizens; the fact that the stand was there was evidence of obstruction. These 1800 parties who formerly sold fruit now pay rent and taxes, but now do not clear $25 on their fruit, in my judgment, on account of this system. From a mercantile standpoint I do not believe it is a disgrace to be a citizen and taxpayer, and I contend that we should not go out of our way to benefit those who are not. Competition should be fair and equal in all classes of trade, and every man should have a fair chance.

At the request of Mr. Brown of Ward 23, Mr. Webster repeated his allusion to Mrs. Hennessey, saying that he had been informed that since Mr. Brown had become a creditor he had apparently changed his mind in regard to the correctness of the system.

Mr. Brown of Ward 23—I understand it, and I stand before you, sir, and this Council, as neutral in this business; I have heard some things in connection with this matter that I did not know before, and all I have to reply to in the remark of the gentleman is in regard to Mrs. Hennessey. She owed $1400 instead of several thousand, and we got our pay. The information he gives that Mrs. Hickey is well off is very important to me. Two years ago she owed us $300 for oranges and lemons, and I gave the bill to the collector, telling him that we would give him half of it if he would collect it; I will sell the gentleman the other half for half a dollar. In relation to Mr. Dominick, on the corner of Summer street, I am gratified to inform the Council that we did trust him and took a dividend in 1877. Mr. Field occupies private property in Pemberton square, and has had a permit from the owner; he is well off. Mrs. Sullivan, the widow lady, at the corner of Milk and Washington streets, is,

I understand, well off. When the petition came before the City Government two years ago, the firm of which I happen to be senior member refused to sign it, and from that time to this we have stood at that base; but I can say to the Council that this street business has got to be a great nuisance. They have got to be too many, and they block the streets in a manner that is not necessary. There are a great many people who think it is necessary that these poor people should have these stands, but I believe there are really no storekeepers who would be offended or hurt by the poor women having stands on the streets. But I do believe there are too many rich Italians occupied with the street stands of Boston, and thus ends my neutrality.

The reconsideration was declared lost. Mr. Webster of Ward 3 doubted the vote, and on his motion the yeas and nays were ordered:

Yeas—Messrs. Beeching, Blanchard, Blodgett, Briutnall, Brown, Clarke, Coe, Crocker, Day, Felt, Hibbard, Hiscock, Howes, Pratt, J. B. Richardson, Roach, Roberts, Thompson, Thorndike, Upham, Warren, E. R. Webster, G. B. Webster, Wilbur, Wolcott—25.

Nays—Messrs. Barnard, Barry, Burke, Cannon, Cox, Cross, Danforth, Dee, Doherty, Fagan, Fernald, D. A. Flynn, J. J. Flynn, Fraser, Ham, Jackson, Kelley (Ward 3), Kidney, McClusky, McDouald, McGaragle, Morrill, Mowry, Mullane, Nugent, O'Connor, Pearl, J. H. Pierce, O. H. Pierce, Pope, Reed, M. W. Richardson, Sampson, Shepard, Sibley, Smardon, Souther, Spenceley, Stone, Vose—40.

Absent or not voting—Messrs. Duggan, Kelley (Ward 6), Loughlin, O'Donnell, Perham, Ruffin—6.

SQUANTUM BRIDGE.

Mr. Clarke of Ward 22 moved to reconsider the vote of reference to next City Council of order to petition Legislature for authority for the city of Boston, the county of Norfolk and the town of Quincy to connect said city with said town by a bridge to Squantum.

Mr. Clarke—I did not oppose the reference to the next City Government, but after the adjournment of the last meeting it occurred to me that this matter was not thoroughly understood. In order to get this matter properly before the town meeting in March, the articles must be made up in February, and as very little business is done in the City Government before that time, there would not be time to consider it. I have the petition for this bridge, signed by C. E. Folsom and 186 others, which was presented last August. [Mr. Clarke read the petition.] The petitioners reside near Harrison Square. In the summer they visit Squantum for the benefit of the beach air, and are dependent upon the town for the roadways, just as we of the north part of the city are dependent upon Revere for the drive to the beach. The petition was referred to the Street Commissioners, who reported. [Mr. Clarke read the report from page 698 of Minutes of 1877.] The commissioners recommended that authority be obtained to build the bridge, and to properly apportion the expense. The avenues leading to the bridge are private ways, which the owner offers to give for the construction of the bridge. There is a charter for a private company to build the bridge, but the Commissioners of Norfolk County and the Street Commissioners have decided that it cannot be done under that charter. Assistant Engineer Wightman says the bridge will cost about $15,000, and Mr. Davis states that it will save about $50,000 on the contract for the improved sewerage works at Moon Island on account of the distance saved in transportation. There can be no objection to obtaining the authority from the Legislature, as the expense will be apportioned between Boston and the towns.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10 said the builder of the Eastern-avenue Bridge had said the Squantum Bridge would cost $150,000.

Mr. Clark replied that such a bridge is not needed at Squantum. He had an estimate made two years ago, which was $25,000.

On motion of Mr. Wilbur of Ward 20, the matter was laid on the table.

ROXBURY CANAL.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13 moved to reconsider the vote of reference to next City Council of order for a loan of $392,000 for Roxbury Canal improvement, and preamble and order to take a certain parcel of land therein described for the abatement of the nuisance in and about said canal. (City Doc. No. 92.)

Mr. Flynn said he proposed to present a petition from Boston physicians in favor of the improvement.

Mr. Richardson of Ward 10 believed that no member of the City Government was in possession of sufficient facts to enable him to vote intelligently upon the question, and therefore he thought the proper disposition to be made of it was to refer it to the next City Government. Not body doubted the existence of the nuisance, but the objection was to spending so large a sum of money when it was unnecessary. He was perfectly aware that this measure had been lobbied since the last session. Many gentlemen had been to see him, but so far as his experience went they were not occupants of houses in the vicinity, but were owners of real estate who desired to sell their property. He could see no harm in the reference, as opportunity would be given to ascertain the facts.

Mr. Sibley of Ward 15 said he had followed the subject three years, and had known of no urging by land owners. The committee had tried to get the price of the land, but failed. The city owned a large property there which was depressed in value by the nuisance.

Mr. Mowry thought the question was not in regard to the nuisance, but what the city's rights there are, and whether the city would have to take all the land. They should not act until that question is decided.

Mr. Flynn said the City Solicitor had given an opinion that the city had no rights in the canal, so far as filling it up.

Mr. Thompson said that up to within twenty-four hours the City Solicitor had not facts enough upon which to form an opinion.

Northerly side. In 1830, Winslow Lewis bought land 240x100 feet to the canal; Lewis sold to Dow; in 1853 the city released to Dow all right to fee of canal. There are ninety feet in dispute between the Dow and Evans estate. Then there are eighty feet to the bridge, and seventy feet which are bonded to Rowe, with the right to fill. Then 130 feet belong to the city of Boston.

Southerly side—There are 100 feet belonging to Levi Morse, with no right to fill by the city; 290 feet to the executors of Winslow Lewis, no right to fill; 125 feet to J. Ham, no right; 50 feet to J. Ham, right to fill; 80 feet to the bridge; 30 feet of Morse's, right to fill; 300 feet to grammar school, no right.

Mr. Thompson desired the city to go to the Legislature and get an act that would be fair and just.

The reconsideration was declared lost. Mr. Flynn doubted the vote, and on his motion the yeas and nays were ordered and the motion was lost.

Yeas—Messrs. Brown, Burke, Cannon, Coe, Cox, Duggan, Fagan, D. A. Flynn, J. J. Flynn, Fraser, Hiscock, Jackson, Kidney, Morrill, Mullane, Nugent, O'Conuor, O'Donnell, Pearl, Perham, Pope, Sibley, Spenceley, Upham, Vose, E. R. Webster, Wilbur—27.

Nays—Messrs. Barnard, Barry, Beeching, Blanchard, Blodgett, Brintnall, Clarke, Crocker, Cross, Danforth, Day, Dee, Doherty, Felt, Fernald, Ham, Hibbard, Howes, Kelley (Ward 3), McClusky, McDonald, McGaragle, Mowry, J. H. Pierce, O. H. Pierce, Pratt, Reed, J. B. Richardson, M. W. Richardson, Roberts, Ruffin, Sampson, Shepard, Smardon, Stone, Thompson, Thorndike, Warren, G. B. Webster, Wolcott—40.

Absent or not voting—Messrs. Kelley (Ward 6), Loughlin, Roach, Souther—4.
Sent up.

PETITIONS PRESENTED.

By Mr. Kelley of Ward 3—Petition of Samuel G. Reed for leave to erect a wooden building on Carlton street, near Crescent avenue, Ward 24. Referred to the Committee on Survey and Inspection of Buildings. Sent up.

By Mr. Howes of Ward 18—Petition of Francis J. Caswell, to be paid for repairs on a pump in the Charlestown District. Referred to the Committee on Claims. Sent up.

CHRIST CHURCH TABLET.

Mr. Ham of Ward 14 submitted the following:
The joint special committee appointed to commemorate historical sites respectfully represent that they will be unable to make a contract for placing the proposed tablet on Christ Church before the close of the present municipal year, as the order giving the necessary authority was passed at so late a day that the City Architect has not as yet had sufficient time to prepare the proper plans and specifications. As the general design of the inscription has been adopted by the City Council, your committee are of the opinion that the work should be proceeded with at once, and they therefore respectfully recommend the passage of the following order:

Ordered, That the City Architect be and he is hereby authorized to place a suitable tablet on Christ Church, Salem street, in accordance with the design adopted by the City Council; the expense to be charged to the special appropriation provided for that purpose.

Read twice and passed. Sent up.

BACK BAY STREETS AND AVENUES.

Mr. Sampson of Ward 17 submitted the following from the Committee on Finance:

The Auditor of Accounts respectfully represents to this committee that there is a deficiency in the appropriation for Back Bay streets and avenues of $1426 over and above the balance of said appropriation of $622.75, the total of both sums, viz., $2048.75, being needed to pay for the land purchased under authority of an order of the City Council of March 6, 1876, for the abutments on the south side of the bridge built over the track of the Boston & Albany Railroad on West Chester park extended, the payment for which has been delayed until this time to perfect the title of said land. Your committee therefore respectfully recommend the passage of the accompanying order making the necessary transfer of appropriation of the same sum of $1426.

Ordered, That the Auditor of Accounts be and he is hereby authorized to transfer from the Reserved Fund to the appropriation for Back Bay streets and avenues the sum of $1426.

Read twice and passed—yeas 69, nays 1; Mr. Stone of Ward 3 voting nay. Sent up.

BILLS ALLOWED.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13 offered an order—That the Auditor of Accounts allow for payment the bill of H. D. Parker, for refreshments furnished the Army and Navy Monument Committee, amounting to $425.70, the said bill not having been presented at his office within three months of the date of the contracting the same, as required by the twenty-first joint rule of the City Council; said amount to be charged to the appropriation for Incidentals. Read twice and passed. Sent up.

CONCORD STREET IMPROVEMENT.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13 offered an order—That the Joint Standing Committee on Streets be and they are hereby authorized to sell at private sale to the Tremont National Bank the strip of land belonging to the city at the corner of State and Congress streets, containing 365 square feet, for the sum of $20,000.

Mr. Flynn explained that the matter had been held in abeyance for some time, and the only customers being the bank, who had made a definite offer, the committee felt it their duty to report it for the action of the City Council.

Mr. Thompson said it was too small to build upon, and if the bank offered a fair price it was for the interest of the city to take it.

Mr. Crocker was of the same opinion, and that it would lead to the erection of a good building and remove the blot upon the appearance of State street.

The order was read twice and passed.

Subsequently a motion by Mr. Day to reconsider was lost. Sent up.

IMPROVED SEWERAGE WORKS AT MOON ISLAND

Mr. Sampson of Ward 17 offered an order—That the Auditor of Accounts is hereby authorized to pay Oliver S. Sanford the sum of five thousand dollars upon his procuring and delivering to the city a deed of release of the Old Colony Wharf Company, and the releases of the several mortgages and the tax titles covering the land at Old Harbor Point, which he has agreed to sell to the city for the improved sewerage, and also upon his giving to the city a bond in the penal sum of ten thousand dollars satisfactory to the Committee on Improved Sewerage for the time being, to procure releases to the city from the heirs of Mrs. Ann Wheeler, or their assigns, of said land at Old Harbor Point, and assigning to the city the first mortgage covering said land, given by Samuel A. Wheelock to Joseph S. Hyde; and further ordered, that upon said Sanford procuring and delivering to the city such releases from the heirs of the said Wheeler, or their assigns, or in case such releases cannot be procured, upon the barring of all claims which may arise from the taking of said land hereafter, the Mayor be authorized to execute a discharge of said bond and reassignment of said mortgage, and the said Auditor be authorized to deliver the same, and pay to said Sanford the further sum of ten thousand dollars, with interest from the day of payment of the aforesaid sum of five thousand dollars, all such deeds, bonds and releases to be satisfactory to the City Collector.

Mr. Thompson explained that Mr. Sanford was desirous of obtaining his money and was to assign the mortgage as collateral.

The order was read twice and passed. Sent up.

DOCUMENTS TO BE BOUND.

Mr. Smardon of Ward 10 offered an order—That the City Messenger cause to be bound a number of the city documents of the proceedings of the City Council for the year 1877 sufficient to furnish each member of the City Council and the heads of the principal departments of the City Government with a copy of each volume; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Printing. Read twice and passed. Sent up.

CITY MESSENGER'S OFFICE.

Mr. Smardon offered an order—That there be allowed and paid to the City Messenger the sum of $35, the same having been paid by him for extra assistance in his department during the present year; the expense to be charged to the appropriation for Salaries. Read twice and passed. Sent up.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS REFERRED.

Mr. Spenceley of Ward 19 offered an order—That all matters of an unfinished nature in the hands of the several joint standing committees of the City Council be referred to the next City Council. Read twice and passed. Sent up.

EAST BOSTON HIGH SCHOOL.

On motion of Mr. Beeching, the order to rescind so much of the order of Oct. 9 as provides that the expense of fitting up old Lyman School-house for a branch of English High School shall be charged to Schoolhouses, Public Buildings, and passage of an order for a transfer of $2000 from Reserved Fund to pay therefore, was taken from the table and indefinitely postponed.

SWETT STREET.

On motion of Mr. Flynn, the order to receive the amounts subscribed as full payment of betterments for laying out Swett street was taken from the table and passed in concurrence, after an explanation by Mr. Flynn, that the betterments and the subscriptions were equal in amount.

THE CLOSING PROCEEDINGS.

Mr. Beeching of Ward 1 in the chair.

Mr. Flynn of Ward 13—It is my pleasing duty, as a retiring member, to offer the customary vote of thanks to our presiding officer; and I hope that when the motion is taken it will be by a standing vote, and that it will be unanimous.

Resolved, That the thanks of the Common Council of the city of Boston for 1877 are hereby tendered to Benjamin Pope, Esq., as a recognition of the urbanity, fidelity and ability with which he has discharged the duties of President of this board during the past year, and as a tribute of the hearty wishes of the members for his future health and prosperity.

The order was read twice and passed by a unanimous rising vote.

The President resumed the chair and said—

Gentlemen of the Common Council—When by your favor I was elected to the honorable position of President of this Common Council, personally unknown as I was to so many of you, I felt that you had reposed in me a confidence that invoked the exercise of my best endeavors. To discharge the duties of the office with fairness and impartiality between the members of this Council, and with a due regard to the public interests, has been my constant aim, and, while I have not been conscious at any time of having intentionally swerved from what seemed to me to be the strict line of duty, yet no one has been more sensible than I have myself of my own deficiencies, and how far I have fallen short of reaching my own ideal of a presiding officer. The duties which I have been called upon to perform have been more onerous, and at times more perplexing, than usually devolve upon the President of this Common Council. I perceived as the year progressed, as we were getting more and more acquainted, that I was continually receiving proofs of your confidence and friendly feeling toward me, rendering my duties less and less burdensome.

The resolution which you have just passed will be treasured up by me with thankful remembrance as a token of your kindness and good will toward me, rather than as a measure of my own qualifications. In common with my predecessors, I am glad of this opportunity to acknowledge my indebtedness to Mr. Gregg, the faithful and efficient Clerk, for the valuable advice and assistance which he has always been ready to give with a kindness and cheerfulness that have made a pleasure of my necessities. And, so long as he may be spared with health and strength to perform the duties of his office, so long will his knowledge and experience be indispensable to whomsoever may occupy this chair.

This City Government entered upon the discharge of its duties at a time when the community was groaning under the burdens which it was called upon to bear in consequence of the business depression which spread like a pall over almost every interest in this country, and from which there seem even now to be few signs of emerging. The call for relief came to us from the people, the taxpayers for economy in municipal expenditures, the working men thronging the corridors of this City Hall for employment, which they had elsewhere sought in vain. Vast projects, involving great expenditures, having been to our predecessors subjects of anxious consideration, some not quite matured, some more than ripe but not gathered in, perhaps from a sense of the responsibility which they carried, came down to us as an inheritance from former City Governments.

To relieve the taxpayers, whose interests we were sent here to protect, seemed to be the first duty incumbent upon us. An impression was abroad in the community that there was no end to municipal extravagance. To do something toward removing this feeling, and thus in some degree to restore confidence, early engaged the attention of the City Council. A Joint Special Committee on the Retrenchment of Municipal Expenditures was appointed, and resulted in a large reduction of the salaries of those employed in every department of the city. It had been the usual custom to carry the unexpended balances of appropriations at the close of each financial year into the Sinking Fund established for the liquidation of the city debt. It was deemed advisable in lieu thereof to apply these balances toward defraying the expenses of the current year, so much reducing the amount to be raised by taxation.

The reductions made in the different departments, together with the disposition made of the unexpended balances, amounted to about one million of dollars, so that while the valuation by the Board of Assessors was largely reduced, the rate of taxation was not materially increased. It appears to me that so long as the city adheres to the policy of borrowing money for the purpose of carrying out improvements, creating debts which must inevitably be paid, together with interest amounting to two or three times the principal, so long will every effort in the direction of economy seem but puny and discouraging. When we consider that about thirty per cent. of the whole tax levy is consumed in the payment of the interest on the gross debt, it appears to me that the policy of making, or supposing we are making those who reap the benefits of present improvements pay for them in the distant future, when in the meantime several times the amount is frittered away in the payment of interest, is a fallacy. The two millions and a half of money that the people are annually taxed for interest would be sufficient to pay for all the vast improvements set on foot this year before they can possibly be completed.

The subject of an improved system of sewerage has been before the City Council for several years. Under authority of orders dated Feb. 23 and March 1, 1875, the Mayor appointed a commission skilled in engineering and sanitary science, to investigate the present system of sewerage and to devise a scheme which should provide an effectual system of sewerage sufficient for the future wants of the city. This commission reported in January, 1876, and the plan which was submitted was referred to a Joint Special Committee on Improved Sewerage. This committee reported June 12, 1876, in favor of adopting the plan of the commission. An appropriation was granted and authority given to make the preliminary surveys. These having been completed, the committee were enabled to present a report concerning them on July 12 of the current year. Their report was adopted, recommending a loan of $3,713,000 for the construction of an improved system of sewerage, having its outlet at Moon Island. If this plan should prove effectual—and that it will is the opinion of the best engineering and sanitary talent in the country—there is no reason why Boston should not, when the sewer is actually in operation, become the cleanest and healthiest of the large cities of the world. Those who have had special charge of this important subject, and who have so ably pressed it upon the attention of the City Council, will enjoy the satisfaction of having been instrumental in conferring upon their city a blessing which will be appreciated, and take rank with the introduction of Cochituate water. Some of the minor portions of the work are already in progress. Mr. Davis, the City Engineer, has been sent to Europe to make a personal inspection of similar works which have been constructed in the principal cities, that he may witness their operation before pushing forward the more important parts of the work at home.

On account of the sewage of the towns of Winchester, Woburn and Medford flowing into the Mystic River, thereby contaminating the source of supply of the Mystic Water Works, preliminary measures were taken in 1874, and in May, 1875, an act was passed in the Legislature authorizing the city of Boston to construct a sewer in the Mystic Valley. In February, 1876, an order was passed in the City Council providing for its construction. It was found to be inoperative on account of an error in the act, so that additional legislation was required. This was had in the early part of the session of 1877. The subject came before the City Council last May, and an order was passed authorizing a loan of $200,000 for the construction of the sewer. This work is being carried on under the direction of the Boston Water Board, and it is expected that it will be completed next June.

The subject of public parks which had engrossed the attention of our predecessors for a number of years, has received patient and careful consideration at the hands of the present City Council. That the laying out of one hundred acres of the Back Bay territory and preparing it for the purposes of a public park would remedy a nuisance which, in the opinion of our most eminent medical men, is detrimental to the health of the inhabitants, seemed to be the conclusive argument which determined the minds of the members of this City Council in consenting to its purchase. An order was passed July 12 authorizing the Park Commissioners to make this purchase at a rate not exceeding ten cents per foot, and providing an appropriation of $450,000, to be raised by a loan. The purchase of the larger portion of this territory was completed on the 29th ult.

The condition of Stony Brook has been a source of grievance to the inhabitants along its borders for many years. It is claimed that the cellars of 127 houses are subject to inundation, to the danger of the health of the occupants by the overflow of this stream after every heavy fall of rain and by the melting of the snow in winter and early spring. The City Council, after mature deliberation, agreed to a loan of $133,000 for the purpose of abating this nuisance. It is asserted that 180 acres of meadow and low lands, covered at times by this overflow, will now be effectually drained and benefited to such an extent that the city will be entitled to receive back for betterments a large portion of the cost of this improvement.

The strenuous exertions of those interested in East Boston, put forth for several years, resulted on the 19th of July in the passage of an order by this City Council providing that on and after Jan. 1, 1878, the tolls on the East Boston ferries be abolished and the said ferries be run free to the public travel. This measure passed the Board of Aldermen by a unanimous vote and received a large majority in this branch. It seemed remarkable that a measure of so much importance, pressed by its friends with so much vigor, flooding this City Government with petitions and memorials in its favor, should have awakened no considerable opposition in the community until after the passage of the order, until final action had been taken. Its opponents caused it to be brought to the attention of the Supreme Judicial Court, who, on account of legal impediments to the order, issued a mandamus, which was presented at the last meeting of the Council, directing the city of Boston to continue to collect the tolls heretofore established, rendering the order inoperative.

The City Council appropriated in May $350,000 for the erection of suitable buildings for the English High and Latin schools, on land purchased for that purpose in 1872, on Dartmouth and Montgomery streets and Warren avenue. The loan which is thus authorized is to be paid out of the proceeds of a sale at some future time of the present English High and Latin School building on Bedford street, the Bowditch School on South street, the Savage School on Harrison avenue, the Mayhew School on Hawkins street, and the old Franklin School on Washington street. The foundations of this building are nearly completed, and it is thought two years will be consumed in the erection of the superstructure.

The project of widening Commercial street, which has been so long agitated, found favorable action by the City Council at its late meetings, but in an essentially modified form from what was originally proposed. As it passed, provision was made for a loan of $500,000, any excess of cost above said amount to be paid by the corporations and abutters who may be benefited thereby, the street to be eighty feet wide, and the widening to be mainly on the water side.

The subject of the proposed purchase of Mercantile wharf for the purpose of a vegetable market, as well as the plan for abating the nuisance in the Roxbury Canal, not having been fully considered by this City Council, have been properly referred to the next City Government. None of these projects originated with this City Council; most of them had received patient consideration by those who sat here before us. Concerning the utility of most of them there has been but little question, the principal opposition arising from a feeling of reluctance to large expenditures during the prevailing depression in business affairs, and that it would be better to postpone action till the taxpayers are better able to sustain the burden.

In addition to the regular business allotted to the City Council, several investigations have been instituted, among which were the inquiry into the causes of the unfortunate Blackstone-square accident on the 17th of September, the investigation into the Department of Common and Public Grounds, and into the Department of Health, in consequence of those departments incurring expenditures in excess of their appropriations. These inquiries, while they have brought to light no startling developments, will undoubtedly have the effect in the future to induce those who have responsible duties to perform to exercise care in directions where care was never thought necessary before, and warning boards and departments in charge of the public work that appropriations cannot be exceeded with impunity.

The resolution recommended by the committee on the investigation into the Department of Common and Public Grounds, and adopted by the City Council, that a proper performance of the city work requires that the superintendent should hire the laborers, etc., might with profit be extended to some other departments, and result in some more sensible way of hiring laborers than has obtained during the past year, thus maintaining discipline in the departments, relieving the members of the Council, and raising the morale of the laborer.

The most interesting occasion in which the City Council has participated during the last year was the dedication of the Army and Navy Monument, erected to the memory of those who lost their lives in the late civil war. To those who witnessed and took part in this pageant, perhaps the most splendid that ever took place in Boston, it will be a day of pleasant memories.

I have given a résumé of the more important matters that have engaged the attention of the City Council during the municipal year. With such projects before us, affecting as they do the comfort, the convenience, the health, the interest of our fellow citizens, requiring patient study, sound judgment and honest convictions, concerning which there are so widely differing shades of opinion and calling for full discussions; with the ordinary work of carrying on the Government, no wonder that the City Council of 1877 has lingered laboring at its post of duty till the old year laps upon the new, and the farewells of the departing mingle with the greetings of the year that has come. Our labors are now concluded and we are to lay down the trust which was confided to us by our fellow citizens.

It is pleasing to know that this session, with all its spirited debates, its sharp, decided differences of opinion, has not been marred by personalities. In conclusion, I once more return to you my sincere thanks for the honor you conferred upon me in placing me in this chair, and I assure you that I shall always have a friendly greeting for every member of this Council. We are now to part, and we part friends; and our thanks are due to the Giver of every good and perfect gift that we have not been called upon to mourn the loss of any one among us, and now that we meet here together for the last time, that he has permitted us to assemble with undiminished numbers.

Mr. Burke of Ward 2 offered an order—That the President of this Council be requested to furnish a copy of his address, that the same may be printed and bound with the city documents. Read twice and passed, the question being put by the clerk.

Adjourned sine die, on motion of Mr. Howes of Ward 18.

THE CONGRESS-STREET WIDENING.

An order came down for the Joint Committee on Streets to sell at private sale to the Tremont National Bank the 365 square feet of land on the corner of State and Congress streets for $20,000.

The question was on the passage of the order in concurrence.

Alderman Thompson asked for some reason for the adoption of the order.

Alderman Viles in the chair.

Alderman Clark—It is well known that the city purchased the building of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company for the widening of Congress street. The building was taken down, and the 365 feet of land remaining came into the care of the Joint Committee on Streets. It begins at nothing on State street, and runs back 125 feet to a width of five feet. It is of immense value to the Tremont Bank, as it is the key to light and air, should they wish to erect a building on the corner of State and Congress streets. Immediately after the building was taken down, the bank made a proposition to purchase this strip of land. The first proposition was made two years ago. The committee supposed that it would bring $75 a foot, and we offered it to the bank for that; the bank declined, and the matter has been in this condition ever since. The committee have made various attempts to sell this land, but have never been able to obtain what we thought we would be justified in making a sale at. Three months ago the Tremont Bank appointed a sub-committee with full powers to purchase this land at such a price as they might deem for the interest of the bank. That sub-committee came before the Committee on Streets, and after a long hearing, and a strenuous attempt on our part to obtain $60 a square foot, at which we offered it to them, and which would make the price $21,900, the sub-committee declined that offer; but they left a proposition with the Committee on Streets to pay $20,000, precisely the same amount they offered two years ago, which is a little over $55 a foot, and they left that offer open for a month. We delayed accepting, believing that they would come to our terms, but they have not; and at the very last moment I felt it my duty, as a member of the City Council, not to give them and the citizens an opportunity to say that the Committee on Streets had stood in the way of the improvement which the bank proposed to carry out. A majority of the directors of the bank are in favor of the purchase, and if the Board concur in passing this order, the purchase will be made immediately, and they will proceed forthwith to erect a new bank building on the entire land, and make other desirable improvements. I have felt, and still feel, that the price is too low; that the land is actually worth more to the bank than $60 or $75 a foot, and if they could not get it for less, it is worth $100, because it will make them one of the finest estates in the city of Boston. But they know that it is not worth $10,000 to anybody but the bank, and that nobody can afford to pay that for it and improve it in its present condition. The directors did not take the advantage which a close business institution might take, by offering $10,000; but they offered what they believed a fair price, and have never varied from that offer, and in my opinion it is the most the city can get out of that bank this year or next. We have lost two years interest upon $20,000 and the taxes upon the land, and upon the new building which they intended to erect had they purchased the strip. While I believe they ought to pay more than $20,000, still I cannot help thinking that it is for the interest of the city to make the sale for the amount they offer. At all events, having tried for two years to obtain a higher price, I felt it my duty to place it before the City Council for them to take the responsibility, instead of having it rest upon the committee. There is nothing that my colleague on the committee can say in regard to the value of the land to the institution that I will not fully concur in. But it is an old saying that you can lead a horse to the water, but you cannot make him drink. That is the case here, and I am as fully convinced, as I am of my own existence, that $20,000 is all the present directors of the bank will pay for the land. It may be said they paid no betterment; but we received a betterment by retaining the building two years ago and obtaining $3000 rental for it, which the committee and the commissioners thought was a much larger sum than we would be able to get from betterments if the building were taken down and the improvement made within the time required by law. I have been frequently asked by merchants and business men why the Committee on Streets stood in the way of this improvement which the bank proposed to make, and have always said the committee were prepared to sell it at a less price than it ought to bring, because they desired to see the improvement made. It is presented to the Board to judge whether the land should be sold or held in the hope of getting a higher price in the future. I have the written assurance of the sub-committee that if this order is passed they shall adhere to their offer made three months ago; but I do not believe the bank would pay an increase of even $150 on that price.

Alderman Thompson—I am opposed to the order, because the price is not the value of the property, and because it has not received that consideration from the Committee on Streets that so important a matter as this should receive. I was absent from the two committee meetings when it was considered, but I would have opposed it had I been present. The city paid $375,000 for the property, on condition that the New England Life Insurance Company should occupy the building until they were able to obtain another location, and in consequence the city was unable to assess a betterment for the widening of Congress street, and by which the Tremont Bank escaped paying a betterment. The Street Commissioners state that had they been able to assess a betterment it would have amounted to $5000. Last year the land came into the possession of the Committee on Streets by the taking down of the building, and Alderman Burrage, who was a member of the committee last year, thought that $75 a foot was the lowest that the city ought to take for the estate. The committee have taken no steps to obtain an offer from any one else, and I say it is too important a matter for us to consider in the last moments of the year, and I move that he referred to the next City Government. I say it is a mistake for us to part with the land until we get nearer its value, simply because a new building is to be erected and a few banking institutions want to go there. The fact is that veneering piece of land has got to be owned by the Tremont Bank. If the bank people had accepted the proposition of the committee last year they could have had the building up a year sooner than they can now, and the difference in the rental would be $20,000. The difference in the prices fixed by the committee and myself is only $5000, and if the bank hold off they will soon lose four or five times as much as the city of Boston, because this little strip will add twenty-five per cent to the value of their estate. I have conferred with the Assessors, and Mr. Hills tells me this land is worth $100 a foot to the Tremont Bank; the Street Commissioners say the same. The Traveller Building, just across the street, is assessed at seventy dollars a foot, without the building. Is it for the interest of the city to depreciate that property by selling this piece so low? It is the key to the Tremont Bank estate, on a broad thoroughfare approaching Post Office square, where the moneyed interests of the city are concentrating. Why should not the city avail itself of this advantage? The great improvement is coming some enterprising individual will give $65 or $70 a foot for it, and hold it until the Tremont Bank wants it. That is my reason for objecting to sacrificing this land. The Traveller property is assessed at $75 a foot, Brazer's property at $70, and the little lot at the corner of State and Devonshire, owned by Mr. Galloupe, was taxed for $70, and last year it was bid in at that. The Tremont Bank land adjoining this is assessed at $65 a foot, and we propose to sell it for $55. It will make very little difference whether the order passes today or not, as no improvement can take place until spring. Last year the bank said that the city must take the offer, or they would have to repair their building; but they have not repaired it, and it remains with no occupants. They cannot repair the building, and it must come down, for they cannot compete with the modern style of buildings. This strip will give them a beautiful front on Congress street, and $70 a foot is a fair price for it. It is the key to the estate, and why should not the city avail itself of the advantage, the same as an individual would? I am glad it has been brought before the Board, that the public may know that this moneyed institution insists upon getting this land below its value.

Alderman Clark—This subject has been before the committee ever since the street was widened, and they have had no less than two or three meetings upon it every year. The committee meeting was called at 2 P. M., and we waited a half-hour for the Alderman, who did not put in an appearance; but it was the unanimous opinion of every other member of the committee that it was best for the city to make this sale, but they delayed bringing the matter before the City Council in the hope that the bank would accept the offer to sell for $21,900. When Alderman Burrage was on the committee he thought we ought to get $100 a foot, and I think so too; but during the year he said that if the bank would offer $60 it would be for the interest of the city to sell it. The responsibility will rest with the Board and not with the old committee.

Alderman Breck—I fully agree with the Alderman who has just taken his seat. I believe the time has come to sell that property to the bank. It is an eyesore to every one passing there. I agree that it is worth $100 a foot to the bank. Mr. Galloupe's land has buildings on it from which he receives rent. Nobody will buy this land except for speculation; and I think the bank ought to pay more, and was slow in coming to the conclusion I have. The difference in price is only $1900. If we had another bidder we might sell it, but we have not. The taxes will soon make up the difference between $20,000 and $21,000.

Alderman Clark—I am surprised to learn that the land about there is not assessed for more, and that makes me the more ready to vote for this order. If the Alderman wishes to make any investment outside of the bonanza, Mr. Galloupe's property can be bought for $40 a foot. I have that from William G. Russell, his attorney. No individual has made an offer for this land to improve it, though one did offer $10,000, intending to let it lie in the hope of making the bank pay a high price for it.

Alderman Thompson—The committee were called for a specific object, to which I had given my assent in private, and I did not consider it necessary to be there, as I was engaged in other business. The bank have got to buy this property, and the idea of the stronger party giving way is all nonsense. We all know that a small estate will bring much more in proportion than a large one. I object to this matter being smuggled in at the close of the year.

Alderman Clark read from the records of the committee in regard to the hearing of the directors.

Alderman Breck replied to Alderman Thompson's charge of smuggling, that the committee were closing up their business, and found this among unfinished business and acted upon it.

Alderman O'Brien said this appeared to be nothing less than an attempt of a wealthy corporation to obtain a piece of land at far less than its value. He instanced several cases in other parts of the city to show that such lots always sold high by public auction.

Alderman Wilder advocated the order, and did not believe the strip of land so valuable as had been represented.

Alderman Fitzgerald said it was a small matter to spend so much time about. The committee recommended the sale, and the amount of difference is small. He should favor the order.

Alderman O'Brien called attention to the fact that when the city deals with a wealthy corporation it must be done privately; but land must be sold by auction to every one else. The city ought not to depart from its usual custom.

Alderman Clark said the bank had desired the committee to put up the land by auction; but the committee did not believe so good a price could be obtained in that way as at private sale. The Committee on Public Lands often make sales of city land at private sale.

Alderman O'Brien said that committee would have rejected such an offer as this. Parties had offered to buy land at prices that would give people in its vicinity good ground for asking for a reduction of taxes; but all such applications had been resisted. The Committee on Streets had made a mistake in not putting this up at auction.

Alderman Robinson thought the price a pretty fair one, and the only object in putting it up at auction is to compel the bank to pay more than they should.

Alderman Thompson said that several banking institutions wanted to go to that location. There is nothing to bind the directors if the order passed.

Alderman Clark said he had a written assurance that the bank would take it at the price named.

Alderman O'Brien called attention to the fact that the Street Committee advocated selling the land for much less than they really believed it to be worth.

Alderman Thompson's motion to refer it to the next Board of Aldermen was lost—yeas 3, nays 8—Aldermen Dunbar, O'Brien, Thompson voting nay—[Alderman Gibson being absent.]

The order was passed—yeas 6, nays 3—the members voting relatively as before. Subsequently a motion to reconsider was lost.

Alderman Clark in the chair.

PROJECTING SIGNS.

Alderman Robinson submitted reports from the Committee on Police of leave to withdraw on petition of J. B. Marsh to project a sign at 82 Tremont street; and that leave be granted George W. Roemer to project a plain lantern at 200 Washington street. Severally accepted.

PAVING REPORTS AND ORDERS.

Alderman Robinson submitted the following from the Committee on Paving:

Report that no action is necessary on the petition of W. Raymond Lee et al., against changing the name of Curtis street to Chestnut Hill avenue. Accepted.

Report that leave be granted William S. Cavanaugh to move a wooden building from Park street, Ward 24, to Melville avenue. Accepted.

Report and order of location for Highland Railroad to lay tracks to connect with its car-house recently erected on Northampton street. Order read twice and passed.

Report granting leave to J. D. Judge to insert an advertising slab in the sidewalk on Beach street. Accepted.

LAMPS.

Alderman Thompson submitted reports from the Committee on Lamps, that sundry petitions had been granted, and recommending that sundry other petitioners for lamps have leave to withdraw. Severally accepted.

DOG SHOW.

Alderman Thompson presented a petition from the Kennel Club for leave to give an exhibition of dogs. On motion of Alderman Thompson the prayer of the petitioners was granted.

HOUSES OF DETENTION.

Alderman O'Brien submitted the following (City Doc. 105):

The special committee of the Board of Aldermen, who were appointed to inspect the prisons and houses of detention within the county of Suffolk, and make the examinations and reports required by the statutes of the Commonwealth, beg leave to submit their second semi-annual report for the municipal year 1877.

Your committee visited the House of Correction and lunatic hospital, at South Boston, and the Suffolk County Jail, on Charles street, on the 19th of December, and the Houses of Industry and Reformation, at Deer Island, on the 27th of December. All the institutions were found in good order and condition, and the prisoners well cared for. At the House of Correction, six hundred and thirteen able-bodied inmates were fully employed, and there was no apprehension of any scarcity of work. The cells, workshops and all the buildings connected with the institution were in perfect order; the health of the inmates generally was excellent.

The lunatic hospital is old, and in some respects unfitted for the purposes of a hospital, particularly as regards the ventilation of the basement story, where most of the unmanageable patients are confined; but, under the able superintendence of Dr. Walker, many difficulties have been overcome, and the health of the patients well cared for. At some future day it may be considered not only a matter of duty, but also of necessity, and, in fact, of economy, to build a new building, large enough to accommodate our own insane, within convenient distance of their friends and relatives, instead of sending them to the expensive State institutions, which are already overcrowded with patients. Many patients are now awaiting the completion of the Danvers Asylum, which, when opened, it is believed will soon be fully occupied, without affording much, if any, relief to the hospital at South Boston.

There was some complaint made at the jail about the sameness of the food; no change whatever is made, the bill of fare being precisely the same every day in the year. This has been the case for a long series of years. Upon examination your committee found the food sweet and palatable. There was no fault found with the quality. As most of the inmates are confined here only temporarily, and as many of them are supplied with delicacies by their friends during the period of their detention, your committee do not deem it advisable to recommend any change.

The institutions at Deer Island were found in their usual good order. These and the House of Correction we consider model institutions. For cleanliness, order, and the care of the inmates, we doubt if any similar institutions in the country will compare with them. The prisoners at Deer Island were very generally employed, and when the facilities for making paving-blocks are completed, there will be no lack of employment for all who are able to work. The city expends large sums of money annually for paving blocks, and there is every reason to believe that the work can be done profitably at the island, and made to contribute to the support of the institutions.

This labor does not interfere with any branch of industry in which our citizens are interested, as paving blocks are supplied by contractors from without the State. The committee recommends this new enterprise to the favorable consideration of the next City Council.

A considerable amount of work is performed at Deer Island, which makes but very little show in the annual returns. Great improvements have been made within the past few years upon the island itself, such as grading, constructing new avenues, and filling up low places. In this way considerable land has been reclaimed from the sea and made productive. The farm is cultivated with excellent success, the crops this year having been unusually large.

Great attention is given to the preparation of the food for the inmates. The bill of fare is changed every day. A considerable quantity of the food consumed is raised upon the island. On the day of the visit the new piggery contained about four hundred hogs, in all stages of growth.

Copies of the reports, showing the condition of the several institutions, and covering the facts required by the statutes, are appended hereto.

Respectfully submitted,

HUGH O'BRIEN.

CLINTON VILES.

GEORGE DUNBAR.

Committee of Inspectors.

The statistics given in the reports are as follows:

During the past six months there occurred three cases of contagious diseases among the prisoners, peculiar and unprecedented, viz., one of mumps, Aug. 27, 1877; one of scarlet fever, Sept. 30, 1877; and one of typhoid fever, Nov. 30, 1877.

House of Industry. Number remaining June 27, 1877, 714; number committed since June 27, 1877, 3618. Total, 4332. Number discharged since June 27, 1877, 3512. Number remaining Dec. 27, 1877, 820.

Discharged at expiration of sentence, 427; pardoned by Governor, 6; paid fine and costs, 8; discharged by order of Municipal Court after serving three months, 13; died, 2.

Lunatic Hospital. Remaining at the inspection, June 26, 1877—Males, 96; females, 98; total, 194. Admitted since—Males, 7; females, 9; total, 16; total number during the term, 210. Discharged—Recovered, 7; much improved, 3; died, 4; total, 14. Total number remaining at last inspection, Dec. 19, 1877—Males, 96; females, 100; total, 196. Causes of Death—Exhaustion of chronic mania, 2; general paralysis ("paresis"), 1; congestion of lungs (in consumption), 1; total, 4.

The hospital fails every year to do its full quota of good to our citizens, who suffer bitterly therefore, because of that well intended but unfortunate order, restricting the action of the Judge of Probate. Why may it not be rescinded? Surely the Judge of Probate and the Board of Directors can be entrusted with a matter with which they are so familiar, and in which they are so deeply interested!

All the requirements of the law are believed to have been fully complied with, in the matters of clothing, bathing, cleanliness, ventilation, etc., as far as possible.

Accepted.

ARMORIES.

Alderman O'Brien offered the following:

Ordered, That there be allowed and paid the sum of $500 on account of fitting up and furnishing the armory occupied by Company D, Fifth Regiment Infantry, M. V. M., at the corner of Lexington and Bunker Hill streets, Charlestown; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Armories.

Read twice and passed.

Ordered, That there be allowed and paid the sum of $300 on account of rent of the armory heretofore occupied by Company D, Fifth Regiment Infantry, M. V. M., at the corner of Bow and Harvard streets, Charlestown, for the period from July 1, 1877, to Jan. 1, 1878; said sum to be charged to the appropriation for Armories. Read twice and passed.

STABLES.

Alderman Viles submitted reports from the Committee on Health on the part of the Board that leave be granted to occupy stables as follows: Metropolitan Railroad Company, Border street, provided a blank brick wall shall be constructed on the southeast side, and a tar or pitch and gravelled roof to said stable; Charles Brooks, Florence street; Nelson N. Farrar, Quincy street; N. & G. D. Chamberlin, North Harvard street; and Samuel J. Clapp, on Princeton street; also report of leave to withdraw on petition of E. C. Varney to occupy stable on Western avenue. Severally accepted.

LICENSES.

Alderman Fitzgerald submitted reports from the Committee on Licenses in favor of approval of the transfer of certain wagon and hack licenses; an order granting licenses to sundry auctioneers; report granting wagon licenses to P. J. Herlihy, 34 Court square, and Richard Merrill, 6 Fulton street.

Reports accepted and said order read twice and passed.

MIDDLESEX RAILROAD.

Alderman Thompson offered an order—That the Middlesex Railroad Company is hereby authorized and empowered to run six additional cars or trips per hour over the railroad tracks south of Cornhill, where it is now authorized to run with its horses and cars.

On motion of Alderman Thompson, the order was read a second time and put upon its passage.

Alderman Robinson moved the indefinite postponement of the order.

Alderman Thompson advocated the order as giving a great convenience demanded by residents of Charlestown.

Alderman Robinson said Charlestown was as well accommodated as any other part of the city.

Alderman O'Brien said that in his section if they got a car every ten minutes they were satisfied.

Alderman Slade said he had favored some such action as this.

Alderman Fitzgerald thought it should go to the next Board with the other similar matters.

After some further discussion, motions to refer to the next Board and to indefinitely postpone were lost, the latter by yeas 3, nays 8—Aldermen Burnham, O'Brien and Robinson voting nay—and the order was passed. A motion to reconsider by Alderman Wilder was lost.

OTHER HORSE RAILROAD MATTERS.

Alderman Wilder offered an order granting a location to the Metropolitan Railroad on Beacon street to the Brookline line, which, on his motion, was referred to the next Board.

On motion of Alderman Fitzgerald the report leave to withdraw on petition of Highland Railway to run to northern depots was taken from the table and indefinitely postponed.

At the request of Alderman Clark, Alderman Fitzgerald moved to reconsider the vote of leave to withdraw on petition of Cambridge Railroad to run cars to Milk street.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS REFERRED.

Alderman Viles offered an order—That all matters of an unfinished nature in the hands of the several standing committees of this Board be referred to the next Board of Aldermen.

MARKET.

Alderman Slade offered the following:

Ordered, That from the first day of January, 1878, the rent to be paid to the city by Charles E. Morrison for his occupation of a portion of cellar No. 14, Faneuil Hall Market, shall be at the rate of $786 per annum, payable quarterly; and the rent to be paid to the city by Severance & Haley for the occupation of a portion of said cellar shall be at the rate of $354 per annum, payable quarterly.

Ordered, That the order of this Board approved Dec. 25, 1877, by which a different apportionment of the rent for said cellar was made, be and the same is hereby rescinded.

Read twice and passed.

INDEFINITELY POSTPONED.

On motion of Alderman Fitzgerald, the order for Inspector of Buildings to report on means of ingress and egress in public school buildings was taken from the table and indefinitely postponed.

SUPERINTENDENT OF LAMPS.

On motion of Alderman Fitzgerald, the executive nomination of James K. Fagin to be Superintendent of Lamps was taken from the table.

Alderman Slade moved that the nomination be rejected.

The Board refused to confirm the nomination.

The Closing Proceedings.

Alderman Burnham—It becomes my pleasant duty to offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That the thanks of this Board be presented to his Honor the Mayor for the admirable manner in which he has presided over its deliberations during the past year, and for the interest he has manifested in the despatch of the business of the Board, and its members tender to him on his retirement from office their cordial and sincere wishes for his future health and happiness.

Alderman Burnham—I desire to add my personal testimony to the urbanity of manner and kindness of heart which, as a member of the Board, has ever been manifested toward me by his Honor, during all my official and social intercourse with him, and this sentiment I know all the members will indorse; because in their official and social relations with the Mayor they have all received like treatment which demands a like recognition.

Alderman Fitzgerald—I want to say a few words upon the resolution before it is adopted by this Board. As we all know, the present Mayor came into office under very peculiar circumstances, and, during the twelve months he has been in office, he has had to contend with perhaps more than any Mayor who preceded him. When he was inaugurated it was considered by a great number of people in this city that he had been elected as a party man and that he came into office under different auspices from those who had preceded him; certainly different from those elected within the last twelve or fourteen years. His position was a peculiarly trying one. The candidates for every office in and around City Hall were legion, and the greater number of them thought the Mayor, even if he had not the appointing power, at least had it within himself, and occupied a position from which he was able, to dictate to the several committees those who should be elected and rejected for public office. His office has been swarmed with applicants for office. Members of the Board know, of course, that the offices in the gift of the Mayor are very few; but for each of these there have been at least from fifty to one hundred candidates, and for positions on the police force the applicants were counted by thousands. The difficulty he had to contend with was this: When there was but one office to fill there were fifty or one hundred needy—and sometimes seedy and unfit—candidates, and, when one was appointed, the other forty-nine or ninety-nine went off disgruntled, each forming himself into a crusader to preach down the terrible corruption and partisanship that prevailed in and around City Hall, because he was not appointed to office. There have been thousands of applicants for the position of police officer, which has the pay of a first-class mechanic with not half his independence. Few were appointed; many were disappointed. Each disappointed one had his grievance, and went forth from City Hall to preach to his fellow-citizens what a terrible City Government this was. That was one of the elements he had to contend with. There was another. I have never spoken of it in my public speeches until now; and, I may say, that from the day of the Mayor's nomination, until now, I have never had a word with him about his defeat, or the causes of it. I very seldom speak about it, and I am sorry to be obliged to speak of it here. I took particular pains not to allude to it in my public speeches in the campaign, and to keep it out of sight, because I thought that when the time came I would have an opportunity to speak of it from a more official position than a public rostrum. There was one element which the present Mayor had to contend against, and which accounts, more than anything else, for the fact that he was not re-elected Mayor of the city of Boston; and it is no discredit to him at all. He had to contend against a feeling which was expressed in a more manly and honest manner some twenty years ago, but which the intelligence and shrewdness of these individuals would not allow them to speak of publicly today. He was opposed by a sentiment which was un-American, unworthy of the city of Boston, and unworthy of its intelligence and the position it holds among the cities of the United States of America. I felt it during the campaign, and I feel it today. I felt that many thought, sir, that this City Hall should be a place where a foreign-born citizen—or many of them—ought to have no part in the government of this city. That was the great underlying sentiment which prevailed at the last election. I am accustomed to speak plainly and boldly what I think. I did not refer to it during the whole campaign; but I choose to refer to it now when I am bidding good-by to the Mayor of the city of Boston, and I do it more in sorrow than anything else. When I am elected to office in Boston, I want people to feel that it is not because the race from which I sprung is to be conciliated, and I do not want to be put one step further in advance on that account. I also demand that, because my name bears an unmistakably Celtic origin, it shall not debar me from any office. Now, sir, the underlying sentiment which prevailed during the whole of the last campaign, and which prevented the reelection of Mr. Prince—and he ought to have been reindorsed—was that this element was growing too large in its proportions in and around City Hall. I have no sympathy with clannishness, whether of race or religion. I have thrown it aside in every position I have occupied, but I have also demanded that those who were associated with me should have the same liberal spirit and idea; and the more intelligent people are the more I demand it, because the more criminal it is in them. Now, sir, I have felt—and I want to speak it here, when I am bidding the Mayor good-by—that the chief cause which contributed to the result of the last election was not the measures passed by the City Council, but this proscriptive feeling which prevailed, not only among a certain class of Republicans, but Democrats also. That was the chief cause. My proof is here, sir: Take this Board of Aldermen; not a measure has been passed here, that has not been honestly and conscientiously voted for by some of the gentlemen around me who have been reelected. It did not debar them from receiving the unanimous nomination of all parties and classes. And yet, sir, that same cause was urged prominently as being a reason why the head of the executive branch should not receive a reelection, when the fact is, he did not deem it expedient to set up his dictum against the wishes of the Common Council and the Board of Aldermen. Can that be the real cause? Can it be? It was the ostensible cause; the other I have mentioned was the real cause. I speak strongly of this matter, because I feel it, and it is better to speak plainly than to be silent about it. It is better it should be brought to the light of day. I speak the sentiment of a certain class in the community, and they feel it keenly. When another election takes place I hope that feeling will be banished. It is not safe to array one class of citizens against another. I have not done it in my speeches; but I speak of it here because I feel that it is my duty. The citizens of foreign birth demand that the accident of their coming from abroad shall not debar them from holding office; that because their surnames are Fitzgerald and O'Brien they shall not be debarred taking part in public affairs, or deemed unworthy of public recognition. That is what they ask and demand. I speak of it because it has a direct bearing upon the defeat of Mr. Prince. I want him to understand that he was defeated, not because he has not carried on the affairs of the City Government as honorably as any man who preceded him, but because of the Know-Nothingism of many Democrats and Republicans of this city. I want him to understand that 23,000 voters of the city of Boston have precisely the same sentiment about the matter that I have, and that he carries with him into private life the respect and confidence of these people, and the Board of Aldermen with whom he has been associated for the last twelve months. In saying that which I do, I well know the criticism to which I expose myself, but from letters which I have received and from private conversations which I have heard, as also from articles in the public press, cunningly and astutely written, whose meaning was apparent to the dullest comprehension, I know I am right. In justice to myself, I may state here that the Mayor has never consulted me about any of his public appointments, nor have I intruded my advice upon him; and I feel satisfied that in what he has done, he has always been actuated by worthy and honorable motives.

The resolution was passed by a unanimous rising vote.

The Chairman transmitted the resolution to the Executive Department by the City Messenger, and his honor soon after appeared, escorted by that officer. As he entered the chamber the members of the Board all rose from their seats.

ADDRESS OF HIS HONOR THE MAYOR.

His Honor took the chair and said—

Gentlemen of the Board of Aldermen—I am greatly obliged to you for the kind expressions of regard contained in the resolution, and beg you to accept thereof my most cordial thanks. As we are at the close of the municipal year and this is the last meeting of the Board, it seems to me proper that, before we separate, I should call your attention to the condition of municipal affairs, and review, for the information of your constituents, some of the more important work of the year.

The city funded debt on the 1st of January, 1877, amounted to.....$45,058,151.58
This debt on the 31st December, 1877, was..... 43,354,444.06
The amount of the sinking funds on the 31st of December, 1877, was..... 15,921,376.44

Showing the net debt to be.....$27,433,067.62
As the water income pays the interest on the water debt we may deduct the amount of this debt from the above balance..... 12,773,273.98

Making the city debt, exclusive of the water debt.....$14,659,793.64

During the year we have authorized the following loans, which have not been negotiated:

For Latin and English High schools..... $310,000
Improved Sewerage..... 3,551,000
Stony Brook Sewerage..... 133,000
Widening Commercial street..... 500,000

$4,494,000

The appropriation for the Latin and High schools is to be met by the sales of certain school-houses not needed, as hereafter stated, so that the amount of new debt will be about $4,184,000.

Retrenchment of Municipal Expenses.

It was expected, when we came into office, that the expenses of the Government would be diminished, and you will remember that I called your early attention to the subject in my inaugural remarks. A joint special committee was appointed to investigate the various departments and report what retrenchment could be made therein without detriment to the public service. They gave to the work a great deal of time and labor. Their report resulted in a reduction of the salaries of city officers of nearly $100,000. The Committee on Appropriations also reported a reduction in the appropriations for the several departments of over $500,000. By these savings and the adoption of the principle of restoring to the treasury all unexpended appropriations, instead of sweeping them into the sinking funds as hitherto, we were enabled to reduce the tax levy of 1877 more than half a million of dollars. I think further retrenchment might be made in our municipal expenses without injury to the interests of the city. The costs of government are greater than they should be. We have too many three-headed commissioners to do our work. A great saving might be made by consolidating some of the departments. By direction of the Council, I endeavored to obtain from the Legislature authority to create and abolish commissions, and to consolidate them as the interests of the city might require, but without success. It would seem that the city should best understand its own wants and necessities, and be empowered to adopt such methods of conducting its business, not inconsistent with public policy, as it might deem best for its interests. I think the application to the Legislature will be renewed, and that it will yet see the justice of granting our request.

Betterment Claims.

There have been pending in the courts, for a long time, suits to recover betterment taxes due the city. During the year the Committee on Streets, on the part of this Board, undertook the settlement of these claims, and, after much negotiation, they succeeded in effecting adjustments by which they recovered $279,947.76. This was done with the approbation of the City Solicitor, and reflects much credit on the skilful management of the committee.

Sewers.

During the past year the great measure of the intercepting sewer, which has been before the citizens and the Government for many years, has received the earnest attention of the City Council. Appreciating the necessity of providing a system of sewerage which shall secure the health and safety of our people, they determined that there should be no further delay in acting on this matter. As soon, therefore, as the engineers made their report on the plans submitted by the scientific commission appointed in 1875, the subject was at once considered, the recommendations of the commissioners adopted, and the work commenced. I trust it will be vigorously prosecuted, so that the salutary results expected from it may be attained as soon as possible. Although this great measure will require a large expenditure of money, the necessity of its adoption fully justifies fies the undertaking. I think I may safely say that our action in this matter is fully indorsed by the citizens. I may add, before passing from this subject, that the debt to be incurred by the sewer will not press so severely upon our taxpayers as might be supposed. It is computed that the work will require about five years for its completion. The moneys appropriated for its cost will not, therefore, be all required at once, but only as the construction progresses. The debt of the city which matures during this period amounts to about $800,000, and will be paid from the Sinking Fund, so that the indebtedness of the city at the completion of the sewer will not be greatly augmented, unless it be increased by large expenditures in the future, by the appropriations for this and the Stony Brook sewer and Commercial-street widening. This result will be gratifying to our citizens, and they will be also glad to know that, through the able management of the committee having charge of the work, the land damages have been settled, and the required lands purchased at much less than the estimates. The cost of such sections of the work as have already been contracted for is also much less than was expected, being seventeen per cent. less than the figures of the engineers. The committee have shown great skill in locating the sewer as much as possible in the public streets, thus lessening the land damages, and, by arranging so as to have several routes from which to make a selection, they have had great advantage in negotiating for rights of way through private grounds. More than 9000 feet of such way—nearly three-fourths of the whole—have been secured without cost. All this has required a vast deal of time, and reflects much credit upon the committee. If we should have the same success in the rest of the work, and it shall be found, in an age which has witnessed the construction of the Hoosac Tunnel and the Danvers Hospital, that an enterprise to cost millions has been completed for less than the original estimates, with no contractors besieging the city treasury with long bills of extras, this committee and their successors in office will require no monument to perpetuate their fame and memory.

Commercial-street Widening.

The widening of Commercial street is another important measure which has occupied your attention. I need not refer to the advantages of this improvement to our mercantile interests. They are generally known and recognized. The question was not whether the widening should be done, but whether it should be done now. The great expense of the measure created differences of opinion as to present action therein, but the wise arrangement by which all cost beyond the amount appropriated for the purpose should be borne by abutters and others benefitted by the improvement, will justify, I think, your action in the matter, and satisfy generally our citizens. The subject demanded, and has received your careful attention, and has occupied a great deal of your time.

Parks.

You have been called to consider the subject of parks. Our citizens have felt for some years that Boston should possess a park for the accommodation of its increasing population. It is generally conceded that there should be in vicinity of all large cities open spaces of territory, where those who are compelled to live in crowded streets and alleys can resort for pure air and recreation. Parks are not wanted merely because they adorn and make cities attractive. The chief argument in their favor is that they conduce to the health and comfort of the people. The sanitary outweighs the æsthetic argument. The desire of our citizens for a park first found public expression in 1869, when a large number of our heavy taxpayers petitioned the City Government to take initiatory action for its accomplishment. The subject soon commanded general attention, and much enthusiasm was excited in its behalf. It is worthy of note that the warmest friends of the park scheme were not those most benefitted by it—the citizens who were without the means and opportunity to visit the country in the hot summer months. The wealthy taxpayers—those who would be required to pay the cost of parks—were the most earnest advocates for the measure. The petitioners represented nearly $10,000,000 of taxable property. They felt that parks were desirable not only for sanitary benefits, but because they would adorn the city, make it attractive to strangers, and advance its commercial importance and prosperity. This park feeling led to the appointment of a Board of Park Commissioners, who devised a series of parks, located in different sections of the city, connected by park roads, thus giving park accommodations to all our citizens. This scheme has been generally approved, and it is apparent that its adoption, with some modifications, would have received the approbation of all classes, if the great depression in business, which occurred soon after the report of the commissioners, had not alarmed our citizens, and led them to believe that it would be best to defer action in the premises until our industries should revive. There were, however, those whose opinions were entitled to respect, who thought that the present time of depressed prices and unemployed labor was the best time for the commencement of the enterprise. I drew your attention to the subject in my inaugural remarks, and presented both sides of the argument. I also advised you of the necessity of immediate action for the improvement of the sanitary condition of the Back Bay territory. In so doing I felt that the plan of the commissioners, in respect to the Back Bay flats, or some portion of it, would be adopted. The subject has been carefully considered by the City Council in all its relations, and it is evident that, while most of them favored some portions of the park scheme, they did not deem it prudent or judicious to increase at this time the public debt by the expenditure which its adoption would require. It was evident from the debates on the report of the Committee on Parks, who recommended the immediate inception of the scheme, that its opponents did not object to parks per se, but because they thought it unwise to commence the work at this time. Your conclusions in the matter reflected, without doubt, the opinions of your constituents. The action of the Council in the purchase of the flats on the Back Bay for the improvement of the sanitary condition of that section of the city—indeed, I might say of the whole city, since every portion of it has felt the influence of the Back Bay sewer nuisance, was most wise, and I feel assured it receives the full approbation of our citizens. You have purchased 106 acres of land at half its real value, even in these times of depressed prices. This acquisition will enable us to abate a nuisance which was depressing the value of a vast amount of taxable property and fast making Boston a most unhealthy city. When the land shall be filled and improved, it will constitute a park, which, with the Common, the Public Garden and the squares of Commonwealth avenue, will contain a sufficient area for the use and enjoyment of such of our citizens who live in that part of the city known as the city proper, for a long time. I trust that your successors in office will recognize the wisdom of improving at once this territory. The sewers required to conduct the waters of Muddy River and Stony Brook should be built as soon as possible, in compliance with the recommendation of the Park Commissioners in their sixth report. The act of the Legislature passed in 1872 empowers the city to unite with the town of Brookline and divert the waters of Muddy River so as to carry them in a more direct line to Charles River. The plan, which accompanies the commissioners' report, proposes to make such diversion at the point where the river touches Brookline avenue, but I hope it will be found more judicious to tap these waters at or near Longwood station, on the Brookline Railroad, so that the lands between this road and Brookline avenue may be drained and made valuable for building sites. The work of filling the land purchased should also be commenced at once. We have annually about 150,000 loads of ashes and street sweepings, for which a dumping ground is needed. Here we have one. I am glad that, by your order of Monday, you have directed this dirt to be placed there. If a small annual appropriation were made for Back Bay improvements, we should not only get the flats soon covered, so as to be no longer offensive, but ready for laying out and planting, since it is probable that a large portion of this area will be formed into a lake, to be supplied from the waters of Charles River. It would be the truest economy to make the park as soon as possible, for it has been demonstrated, by the experience of other cities, that parks have so greatly raised the value of surrounding property as to repay their cost, in a short time, by the revenue derived from increased taxation. In the neighborhood of this park the houses of our wealthy citizens will be found. As soon as it is filled and made attractive, all sanitary apprehensions will dissipate, building will commence at once, and costly structures, like those which make Beacon street and Commonwealth avenue the finest streets of any city in this country, will be erected, which will annually yield, like those in other portions of the Back Bay, hundreds of thousands of dollars of taxes to the treasury. I am aware that the plan of making work to relieve the wants of unemployed laborers is not generally approved, but there are so many of them at this time who, suffering for the necessaries of life, are willing to work at low wages, that I think our taxpayers would regard their employment, during the winter, in filling the park, as a measure not only of economy, but humanity.

Ferries.

You have been called to consider and act upon the subject of free ferries. This matter has been before the Government for many years. By the provisions of the act of 1869 the city was authorized to purchase the property of the East Boston Ferry Company, and, after its purchase, to free or levy tolls upon them as it saw fit. The purchase was made and rates of ferrage established. Soon, however, the residents of East Boston agitated the question of relieving the tolls and making the ferries free. In the newspapers at public meetings, and in various ways the matter was discussed, under the expectation of creating a public sentiment which should demand the accomplishment of the desired object. It was complained that the tolls were a serious charge upon the prosperity of East Boston; that its business suffered; that commerce was driven from its wharves, notwithstanding their ample accommodations and deep water, and that real estate was depressed. Application was finally made to the City Government for relief, and in 1871 the Board of Aldermen, then comprising some of our ablest business men, by unanimous vote passed an order establishing free ferries, but it failed to receive the confirmation of the Common Council by a single vote. This defeat of a measure of so much interest to the citizens of that section did not discourage them. The matter was kept constantly before the people, and every means adopted to create for it friends. Early in the present year it was brought again to the attention of the City Council by a petition signed by nearly 8000 citizens—embracing the leading men of the community—the prominent and representative members of every vocation and profession. His Excellency the Governor signed it, as did twenty bank presidents, and hundreds of merchants, importers, traders, jobbers, bankers, manufacturers, mechanics, express companies, lawyers and business men of every kind and class. The petitioners represented nearly $100,000,000 of taxable property. The newspapers, for the most part, either favored the project or made no pronounced objection against it. The petition was referred to the Joint Standing Committee on East Boston Ferries, comprising five members of the City Council and three Aldermen, who gave the subject careful and exhaustive consideration. The facts in the case would be imperfectly stated if it was not observed that the committee gave public notice of their hearings on the petition by advertisement in the newspapers, and requested all those who objected to the prayer of the petitioners to appear and be heard. Notwithstanding adjournment after adjournment was had to enable remonstrants to appear, none appeared at any meeting, either in person or by proxy. It is a surprising fact, in view of subsequent occurrences, that not even a remonstrance in writing was made during all the time the matter was before the City Council. The committee, by a unanimous report, setting forth with great and convincing force the merits of the measure, recommended the abolition of the tolls. No opposition to the report was made in this Board. It received their full approval, and the order recommended therein was passed by unanimous vote. In the Common Council the measure received some opposition, which led to its discussion. It seems strange that, at this stage of the proceeding, none of the citizens who afterwards remonstrated against the order did not appear and encourage its opponents in the Council. It seems strange that the papers which claim to reflect public opinion did not sound the alarm and admonish the City Government of the wrong that was being perpetrated. But, as has been observed, no remonstrants were at this time heard; no warning came from the press. The order was passed by a large vote. It needed only the approving signature of the Mayor—as was supposed by its friends—to become a law. Whilst considering the question of approval, for the first time since the matter came before the Government, remonstrants appeared. I suspended action in the premises until I could hear their reasons of objection, and examine the questions of law which had been raised touching the power of the city to pass the order. It is proper to state that petitions requesting me to interpose my veto were signed by large numbers of our best and well-known citizens, some of whom had previously favored the measure. Other petitions in favor of freeing the ferries were also filed, representing, with those previously made, more than 15,000 signers. In view of the action of the citizens upon the subject of the free ferries, since their purchase, as shown in their apparent approval of the doings of the City Council in 1871—in their refusal to interpose objection when the petition was first made to the present Council, when it came before the committee, when report thereon was made here, when the order was passed here, when the matter went to the other branch of the Council, and as shown by the large number of tax-paying citizens who indorsed the petition—I felt that objection on my part would be improper, as indicating that I felt more confidence in the correctness of my own opinion than in those of many thousands of our most respected and intelligent citizens. Not viewing the question as one of principle, but of policy and expediency merely, I thought that the will of the people so emphatically and unmistakably expressed should be obeyed. The point of law was raised whether the city had power, under the act of 1869, to pass the order. The City Solicitor was of opinion that no such power existed. My construction of the act led me to a different conclusion; but I thought if the order were approved by me, and the court should afterwards find that the City Council had exceeded their powers, the wrong could be easily corrected. Under the circumstances, I gave the measure my approval. As you are aware, the opponents of free ferries appealed to the judges; and they have held that the doings of the city in the premises were illegal and void. It must be presumed that this decision is correct, and it is a matter of congratulation that the judgment of the Supreme Court has put at rest this vexatious and disturbing question. Your successors are not again to have this subject of discord before them. Candor compels me to admit, that notwithstanding the efforts which have been made to make the City Government believe that our citizens desire the ferries to be free, the unmistakable expression of the opinion of the voters and taxpayers of Boston, shown in the recent municipal election, is conclusive evidence to the contrary. It may be further observed that the votes of the citizens of East Boston might justify the inference that their interest in this measure has been greatly exaggerated or largely modified, and that they are satisfied it is unreasonable to ask the taxpayers of other portions of the city to contribute to the cost of free ferries for the benefit of their own section. If I am right in my conclusions that the decision of the court will relieve henceforth the City Government from further consideration of this subject, my refusal to veto the measure will prove a blessing in disguise, although I am not entitled to claim any merit for my action.

High Schools.

You have made appropriation for the building of schoolhouses for the accommodation of the Latin and High schools on the lot of land on Warren avenue, purchased for the purpose in 1872. These schoolhouses have been greatly needed for a long time, but the large sum required to build them led to the postponement of the work. We found that the interests of these schools would not permit longer delay, and the construction of the building has been commenced. It is a cause of congratulation that their cost, which will be about $450,000, will not increase the tax levy, nor permanently augment the city debt, for it is provided in the order for the erection of these schoolhouses, that the proceeds of the sales of the Bedford-street, South-street, Harrison-avenue and Chardon-street school lots, which will not be needed, are to be appropriated to the payment of the loans required for the work.

License Commissioners.

It is gratifying to know that the license laws have been enforced to the entire satisfaction, as I believe, of most of our citizens. As is well known, the enforcement of the laws regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors has, for obvious reasons, been most difficult. The License Commissioners of previous years had only partial success in the discharge of their onerous duties, but the skilful management and vigorous action of the present board have been productive of the happiest results. They have succeeded in arresting almost completely the sale of intoxicating drink on the Sabbath, and prevented to a very large extent unlicensed sales on other days. Their report will show that by their wise management they have reduced the expenses of the commission more than one-third, and increased the revenue from licenses above that of last year more than $60,000.

Water.

The work of bringing water from Sudbury River, although it has been vigorously prosecuted, will require another year for its completion. The conduit is practically completed, and can be used in case of need for filling Lake Cochituate, or for a direct supply to the city, should accident happen to the old conduit. The storage basins at Framingham are well advanced. A large part of the work of the Mystic Valley sewer has been completed. The net cost of the water works to Jan. 1, 1878, is $16,356,282.04. The amount of the bonded water debt on the 31st of December, 1877, was $12,773,273.98. The total receipts for water rents during 1877 was $1,099,625.27. After paying current expenses and the interest on the debt, including interest on the difference between the bonded debt and the net cost of the water works, as required by law, there was about $54,131 which were paid into the sinking fund for the extinguishment of the debt. It is a most gratifying fact that our water income more than pays the interest on our water debt.

Chelsea Bridge.

An attempt was made by the city of Chelsea to obtain from the Legislature of last year an act requiring the city of Boston to build and maintain more than its just proportion of Chelsea Bridge at the cost of more than $70,000. At the same time the savings banks of the State combined to obtain a reduction of the taxes assessed upon their assets, and exemption also from all tax on the United States bonds held by them on deposit. This would have caused an annual loss to the city of $260,000 for its share of the former and $50,000 for its share of the latter. I protested against this injustice, and we succeeded, through the earnest and vigorous efforts of the Committee on Legislative Matters, in defeating all these measures. I trust that we have made our rights in the premises so apparent that no new attempts will hereafter be made to disturb them.

Public Institutions.

During the year the female poor have been removed from Deer Island to Austin Farm, and the neglected children to the Marcella-street Home, thus separating the unfortunate poor from the vicious. The propriety of this measure has long been recognized by the Directors of Public Institutions, and we may rejoice that it has been at last accomplished. Deer Island is now occupied by the houses of Industry and Reformation. During the year I have made many visits to these institutions, and have observed with great satisfaction and pleasure the excellent system of management under the able Board of Directors. In my judgment, no department of the Government is better conducted. The organizing capacity and administrative ability of the President of the board have inaugurated many important improvements which will be productive of most salutary results, and enable these reformatory institutions to accomplish to a gratifying extent the objects for which they were established. The proposal to teach the children of the Reform School trades, so that they may be able, when discharged from the island, to obtain honest means of support, is worthy of all commendation, and alike indicates the benevolence and wisdom of the directors. The formation of a military corps among the boys is further evidence of good management. Military exercises have had a wholesome influence upon the discipline and spirits of the boys, caused a marked improvement in their conduct, and enabled, without doubt, the officers of the institution to govern them with greater ease and facility. A considerable part of the printing and other work of the city might be done at the island, if prejudice does not impede the efforts of the directors, so that in time the institution might become, to a large extent, self-supporting. I trust your successors will cooperate in the accomplishment of a result so desirable.

Gas.

There has been for a long time a growing opinion in the public mind that we pay more for the gas actually consumed by the city than we should. I have no doubt that there is reason for this belief. The annual expenses of the Lamp Department are nearly $500,000. I think a great saving could be made here, and early in the year gave my attention to the subject. The average annual cost to the city of every gas lamp within its limits is over $50, and that of each one within the city proper is over $31. We have nearly 10,000 lamps. I find that responsible parties were willing to lay the pipes and furnish the same amount of gas, with equal illuminating power, at $25 per lamp, and, probably, much less. The cost to the city of New York is only $19.50 per lamp. A great saving might also be made by the adoption of the system of instantaneously lighting and extinguishing the gas which has been successfully introduced in Providence. The authorities of that city exhibited to me the operation of the system, and satisfied me of its practicability. It was my hope that we might have inaugurated reforms and changes during the year which would have largely diminished the costs of this department, but circumstances beyond my power to control have prevented a consummation so devoutly to be wished. I trust the needed reforms are only delayed, and that the agitation of the subject will result in their future accomplishment.

Industrial Schools.

I had hoped also that the City Council would have recognized the wisdom of establishing industrial or developing schools, where pupils could be thoroughly taught, in the shortest possible time, the trade or art which they purpose to pursue for a living. We teach in our common school everything else except this. The establishment of industrial schools would enable our youth to ascertain the natural taste and inclination of their minds as to mechanical pursuits, and thus prepare themselves to begin life with the practical knowledge which would enable them to follow the vocation best fitted for them, instead of following the old and slow method of the apprentice system. The report of the committee charged with the consideration of this subject, with the order recommending the establishment of one of these schools, did not meet the approbation of this Board; but I cannot but feel that the wisdom of the measure will soon be appreciated; that it has been postponed merely and not abandoned. Boston has always led the van in the cause of educational progress, and I trust she will not be found apathetic in this important matter.

Stony Brook, Muddy River and Roxbury Canal.

These nuisances have long been the subject of complaint. The attention of the City Government has been repeatedly called to them. The Board of Health has again and again demanded their abatement. The sewage which has passed through these conduits has greatly affected the comfort and health of our citizens, and various schemes have been proposed for relief. Hitherto nothing has been accomplished. The recent action of the Council, in the passage of the order recommended by the Joint Special Committee on the Improvement of Stony Brook, will effect what is necessary to remedy the mischief from this source. The filling up of the Back Bay flats purchased by the city, and the construction of the sewer, as suggested by the Park Commissioners, will remedy the Muddy River nuisance. I regret that this sanitary work was not completed by filling the Roxbury Canal. This project has received a great deal of attention from the Council during the year, and it is evident that they would have adopted the proper measures of remedy, if there had been time to examine the questions of law which have arisen, as to the rights of the city in the premises. The subject has been referred to the next City Government, and will, without doubt, receive its early attention and action. I congratulate the citizens that the offensive odors and exhalations from these polluted waters are soon to be relieved.

Columbus-avenue Pavement.

The city has been experimenting for years to find the kind of pavement for our streets which shall best answer all requirements. We have had wood, iron, cobble stones, the Belgian and macadamized pavement. My attention was early drawn to the asphalt pavement as possessing, upon the whole, more of the desired advantages than any other. I visited New York and Washington with some of the Aldermen to examine the specimens to be found there of this kind of pavement. The freedom of the asphalt concrete from noise and dust, its imperviousness to water and frost, and its apparent durability, are great recommendations. I drew the attention of the Council to it, and advised its trial. You have laid it down in Columbus avenue. I am told that it gives much satisfaction to those who live in that vicinity, and, as the experienced and able Superintendent of Streets inclines to the belief (if I am not misinformed) that this pavement is likely to prove superior, in the respects I have mentioned, to all others, I feel confident that we have solved the problem which has hitherto occupied so much time and been the subject of so much experiment. The asphalt pavement, if properly laid, will be found the best for the level streets and avenues of the Back Bay territory, although the Belgiau blocks may perhaps be better for the commercial streets which are used by heavily loaded wagons and drays. I may say in this connection that, during the year, we have macadamized and put in order for travel Chester park to Beacon street, Commonwealth avenue to Chester park, and authorized the completion of Huntington avenue.

Smallpox Hospital.

During the year a site for the smallpox hospital has been purchased and the hospital built. This is a matter of congratulation. Great difficulty has hitherto been experienced in obtaining a lot of land for this purpose. For obvious reasons objection was everywhere made to the neighborhood of this institution. After much inquiry we found a location to which no opposition was made. The hospital is a model building of its kind, and will accommodate as many patients as will be likely to seek admission to it, even should the disease become epidemic.

Horse Railroads.

You have given a good deal of time to the horse-railroad companies. They have filed an exceptionally large number of petitions for locations, and the hearings thereon have been protracted. In some cases where there have been conflicting applications by different roads much time and thought have been required for their adjustment. In matters where the public have rights, individuals rights, and railroad corporations rights, the exercise of the powers delegated to the Board of Aldermen to locate street railways is oftentimes most embarrassing and difficult. All will not be satisfied, whatever is done; but I think you can justly feel that in most of the cases where you have been required to adjudicate these questions your conclusions have been, upon the whole, satisfactory and correct.

Army and Navy Monument.

The year has witnessed the completion of the monument erected in memory of the men of the army and navy who died in the war for the Union. The event was appropriately celebrated. It drew to the city large numbers of distinguished strangers from all parts of the country, who have expressed themselves much gratified by the hospitality received from our citizens. Occasions like those of the Seventeenth of June, 1875, and Sept. 17, 1877, are of infinite value in the restoration of that amity and good will between the different sections of the country, without which there can be no solid or lasting union. Viewed in these relations, I think our taxpayers will not regard the cost of the celebration as improper or excessive. It will appear from the sketch I have given that the duties of the City Council during the year have been arduous. I am told by those familiar with the city business, that we have been called to perform very much more work in amount and importance, than any previous Administration. I believe it has been well done, and that the City Government of 1877 can review its record with satisfaction and pride. In my inaugural address I took occasion to say "that it was our duty to exercise the powers delegated to us for the welfare and prosperity of all the citizens, without regard to party differences or party interests." I now place upon the record the assertion that none of the many important measures upon which you have been called to act have been considered otherwise than upon their true merits. There does not appear in any of your discussions and votes the slightest evidence that you have been actuated by partisan or improper motives, and it would be impossible to ascertain from anything said or done here what were the politics of the Board. I believe, and I have no doubt your constituents believe, that all your official acts have been honestly performed, and with the sole design of promoting the best interests of the city. It is true that during the canvass preceding the late municipal election grave complaints were made against the Administration for shortcomings and malfeasance; but, if the press be a just exponent of public opinion, no dissatisfaction was felt by the citizens with you, for none of the measures to which I have alluded, and on which you have acted, are assailed or opposed. It may, therefore, be fairly inferred that your official conduct is approved. The complaints were against me alone. When the passions and animosities excited by the late contest shall have subsided, I trust my actions will be fairly examined, and without prejudice. If, then, the verdict be against me, I shall find such consolation as I can in the consciousness of good intentions. My successor may bring to the discharge of his official duties more ability than I possess, but he will not be actuated by a greater solicitude for the interests of the city nor a higher regard for its welfare and honor. I invoke for him a larger charity and a fairer trial at the bar of public opinion than have been accorded to me. I cannot conclude without expressing my great obligations to that able and accomplished officer, the City Clerk, for the valuable aid he has rendered me, and to the efficient City Messenger and his courteous assistants for their many kind attentions. My thanks are also due for the assistance I have received in the discharge of my duties from the heads of the several departments and other officers, and especially from the Chief of Police. And now the parting word must be said. It was the just observation of Dr. Johnson that we never do anything which we have been accustomed to do, with the consciousness that we are doing it for the last time, without a certain feeling of sadness. I confess to something of this sentiment. When we separate today, we shall never again meet in the same official relations. For the last time we occupy together these seats. I have noticed with pleasure the uniform courtesy and considerate regard for the rights of each other which you have observed at all your meetings. I know of nothing upon the record of a personal character which any of you could wish to obliterate. May the same kindly feelings long continue after we have gone hence, and prosperity and happiness attend you all.

THANKS TO THE CHAIRMAN.

Alderman Fitzgerald offered the following:

Resolved, That the thanks of this Board are due to John T. Clark, Esq., the Chairman, for his impartiality and courtesy while presiding at its meetings, and for the valuable aid and assistance which he has at all times rendered to his associates in the committee room and at the public meetings of the Board.

Alderman Fitzgerald—Perhaps it would be in place for me to say a few words on this resolve. I perhaps more than any other member of this Board have come in contact with the Alderman opposite in our public debates. He and I have differed more with each other in our arguments than perhaps any other members of this Board. The resolution which I have offered represents the feelings which I have towards him now that we are about to part and not to meet again perhaps in an official capacity such as we occupy today. I will say this, and all the members of the Board will bear me out in it, that no matter how warmly he may debate questions with members of this Board, no matter how warmly he and other members of this Board may apparently use words against each other, whatever has been said, so far as he is concerned, has been to the question and not to the individual who opposed him; and whatever he has said has been forgotten in the social relations that should exist between the members of this Board. That one peculiarity which I have noticed in him, is a rare virtue in public men. They sometimes cannot distinguish between your position to themselves personally, and your position to the measures they advocate. He is a different kind of a man from that. There is another quality that I want to bear testimony to here. He has differed from me on many questions; but I want to say that he has presented his views fearlessly. No member of this Board has come forward to share his responsibility for his acts. I have known him before I came into this Board, for I was associated with him on an important committee while I was a member of the other branch; and in view of what has lately taken place, I want to bear cheerful tribute to his manliness of character. When people go elsewhere and see the members of the Boards of Aldermen of other cities, they will come back and find that Alderman John T. Clark is something more than the mere individual whom you see occupying such positions elsewhere; and the city of Boston will be fortunate if she can have men of his stamp and kind, who not only are not afraid to speak their minds upon public questions, but are not afraid of the consequences to themselves. I want to bear this tribute to him, now that I am leaving this Board of Aldermen, and he is leaving it; for I feel that the resolve that I have offered is but the reflection of the sentiments of every member of this Board.

The resolve was passed by a unanimous rising vote.

ADDRESS OF THE CHAIRMAN.

Alderman Clark took the chair and said—

Gentlemen of the Board of Aldermen—For the sentiments expressed in the resolution which you have been pleased to adopt, I tender my sincere and heartfelt thanks. I assure you that I fully appreciate the kindly sentiments which prompt the act. It has been my privilege to serve the city as an Alderman for six successive years, during which time I have participated in the consideration of some of the most important questions which have been brought before any City Council since Boston became a city. Questions which have affected the future growth and prosperity of the city, as well as the safety and comfort of the inhabitants, have been acted upon. Many of them were vehemently opposed in the outset, and were only carried by strenuous efforts; most of them have already vindicated themselves, while some, which have been delayed year after year, until the present, bid fair to shortly prove their utility. I came into the Board a believer in the future of Boston, and I have always been a consistent advocate of every work which would tend to augment the commercial importance of the city; and, when I review the transactions of the past six years, I can almost trace an improvement in our business relations coextensive with our schemes of public improvement. I therefore leave this Board more than ever convinced that every dollar judiciously expended in the improvement and ornamentation of the city is a wise investment in a business point of view, if nothing else is taken into consideration. The prosperity of Boston must depend upon its commerce and manufactures, and our facilities in these respects are unlimitable. With our magnificent harbor, free from ice the year round, with depth of water sufficient to float the largest vessels; with our present and anticipated connections with the great grain depots of the West, and cotton fields of the South, and our admirable facilities for handling all kinds of merchandise, there is no reason why Boston should not be the greatest commercial city of the Atlantic coast. And I therefore believe that, as the individual prosperity of every citizen depends upon the prosperity of the city, it is the duty of the City Council, as conservators of the public welfare, to improve our business facilities by every means in its power. One of the essentials of a commercial city are good thoroughfares. In this respect much has been done during the past six years. Having served as chairman of the Committee on Laying Out and Widening Streets during that period, I am familiar with the work which has been done. In 1872 the work of levelling Fort Hill had just been finished; since then streets have been laid out and built, and the territory covered with handsome business structures. The great fire of 1872 afforded an excellent opportunity for improving the streets in one of the principal business parts of the city. To you who were familiar with that part of the city before the fire it is needless to point out what has been done in this respect. I think that all will admit the improvement. There is now hardly a vacant lot remaining on what was the burnt district. The damages on account of laying out and widening streets since 1872 amounts to $9,107,611.97, and are settled within a few thousand dollars. The betterments assessed on the same account amount to $1,965,692.34, and five-sixths of the amount has been paid. Within six years great improvements have been made on the Back Bay territory; West Chester park, Commonwealth avenue, and Huntington avenue to West Chester park have been completed and opened to public travel. The parks on Commonwealth avenue have been completed from Clarendon street to West Chester park. All who remember this part of the city as a valueless marsh, or, later, an unsightly gravel heap, cannot but feel grateful for the wise foresight which planned and directed the improvement. One of the most important functions of the City Council is the preservation of the public health, not only on account of the welfare of the permanent residents of the city, but that it may be made safe and inviting to those who visit us from abroad. Much has been done within six years to improve the sanitary condition of the city. The Board of Health was established in 1872, immediately after the smallpox excitement. The Board has been indefatigable in searching out and eradicating sources of disease, and no epidemic of disease has occurred since its establishment. In such matters, of course, absolute safety cannot be assured, but, as long as we have a Board as active and vigilant as the present one watching over our interests, we can feel tolerably secure. By providing for the construction of the improved system of sewerage the present Board of Aldermen have shown how fully they appreciate the importance of improving the sanitary condition of the city. Another indispensable necessity for a healthful city is an ample supply of pure water. This has been provided for by the additional supply from Sudbury River. The city had entirely outgrown the facilities which were ample when the Cochituate water was first introduced. There was scarcely enough to supply the necessary quantity for household purposes, and the wants of manufacturers could not be considered. The belief that Boston had reached its maximum of growth,—a belief that has obstructed many important public improvements,—and that, therefore, it would be unwise to incur the expense of an additional supply, prevented anything being done until the great fire of 1872 proved, with startling truth, the inadequacy of the existing works and the necessity of increasing the supply. The construction of the new works led the way to the establishment of the present Water Board, whose excellent management of the department is well known to all. The establishment of the Board of Fire Commissioners was also a result of the fire of 1872, and I believe that it is conceded that there is no better fire department in the world than ours. It has been peculiarly gratifying to me to witness the gradual expansion of the territorial limits of the city, as it indicated, in a degree, the expansion of our business interests; for, as district after district was given up to the demands of trade, the population was driven into the suburbs until they became entirely a part of Boston in all but name. It was perfectly natural that the residents of the adjoining towns should desire a voice in the government of the city with whose business interests they were identified; hence annexation was an assured fact. Since I have been an Alderman, Charlestown, containing 23,447,220 square feet of territory, West Roxbury, containing 6627½ acres of territory, and Brighton, containing 2370 acres of territory, have been annexed. At the time of annexation the valuation of the annexed territory was $71,639,251. I have hastily touched upon some of the most important subjects which have been acted upon since my connection with the City Government. Most of them met with considerable opposition; all of them have, I believe, proved their necessity. It will be so with the legislation of this Board. Take, for instance, the widening of Commercial street, which is simply the continuation of the Atlantic avenue improvement. When completed it will be a matter of wonder that it was delayed so long. I remember how strenuously the extension of Washington street was opposed; who is there now who would wish to restore it to its original condition? Within a week I have learned that arrangements have been made by which Battery and Commercial wharves will be the deep-water terminus of the Hoosac Tunnel lines of railroad. The past year has been essentially one of action. You have been called upon to consider many questions of great importance to the municipality. Schemes of public improvement which have lain dormant for years, or the execution of which has been postponed year after year by preceding City Governments, have received your careful consideration. Projects which have hitherto appeared to be impracticable have, in the light of your practical knowledge, become possibilities. Future years will prove the wisdom and far-sightedness of your legislation. All questions of public improvement have been considered by you in the broadest and most liberal spirit. The sanitary welfare of the city has received your special attention. To you will belong the credit of inaugurating the system of public parks, which will, undoubtedly, in the future be carried out to the full extent recommended by the Park Commissioners. Boston cannot afford to neglect the present opportunities for securing breathing places for its inhabitants. The construction of the improved system of sewerage has been commenced under your auspices, and, although the subject had been thoroughly discussed from all points of view, before your accession to office, it received your careful consideration before the system was finally adopted. The improvement of Stony Brook and Roxbury Canal was greatly demanded, not only as measures of relief to those immediately affected by the unsanitary condition of the streams, but also for the protection of the public health. Both measures received your approval. The educational interests of the community have not suffered in your hands. In addition to providing liberally for the maintenance of our public schools, you have made appropriations for erecting a new High and Latin schoolhouse, estimated to cost $350,000; a grammar schoolhouse at Washington Village, estimated to cost between $70,000 and $80,000; and a primary schoolhouse on Western street, which will cost $40,000. The new high-school building, when completed, will supply a much-needed want, and will be a great addition to the architectural appearance of the city. During the year two grammar schoolhouses have been completed, at a cost of $90,000. Dover-street Bridge was completed and opened for public travel early in the year. The total cost of rebuilding this bridge was $88,744.16. Chelsea Bridge and Neponset Bridge have been entirely rebuilt during the year, at a cost of about $148,000. Your action upon the question of free ferries was an act of justice to the residents of Boston, as well as a proof of your desire to remove a burden from the commercial interests of the city. The tolls are a direct tax upon our foreign commerce, and restrict the full development of the unequalled commercial facilities of this city. I believe that at no distant day the people will awake to the importance of the subject, and that suitable legislation will remove this restrictive tax, for upon the development and encouragement of our foreign commerce depends, in a great measure, the future prosperity of the city. The importance of this subject will be understood when it is known that twenty-one of the largest ocean steamers arrived and sailed from this port in the month of December. Since I have had the honor of a seat at this Board, it has been supposed that this port could not supply sufficient business for a line of steamers to run once in two weeks to and from Europe. One of the most interesting events of the year was the dedication of the Army and Navy Monument. The completion of this tribute to our citizen soldiers was made the occasion of a demonstration which will long be remembered in the annals of the city. The committee to whom we are indebted for the success of the occasion are entitled to great credit for the manner in which they performed their arduous duties. There have been material differences of opinion in regard to many of the questions which have come before this Board. The debates upon many subjects have been earnest and animated, and no question has escaped a careful scrutiny into its merits. I believe that, in passing upon the various matters which have come before us, the action of each member has been regulated by the purest motives and the most sincere desire to do what was best for the community of which we form a part; and I believe that, when judged by its results, the legislation of this Board will redound to its honor and credit. I believe that I speak the sentiments of every member of the Board when I testify to the faithfulness and efficiency of our excellent City Clerk, our attentive and courteous City Messenger, and the several heads of departments. For myself, after having been brought into almost daily contact with these gentlemen for six years, I cannot find words strong enough to express my esteem for them as men, and my appreciation of their valuable services, and I desire thus publicly to thank them all for the uniform courtesy which I have ever experienced from them. The city of Boston may congratulate itself upon having in its service gentlemen of such sterling worth and integrity. And in this connection I desire to say that since my connection with the City Government I have never seen any indications of an attempt either on the part of the members of City Council or the officers of the city, to use their offices for their personal advantages. I have seen no vestiges of the "rings" which have disgraced other cities, and, notwithstanding the imputations of those who, through ignorance, if not from worse motives, measure weakness by opportunity, I believe we have, and have had, a thoroughly honest and upright administration of our municipal affairs. And, gentlemen, I trust this state of things will always continue. The fair fame of Boston came to us as a priceless heritage from our predecessors. May it ever be preserved untarnished by our successors. Gentlemen, we meet for the last time as members of the Board of Aldermen for 1877. The experiences of the year have afforded us abundant opportunities for learning each other's worth. I trust that we part with sentiments of profound respect and esteem for one another, and that we shall carry with us into private life pleasant memories of our experience here.

Alderman O'Brien offered an order—That the address of his Honor the Mayor and of the Chairman of this Board, together with the final proceedings of this meeting, be printed for the use of the City Government. Read twice and passed.

Adjourned sine die on motion of Alderman Viles.
